Reconsider Today, New Deal to Ask

6 to 7 Billions Would Be Needed, Senate Committee Told.

By Robert C. Albright.

A serious body blow was dealt the President's works and relief bill yesterday, when the Senate Appropriations Committee voted, 12 to 8, to pay at least the prevailing wage scale on new Federal aid projects.

The action came as a surprise even to supporters of the change, and brought an Administration-sponsored move to reconsider the vote today. The amendment calls for payment of "not less than the prevailing rates of wages," in lieu of the $50 monthly compensation proposed by the President.

Treasury experts told the committee the amendment would "defeat the very purpose of the bill itself," and cost $6,000,000,000 or $7,000,000,000, instead of the $4,880,000,000 asked by the President. The $50 monthly rate, it was urged, would encourage work-relief beneficiaries to return to private employment.

Three Other Amendments.

Proponents of the amendment, headed by Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, retorted that anything less than the prevailing level would tear down the general wage scale.

The motion to reconsider was demanded on the ground that Senators voted "under a misapprehension." The "misapprehension" seemed to be a general feeling that the McCarran proposal would be beaten. Instead, seven Democrats lined up with five Republicans for the amendment.

Three other significant amendments were adopted in rapid order, One, by Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, chairman of the committee, provided that all work requiring 10 per cent skilled labor be performed by contract and awarded to the lowest bidder. Another, by McCarran, required that all possible use be made of the "facilities of private enterprise." Another gave the Administration power to acquire real estate by purchase or eminent domain.

Senator James F. Brynes, of South Carolina, who has been working closely with the Administration on the bill, made a hurried call at the White House after adoption of the prevailing wage amendment, and afterward held aloof from reporters. Legislative representatives of the American Federation of Labor, which unqualifiedly backed McCarran, were jubilant.

The adverse vote suffered on the labor provision by the President's forces followed a close call Wednesday on the $4,880,000,000 appropriation, when a tie vote threatened to lop $2,000,000,000 of works funds off the bill.

Wait Tydings, McKellar.

Whether the latter maneuver is renewed today will depend upon leanings of Senators Tydings, of Maryland, and McKellar, of Tennessee, returning from the Philippines. Both wired the committee not to report the bill until they get back today. If reconsideration isn't forced in committee, another effort will be made on the Senate floor next week, either by Senator Adams (Democrat), Colorado, or Senator Glass.

McCarran, heavy-browed, liberal-minded center of yesterday's wage level upset, may precipitate another committee controversy today when he offers an amendment to force Senate confirmation not only of Federal administrators of the new measure, but of State administrators as well. Last night he received promise of strong support in the House if the amendment is adopted.

Of salary interest to Federal workers was a letter from the President to the National Civil Service Reform League, promising an amendment, sponsored by himself, to keep the new administrative set-up under the Civil Service Commission. Although the committee already has amended the bill to require that Federal salaries come under the classification act, the measure now empowers the President to make appointments without regard to Civil Service.

Steiwer Plan Omitted.

When Glass offered his amendment to require that work-relief projects be negotiated on a contract basis, Senator Steiwer (Republican), Oregon, sought to change it so contractors would give preference to "competent persons" on the relief rolls. The Glass amendment was laid aside for the McCarran prevailing wage vote. When the Virginian's proposal later was agreed to, it was without the Steiwer amendment, but the Oregon Senator expressed belief that the present language of the bill will cover his purpose.

Senator Carey (Republican), of Wyoming, unsuccessfully tried to amend the bill to limit work relief strictly to self-liquidating projects.

The committee vote on the Mc-

House Rebels Force Inquiry on Patronage

Roosevelt's Policy on Jobs Is Bitterly Attacked at Caucus.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

A group of House members described by President Roosevelt as "soreheads" yesterday forced an investigation into Federal patronage distribution by the House Democratic caucas.

After a stormy two-hour session the majority party adopted unanimously a resolution introduced by Representative W. D. McFarlane, acid-tongued Texan, calling for a report within two weeks from a special committee of seven, empowered to examine spoils largess, departmental personnel and "affiliated matters."

The caucus was marked by scathing arraignment of President Roosevelt's announced policy to award New Deal jobs on a basis of efficiency rather than on the recommendations of politicians.

McFarlane, leader of the revolt in behalf of disappointed job hunters, declared he was "disgusted" over the conduct of a "bunch of little pencil pushers" in the departments and emergency agencies. He charged they ignored requests of Representatives in awarding Federal berths.

"This never has been a personal matter with me," he said. "It isn't, as the President said, a 'sorehead' attitude of mine. It all boils down to this. Our constituents are blaming us for not getting jobs for them. We want the responsibility to be placed where it belongs."

A.E.F. Widows' Pension of $15 Asked in Bill

Measure Expected to Cause Greater Wrangle Than Bonus Proposal.

Pensions for widows and orphans of World War veterans, an issue that may transcend even the $2,200,000,000 cash bonus wrangle before the session is over, yesterday offered a new hurdle for Administration forces to leap.

A bill providing $15 a month for needy World War widows, and additional amounts for dependent children, was offered by Representative John E. Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, at request of the American Legion.

With the bonus bill as a buffer, the White House long has striven to hold the World War pension problem in the background. Reports are circulating on Capitol Hill that the Administration would gladly compromise the bonus, if the Legion would renounce pensions.

Regarded as Sure to Pass.

Legion forces, however, regard the widows' pension measure as an almost certain legislative bet if it ever comes to a vote. A similar measure, providing pensions for widows and children of disabled veterans, sped to passage in the closing days of last session, and in 1932 a $20-a-month widows' pension bill by Rankin passed the House by a 316-to-16 vote.

Congressional leaders believe it is only a matter of time before the problem of general pensions for World War veterans themselves will be hard upon Congress, and the Administration wants to postpone that day.

In support of the new Rankin bill, the legion contends the same pension is now being paid to widows and orphans of all other wars, and there is no reason World War widows should be treated less favorably. Opponents argue that young brides of old veterans might continue indefinitely on the rolls, and a similar situation leaves the Government still paying pensions to widows of the War of 1812.

Under the Rankin bill, if a World War veteran left a widow without means of support other than her daily labor and net income not exceeding $250 a year, she would receive $15 a month until her death or remarriage. If she had one child and an annual income of $400, she would get $20 a month, and $3 a month for each additional child.

The fourth point in the legion's legislative program, that organization has every intention of pressing for its enactment.

But in the succeeding four years the cost would mount as follows:

Second year—$15,000,000 for 55,000 widows and 87,000 childen.

Third year—$20,000,000 for 72,000 widows and 113,000 children.

Fourth year—$24,000,000 for 87,000 widows and 136,000 children.

NRA Ignored On Auto Hours By Roosevelt

Research Report Reveals Short Week Request; Labor Unrest Noted.

By Felix Bruner.

President Roosevelt overruled recommendations of the research and planning division of NRA, as well as wishes of the recovery board, when he established a 48-hour maximum working week in the automobile industry, it was revealed yesterday when the research report was made public.

The writers of the report found much to criticize in labor conditions. Summarizing, the report said:

"Labor unrest exists to a higher degree than warranted by the depression. The unrest flows from insecurity, low annual earnings, inequitable hiring and rehiring methods, espionage, speed-up and displacement of workers at an extremely early age."

One Suggestion Followed.

The report, covering labor conditions in the industry, was made at the request of the President and was to be made the basis for amendment of the automobile code. The only recommendation followed by the President was one suggesting that new automobile models be brought out in the fall instead of in the spring, as a means of spreading employment.

The research division, headed by Leon Henderson, recommended that the new code provide for a maximum 40-hour week with a 48-hour maximum week permitted for not more than an eight-week period in any year, and time-and-a-half pay for all time over 40 hours. The amended code provides merely for time-and-a-half for more than 48 hours, retaining the provision that working time during the life of the code shall average no more than 40 hours a week.

The hours provision, together with the President's action in continuing the Automobile Labor Board, headed by Dr. Leo Wolman, resulted in a serious break between the Administration and the American Federation of Labor.

Major Board Overruled.

In continuing the Wolman Board, the President failed to heed recommendations of the NIRB. These recommendations were contained in a letter transmitting the research report to the White House. The NIRB recommended a far more comprehensive board than the one now in existence.

In its letter of transmissal, the NIRB said:

"The board is of the opinion that definite consideration should be given to the advisability of establishing, under the authority of the national recovery act and public resolution 44 of the last session of Congress, a comprehensive auto-

Glass Denies He Is Biased On Bank Bill

Senator Issues Retort to Owen's Attack on His 'Prestige.'

Implications Are Denied By Critic in Reply to Virginian.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

As developments on the Administration's banking bill marked time, Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, yesterday lashed out in an acrimonious statement at his critics.

The sharp-tongued Virginian in reply to criticism earlier in the week that he had been proceeding on "undeserved prestige," asserted he had never used his position "to gamble in foreign exchange with a prison convict partner nor in any attempt to influence the action of Federal Reserve authorities for my own pecuniary benefit."

Senator Glass mentioned no names in his formal statement. Earlier in the week, Robert L. Owen, former chairman of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, assailed the Virginian for antagonizing the Administration over the pending bank bill and said he was using his "undeserved prestige as an expert in monetary science against the public interest, against the interest of the Democratic Party, against President Roosevelt and against the interests of the American people."

Makes Reply to Glass.

Last night former Senator Owen issued another statement which said:

"Of course, I would not charge Carter Glass with the undeserved prestige of 'gambling' with a 'prison-convict partner,' or, for that matter, of compounding with the two thieves upon the cross, to sup with them in paradise. I hope, however, that paradise will be his destination. There may be left some shred of charity in his heart.

"But if I have attempted to influence the action of the Federal Reserve authorities for the restoration of property values, * * * it was in behalf of the property of the entire people of the United States. No one will accuse Mr. Glass of such advocacy."

Mr. Owen was a member of the Senate from 1907 to 1925 from Oklahoma. During part of that period he served as chairman of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee.

In his statement, issued on Tuesday after the Administration banking bill was introduced in the House, Mr. Owen applauded the bill and asserted "it is deplorable that Senator Glass should antagonize the Administration in this needed reform." He added that the Virginian was "consisten' in following the views of the ultraconservative financial powers who have opposed any public control."

In his contention that Senator Glass had an "undeserved prestige," Mr. Owen asserted that he and not the Virginian was author of the Federal Reserve act.

Retorts to His Critics.

"I regard it as somewhat presumptuous in the persons who have classed me as 'in antagonism' to the Federal Administration on the 78-page banking bill just sent up to Congress to be engaged in hostile discussion of my attitude toward a measure not a line of which I had seen nor a copy of which I was able to obtain until the night after it had been sent to the Capitol," Senator Glass declared.

"I have not yet had time to read one-fifth of the bill in the most cursory way, nor have I had time even to read any printed summary of its contents. I do not know at this time what will be my attitude on the bill when it shall have been considered, and it is rather impertinent for certain other persons to be assuming to state my attitude for me as a prelude of unfriendly criticism.

"As to the alleged assertion from one source that I have been proceeding on 'undeserved prestige,' I may say that whatever prestige, if any, I may have it was not gotten by using my position as a member

U.S. Opposes 325 Million Steel Merger

Invokes Antitrust Law to Block Republic's Acquiring Link.

Alleged Interlocking of Directorates of Ten Companies Fought.

Cleveland, Feb. 7 (AP).—The Department of Justice invoked the antitrust laws today in an attempt to block a $325,000,000 steel merger, and to dissolve the allegedly interlocking directorates of ten steel companies.

Both actions were embodied in suits filed by Justice officials in the Cleveland Federal Court. One suit asked an injunction to prevent the $271,000,000 Republic Steel Corporation from acquiring the $54,000,000 Corrigan-McKinney Steel Co.

The other named seven men prominent in the steel industry as constituting an interlocking directorate in the ten companies, and asked an order to dissolve their alleged relationship.

Jolt to Officials.

To officials of the Republic and Corrigan-McKinney companies, who have been working for months to effect the merger, the Government's attack was a serious jolt, but it was indicated the steel men hope successfully to oppose it.

"From our knowledge of the situation we feel sure we should be able to satisfy any requirement of the law," said Tom M. Girdler, president and chairman of Republic.

Holders of more than 68 per cent of the stock in both of these concerns were already on record in favor of the deal, which the officials contend would be of advantage to all concerned.

Republic Steel, third largest company in the American steel industry, needed Corrigan-McKinney's steel-making facilities, they said, and Corrigan - McKinney needed Republic's assured outlets for raw and semifinished steel.

Names Defendants.

The Justice Department's interlocking directorates suit named as defendants William G. Mather, S. Livingston Mather, D. T. Croxton, Cyrus S. Eaton, George T. Bishop, William R. Burwell and Myron A. Wick.

Each of them, the suit alleged, is a director of two or more of the following corporations: The Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., Inland Steel Co., Wheeling Steel Corporation, the Otis Steel Co., Delaware River Steel Co., Republic Steel Corporation, Corrigan - McKinney, the McKinney Steel Holding Co., the Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Co., and the Cliffs Corporation. These 10 concerns, the Government said, have assets aggregating approximately $900,000,000.

Section 8 of the Clayton antitrust law was invoked in the action against the allegedly interlocking directorates.

The suit attacking the merger deal alleged it would violate section 7 of the same law, and "that the effect of the stock acquisition will be to substantially lessen competition between the companies involved."

Huge Sale Is Seen.

The petition says the two companies combined would sell more than 16 per cent of the semifinished steel produced for sale in the United States, and 12 per cent of the merchant bars.

Republic, the Government contends, would acquire all of the assets of Corrigan-McKinney, including approximately 80 per cent of the Newton Steel Co., and virtually 100 per cent of the stock of the N. & G. Taylor Co., now held by Corrigan, while Corrigan would acquire at least 17½ per cent of Republic's common stock and other Republic securities.

"Under the terms of the major agreement, Corrigan will dissolve within 30 days and will distribute the Republic stock and other securities to its stockholders, including the McKinnie Steel Holding Co.," a statement by the Justice Department said.

Besides causing consternation

Legislators' Salaries Held Up As Maryland Fails to Get Loan

General Funds of State $1,230,103 "in the Red," Treasurer Meets Difficulty in Borrowing; Gov. Nice Holds Conferences on Revenue.

Annapolis, Feb. 7 (AP).—The legal and financial talent of the State was mobilized today to meet a crisis in available treasury funds, reflected by the failure of members of the Legislature to get their pay checks.

With the general funds of the State $1,230,103.01 in the red and the special fund account containing only $659,028.63 on January 31—an operating deficit of $571,074.38—the State comptroller's office notified the committee on claims of the Legislature to issue no more checks to members until further notice.

Legislators have no regular pay day; some draw their salary weekly, others at the end of the session and others when they need it. The claims committee issued certificates showing the amount due, which, when signed by the State comptroller, can be cashed at any bank.

Some legislators failed to obtain their salary vouchers at about the time it was learned that the State treasurer had run into legal obstacles in attempting to borrow $1,500,000 on the $90,000 Northern Central annuity, to replenish temporarily the State operating funds.

The sale of this annuity is part of the plan devised by Democratic legislative leaders to meet an anticipated $2,229,000 treasury deficit expected by September 30 and provide a $1,500,000 operating reserve. A beer tax comprises the rest of the program.

Mrs. Cooke's Charge of Larceny Against Scarlett Is Dismissed

Judge Donald A. De Lashmutt, sitting in Police Court at Rockville, Md., yesterday dismissed a warrant sworn out by Mrs. Howard de Walden Cooke, charging larceny after trust to her son-ni-law and former chauffeur, George Scarlett 3d.

"Evidently this case is a family affair," observed Judge Lashmutt.

"For some reason, two important witnesses have shown a reluctance to testify. The veracity of the prosecuting witness, who charges her son-in-law with the theft of her jewelry, is equal to the denial of the defendant. Meanwhile, if the parties in this case decide they want to talk, they are not banned from relating their stories to the grand jury."

Following dismissal of the case, Scarlett and his bride, the former Jane Cooke, Chevy Chase heiress, were free to enjoy their honeymoon, which began more than 10 days ago, when the couple, taking with them Ann, sister of the bride, eloped to North Carolina.

Scarlett was accused of stealing $5,000 worth of jewels Mrs. Cooke had entrusted to him to take to a Washington jeweler.

'Air Bandit' Trapped by Body Hauled 2,000 Miles in Auto

Telegram Spells Doom of Jealousy Slayer in Wild Dash.

Neveda City, Calif., Feb. 7 (AP). A macabre 2,000-mile dash for liberty with the body of the man he admittedly slew because of jealousy ended today for Clarence Frechette, 25, Michigan's notorious "flying bandit."

In a stolen motor car containing three unsuspecting passengers and a trunk into which the body of the 180-pound victim, Robert Brown, 24, of Kalamazoo, had been stuffed, Frechette drove up to the California line at midnight and into the arms of waiting officers near Truckee.

As if they suspected nothing, the officers asked Frechette and his passengers to come into their checking station and warm themselves. Then one official pried open the trunk to find the body.

Pistols were shoved into the ribs of Frechette and his male passenger, John Malcolm Rivas, Salt Lake City miner. Frechette at first denied he was the man sought, and said he was Brown.

At the same time officers identified him as the man who assaulted Harry W. Anderson, flying instructor, during a flight at Kalamazoo several years ago.

When the plane was 2,000 feet up, Frechette seized a hammer, knocked Anderson senseless, landed the ship in haphazard fashion and went through it for valuables. He was sentenced to serve six to 10 years,

Another Witness Supports Alibi

Husband Denies Accused 'Had an Affair' With Mrs. Henkel.

(Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.)

Flemington, N. J., Feb. 7.—The best friend Isador Fisch ever had came into court today and gave sullen, reluctant testimony in behalf of Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

It was hard to tell where the sympathies of Henry Uhlig rested in this strange courtroom combat between the quick and the dead—between Hauptmann and Fisch—each trying to blacken the other with the guilt of the Lindbergh crime.

Edward J. Reilly, chief of defense counsel, told Supreme Court Justice Thomas W. Trenchard he would have two more witnesses before he rests his case, probably tomorrow noon.

Uhlig smiled at Hauptmann as he pushed through the throng and up to the witness chair. He had been Hauptmann's friend, too, in the days before the carpenter shoved one ransom bill too many at a Bronx tradesman.

But five minutes after Uhlig began testifying, Reilly moved heavily across the floor toward the judge's bench and said:

Calls Reilly "Liar."

In a sense he was. He and Reilly were exchanging angry words. Uhlig's face was crimson with rage and once he shouted "That's a lie" at Hauptmann's lawyer. It sounded more like a cross-examination than direct testimony from a witness who appeared here in obedience to a subpena issued by defense lawyers who expected him to help save their client from the electric chair.

Uhlig's loyalty seemed to be divided between Fisch and Hauptmann.

This was the man who boarded a boat for Hamburg late in 1933. His traveling companion was Fisch, who carried a big suitcase and a zipper bag, and who lay on his back in a cabin throughout most of the Atlantic passage, weak from tuberculosis.

Uhlig told about that trip and the preparations they made for it. Things had not gone so well for Fisch. He had borrowed money, had invested some of it in a pie factory and had gone bankrupt.

"Fisch was supporting you, wasn't he?" Reilly asked.

Uhlig's face blazed with anger.

"He was not," he said sharply.

Defense Contention.

"Well, he paid your passage to Germany?"

"That's a lie," the witness shouted. "He paid my passage with my money which he had invested in his phoney bakery."

Counsel for the defense cling tenaciously to the belief that if they can prove that Fisch was lolling in luxury from the time the Lindbergh kidnaping was committed until he sailed for Germany, they can prove that he, not Hauptmann, collected the Lindbergh ransom and plotted the crime. They tried to get Uhlig to say that today, but he evaded the question of whether Fisch was rich or poor. All he new, he said, was that Fisch borrowed money frequently, but that he had enough to buy the two steamship tickets.

Reilly wanted Uhlig to say more than that. He wanted the witness to swear that the crude combination of printing and writing in the 14 ransom notes resembled Fisch's script. This is the way he went about it.

"You worked in the pie factory with Fisch at one time, didn't you?"

HamiltonRobs Capital Youth Of Car, Money

AAA Employe Held Up by Texas Desperado and Aid Near Memphis.

Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 7 (AP).—Hewitt Davis, 20, of 300 Wilson boulevard, Clarendon, Va., telephoned Chief Deputy Sheriff Charles Garibaldi this afternoon that he was released on a county highway an hour earlier by two men who had driven him to Memphis from Gulfport, Miss., a prisoner in his own car. He said one of the men told him he was Raymond Hamilton, Texas desperado.

Garibaldi said the youth told him the man who described himself as Hamilton, and another man, addressed as "Al," drove off in his automobile, a coupe bearing Virginia license plates after dropping him near Capleville, on the outskirts of Shelby County, of which Memphis is the county seat.

Bound for New Orleans.

The youth said he was en route to New Orleans at the time the strangers entered his automobile at Gulfport, Miss., last night, and forced him to drive to Memphis.

The man he said declared himself as Hamilton, was about 5 feet 8 inches tall and weighed about 140 pounds. The other, he said, was light-haired, about 5 feet 9½ inches tall.

Davis said he was the son of E. J. Davis, 1406 Gudalup, Austin, Tex., and that he was an employe of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, stationed in Clarendon. He was en route to New Orleans, planning to go from there to Austin to visit his family.

He said it was about 10:15 p. m. last night that he stopped in front of a transient bureau at Gulfport, and the two men, with drawn pistols, forced their way into his car.

"Tough Talking Man."

"He was about the toughest talking man I ever encountered," Davis said. "I wasn't in fear, however."

U.S. Indictment Cites Officials In Liquor Plot

State's Attorney, 4 Deputy Sheriffs Indicted; 89 Made Defendants.

Harrisonburg, Va., Feb. 7 (AP).—A conspiracy indictment obtained by Federal agents after 18 months of investigation in Franklin County, Virginia, today involved the Commonwealth's attorney, a former sheriff, four deputies, a former State prohibition officer and one of the Federal investigators.

It resulted from work by the alcoholic tax unit of the Treasury Department assigned to clean up Franklin County, which the Wickersham report several years ago described as the wettest spot in the United States.

Thirty-four individuals and a corporation were named as defendants in the report, brought in by a grand jury which had been at work on the case since October. An additional 55 persons were named in the 20-page douement as coconspirators in alleged violations of the internal revenue acts. A separate indictment was brought against one man on a perjury charge.

68 Overt Acts Charged

The 68 overt acts listed in support of the general conspiracy indictment charged:

That Charles Carter Lee, young Commonwealth's attorney of Franklin County, had accepted money for protection of those engaged in illicit whisky operations.

That former Sheriff D. Wilson Hodges had protected rum runners for money and sold untaxed whisky which previously had been seized by officers and placed in his custody.

That officers had removed blockades to assist rum-runners in moving their loads through safely.

The members of the firm named in the indictment, the Ferrum Mercantile Co., had guaranteed protection to rum-runners under an agreement they had with county officers and had supplied large quantities of the raw material used by distillers.

That those other than officials named in the indictment had dis-

Ex-Convict Tricked 22 Years, Girl He Left Behind Him Wed

Molinara, Italy, Feb. 7.—Bitterness filled the heart of Michelangelo Gentilcore tonight as he sat in his old home town, dejected and alone, and pondered the fickleness of women.

The 45-year-old shoemaker who served the last 22 years in Minnesota Penitentiary for the murder of a friend, came back to the sweetheart of his youth only to discover that she long since had wed.

Maria Delano had promised tearfully to wait while Gentilcore went to America and made his fortune and could send for her.

At first the cobbler could not believe she had failed him. But there was proof—and he sat alone tonight, in despair, refusing to discuss his broken romance other than to repeat:

"Women are fickle."

He returned to discover not only that his Maria had failed to keep her promises, but that she had tricked him.

Jones Advises Harried Roads To Reorganize

RFC Funds Available, He Says; Van Sweringen Seeks a Loan.

Now is the time for railroads in difficulties to reorganize, and the RFC, with new powers granted by Congress, stands ready to help them do it, Chairman Jesse H. Jones declared yesterday.

Beside him as he spoke was O. P. Van Sweringen, Cleveland railroad operator, who for more than a year has been working on a plan to reorganize the Missouri Pacific Railroad, now in trusteeship.

"We're willing to assist in the reorganization of any railroad if the plan seems sound and fair to all concerned," Mr. Jones asserted. "But it must be on a sound basis, where the Government's money will be secured."

'It's Stylish Now.'

The RFC chairman gave the opinion that most railroad executives look upon reorganization "just like death—they want to put it off as long as possible."

In proclaiming, however, that the time is ripe for scaling down debts by reorganization, Mr. Jones added, half-jestingly, "for one thing, it's stylish now, and it might not be stylish later on."

The RFC is prepared, by virtue of wider authority conferred by Congress in extending its life, to play a larger part in helping the railroads. But, according to Mr. Jones:

"I don't think we'll wind up with any railroads, and I don't think we'll lose anything."

According to the monthly statement for January, made public by the chairman, the RFC has disbursed $449,943,000 in loans to railroads. Of this amount, $70,856,000 has been repaid. The loans outstanding are all amply secured, Mr. Jones said, adding there may be a "small loss" in a few cases.

Congress restricted the amount of new funds the RFC can invest in railroads to $350,000,000. Mr. Jones said that present commitments total about $400,000,000, which would allow the corporation to have $750,000,000 outstanding to railroads at any time.

Van Sweringen Seeks Loan.

Mr. Van Sweringen was present, the RFC chairman said, in the interest of obtaining a loan from the RFC as part of his reorganization plan. Mr. Jones declined, however, to give the amount of the loan sought. Van Sweringen represents the Missouri Pacific Railroad Co., which has obtained $23,134,800 from the RFC to date.

Meantime, a committee representing the railroad brotherhoods called on President Roosevelt to urge upon him their proposal for a six-hour day as the means to absorb 1,000,000 unemployed railroad workers. They are understood to have taken issue with the report of Coordinator Joseph B. Eastman, which condemned this plan as infeasible.

Announcement was made after the meeting that the Railway Labor Executives Association, composed of the 21 railroad unions, will meet next week to consider the Eastman report and legislation now before Congress. The committee calling at the White House consisted of George M. Harrison, railroad clerk; D. B. Robertson, fireman; C. J. Mannion, telegrapher, and J. G. Luhreson, dispatcher.

Between You and Me

Independent Reserve Board; Rebels Keep Ruby on the Run; Vidal's Airplane Pool.

By Raymond Clapper

ONE day during the 1920 presidential campaign, when W. P. G. Harding was governor of the Federal Reserve Board, he received a telegram from a prominent Democratic candidate urging that the Reserve Board do something for the farmer.

Harding laid the telegram before the board and was instructed to reply that the board based its policies solely upon business and economic conditions.

Another telegram came back from the candidate, saying that his election would be assured by favorable action and be jeopardized otherwise. Gov. Harding, a Democratic appointee of Wilson, wrote a personal telegram in reply, saying he could not receive any more such suggestions and that if any came they would be given to the press. That was the last he heard of it.

* * * *

With that kind of independence by the Reserve Board little question would be raised as to the new Administration proposals vastly increasing and centralizing the board's powers. There is wide recognition of the paralyzing efforts of the dual control between the Reserve Board and the 12 Reserve banks, which exercise some autonomy in certain directions, and are ever alert to make the most of it. The concern is not over giving the Reserve Board a firmer grip but over the additional importance this imposes upon the selection of strong and able men.

Instead of dependence upon theoretically automatic checks and balances which, like the furnace thermostat, are apt to fail in the cold gray dawn, the new Administration proposals would place more reliance in the judgment of a few officials by giving them full power of action. This makes the personal equation the vital factor.

Everyone familiar with the board's history knows that at one period the governor of a certain Reserve bank exercised a dominating influence over many of the board's actions. At other times the governor has ruled the board with a firm and independent hand.

Much of the opposition to the present proposals is based upon fear that the President and Secretary Morgenthau dominate the present board. That is why Senator Glass attaches so much importance to questioning of Marriner S. Eccles, the new governor, whose nomination is pending in the Glass banking and currency sub-committee.

It also explains the sentiment among some Senators for removing the Secretary of the Treasury as ex-officio member of the Reserve Board. Secretary Morgenthau is worried about that talk.

* * * *

Some may laugh, but it is tearing Gov. Ruby Laffoon's heart the way the breaks are going against him. He has made Kentucky colonels out of almost everyone in Washington who is not on the relief rolls. Does he get any cooperation in return? He does not.

Gov. Laffoon has been engaged in seeking to perpetuate his faction's control in next fall's election by attempting to junk the optional primary and nominate a slate by convention. The Administration here, believing that the best interests of the party in 1936 would be advanced by throwing the nominations into an open primary, turned the heat on Laffoon's plan. President Roosevelt even entered the fight. He sent a letter to the State committee backing up those who want a primary. Nevertheless the committee, dominated by Laffoon, voted to hold a convention in May to nominate its slate.

This week Laffoon made a rush trip to Washington to placate the Administration, and if possible jar loose some more highway money from PWA. Wednesday he was sitting in the outer office of Senator Barkley of Kentucky, on peaceful mission bent, when the startling news came that his acting Governor, "Happy" Chandler, had called the Legislature to meet in special session today to enact a compulsory primary law.

Laffoon was desperate. Taking the manager of his hotel, who is a Kentucky colonel, into his confidence, Gov. Laffoon left secretly; caught a train for home immediately. Huey Long knows how to manage such strokes of strategy but Laffoon, who had instructed his hotel to say he was still registered but did not answer his room telephone, was seen dashing aboard his train. Arriving yesterday, Laffoon uncalled the Legislature, claiming to have signed the order at 4 a. m. aboard the train just after it crossed the State line into Kentucky. His enemies forewarned, leaped into court and obtained a restraining order to prevent him from cancelling the acting Governor's call.

It isn't any wonder that the Administration has had to go back to carpetbagging to get responsible government in some States. It has even had to take to writing the laws for some of them.

Eugene Vidal, director of the Bureau of Air Commerce in the Department of Commerce, has suggested an aircraft operating pool. The Government would run it and officials could draw airplanes and pilots for official travel.

The energetic young aviation official, one time West Point football hero, son-in-law of Senator Gore, and able pilot, has canvassed Government agencies on his plan. Sixteen said they would join in such a pool. Participating departments would transfer travel funds to the pool, in proportion to their use of the Government planes. The Bureau of Air Commerce would procure the planes, hire the pilots and operate the pool. This would make high speed traffic available to Government officials working in departments which are prevented by law from purchasing aircraft.

Among the most ardent supporters of the Vidal plan are Army and Navy officials who have been called on in the past few years to provide airplane "taxi service" for Federal officials. Anxious to save time on jaunts around the country, members of Congress, the Cabinet and a number of relief officials have called on the Air Corps to furnish the transportation. Military pilots claim that this does not help them become proficient as combat aviators, upsets their training programs and, in general, is a nuisance.

One Government investigator reports that 39 different Federal agencies have to do with land policies, seven of which got into it under the New Deal, and he isn't sure but what he has overlooked others. Everyone has been too busy planning to do anything about it yet.

Senator Denies Bias on Proposed Measure; Defends 'Prestige.'

of a banking and currency committee of either house of Congress to gamble in foreign exchange with a prison convict partner, nor in any attempt to influence the action of Federal Reserve authorities for my own pecuniary benefit.

"As to the authorship of the Federal Reserve Act, I can not see that that fact is particularly pertinent at this time, but I am perfectly content to rest that matter with the Congressional Record itself and upon the statements of outstanding persons intimately associated with the circumstances of the time."

Meanwhile Administration leaders on Capitol Hill declined to make any predictions of successful passage of the new banking bill in the form in which it was submitted. President Roosevelt termed the measure a "tentative draft" and subsequently said it represented the general objectives of the Administration and was offered as a basis for discussion.

Senate Democratic Leader Joseph T. Robinson, asked about the prospects of the bill in this session, said: "I think there will be some action—if the bill is reported by the committee." Senator Glass is chairman of a Banking and Currency sub-committee to which it has been customary to refer bills affecting the Federal Reserve system, but it is not certain this bill will go to his group.

Would Change Reserve Setup.

Among provisions in the bill attracting attention is one that would change the method of appointment of a governor for the Federal Reserve Board. Under the new proposal the governor would not be named for the usual 12-year term, as the other members, but would hold office at the pleasure of the President and "upon the termination of his designation as governor he shall be deemed to have served the full term for which he was appointed."

Thus the governor would be under the thumb of the President, it is contended by those who find this proposal objectionable. Such a move, it is argued, would destroy the independence of the board at a time when that body would be given control over open market operations, the buying and selling of Government obligations. This control is proposed in the bill.

This latter proposal likewise has aroused hostility. In that connection, the conservatives who believe the Reserve System should be divorced as far as possible from political influence, plan to revive a movement to take the Secretary of the Treasury off the Reserve Board as an ex-officio chairman.

The Treasury chief's place on the board has been a bone of contention for many years and in 1932 the Senate voted 62 to 14 to strike out this official as an ex-officio member as a part of the Glass banking bill. Passage of that bill was blocked because of opposition to another part.

When the measure was revived a year later the provision relating to the Treasury Secretary was omitted because former Secretary William H. Woodin construed it as a personal reflection on him.

It is now argued that the elimination of the Secretary of the Treasury from the board will be more important than ever, if the board is to have the power to determine the extent and manner that Reserve banks may be compelled to buy or sell Government obligations.

A report was circulated on Capitol Hill yesterday that the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation had paid a Wisconsin lawyer $10,000 to draft the 37 pages of the bill making changes in the law under which that agency operates.

Crowley Denies Fee $10,000.

Leo T. Crowley, chairman of the FDIC, denied that such a fee had been paid. He said title I of the bill, dealing with his agency, was the work of a number of persons in his organization. He said that Herman L. Ekern, former State insurance commissioner and former attorney general of Wisconsin—Mr. Crowley's home—had worked on the bill. He said Mr. Ekern came to the FDIC last August as an adviser and was paid on a per diem basis. He could not remember the rate of Mr. Ekern's compensation.

Meanwhile, before the Senate Agricultural Committee, Frank A. Vanderlip, banker and former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, criticized the pending banking bill on the ground it was just as objectionable to give Government a monopoly over credit as to give it to business.

He proposed creation of a Federal monetary authority, which he called a "Supreme Court of Currency," independent of the political agencies of Government. He would direct this authority to use its powers over credit and currency to maintain a stable price level.

NRA Overruled On Auto Week By White House

Research Report Reveals 40 Hours Recommended; Labor Unrest Noted.

motive industry labor relations board. We hope that this labor relations board, or a subsidiary agency, may be mutually agreed upon by all interested parties as a means of fostering constructive development of improved relationships; and that through this mutual agreement the area of work undertaken by the board, or a subsidiary agency, may be extended beyond the limits set by any legal authorizations to which reference has been made. It would seem that the time has arrived for a major effort of this type."

The Research Division also recommended that the code be changed so that hour provisions might apply to persons receiving more than $35 a week, as well as those below that figure. It would exempt executives.

The research report opens with a general survey of the automobile industry, showing that 88 per cent of production is concentrated in the three major companies, Ford, Chrysler and General Motors. It also showed that cars wholesaling for less than $500 constituted 54 per cent of production in 1929 and 81 per cent in 1933.

The report states that "some impelling force besides general agreement will have to be instituted so as to insure that the new models will be introduced" in the fall, as agreed upon by the industry.

The report declared that under the automobile code wages have increased from 59.3 cents per hour in the 12 months from September, 1932, to August, 1933, to 68.8 cents in the 12 months ended August, 1934, and to 74.1 cents in September, 1934.

The report was outspoken in its criticism of the "speed-up" system in automobile plants.

The report declared that in one large plant production in 1930 was at the rate of one car per day for each 24 men, while at present it is one car per day for each 16 men. As hourly wages increase, the report indicated, the amount of work done by each man increases.

Espionage System Noted.

"The uncertainty of employment is the specter which is haunting the automobile worker today and which has been haunting him for the past few years," the report continued. "The attitude of his foreman, his fear that the company will feel him too old to carry on his job while he is still a young man, his fear of the espionage system which he knows is spying on him day and night—all are elements of his fear of losing his job.

"The position of the foreman in the automobile plant today is not a happy one because he is called upon by his superiors to produce at ridiculously low prices and he must make demands upon the workers which he knows are difficult, if not impossible, to meet. The petty whims of the foremen seem to be the controlling influences in the lives of many of the automobile workers. Favoritism and direct financial demands on the workers by the foreman seem to have been common.

"One of the psychological problems faced by the automobile worker today is the gamble that he knows he is facing as he goes to work each day. He sees the men waiting at the gate for an interview for employment. If he is feeling badly on a particular day and slows down in his gait, his straw boss or foreman tells him, 'Step on it. If you don't want the job, there are thousands outside who do,' or, 'Look out the window and see the men waiting in line for your job'."

Discussing age limits, the report said there probably is no such thing as a definite age limit in an automobile plant, but when a man over 40 is laid off "it becomes increasingly difficult for him to get back on the next rehiring period."

One group of workers, including tool makers, the report said, are allowed under the code to work an average of 42 hours a week during a year. This, the report pointed out, makes it possible to work a man as much as 84 hours a week over a six-month period.

"Although there is no indication," it continued, "that there are any number working longer than 84 hours a week, one instance was discovered in one of the larger automobile plants where a large group of tool makers were working 77 hours a week for several weeks in succession during December, 1934."

One-Sixth of Vote In Colleges Shows A Pacifist Leaning

New York, Feb. 7 (U.P.).—Nearly one-sixth of American college students are against bearing arms, even if the United States were invaded in war; 50.17 per cent are in favor of joining the League of Nations, and two-thirds believe there is no reason for the United States getting into another war.

These are the results of the Literary Digest poll taken in 115 leading American colleges and universities, in which 90,281 ballots were cast.

Ninety per cent voted for Government control of munitions; 82.17 per cent were against bearing arms for the United States "in the invasion of the borders of another country."

The ballot in favor of universal conscription of all sources of capital, labor and credit in time of war was 81.98 per cent. There were 58,025 opposed to building a United States Navy and air force "second to none as a sound method of insuring us against being drawn into another great war."

Father of 6 Arrested, Two Stills Confiscated

Chambersburg, Pa., Feb. 7 (Spl.)—In the first raid on an alleged moonshiner's premises in Franklin County sine repeal of the prohibition laws, enforcement agents of the State Liquor Control Board and state police arrested James Henry Clay Weller, 42, at his home near Greencastle, confiscated two stills in operation, an inactive still, 28 gallons of newly distilled liquor and a large quantity of mash.

Weller, father of six children, was brought here and committed to the county jail on a charge of manufacturing liquor without a State license. W. G. Piper, enforcement agent, preferred the charge before Magistrate C. H. Gillan.

Green Assailed For Injunction Against Rebels

Heralding the legal battle between two American Federation of Labor factions which opens Monday in District Supreme Court, Michael J. McDonough, spokesman for one of the sides involved, yesterday made public a sharp attack against President William Green of the A. F. of L.

Green is accused, in a letter which McDonough is sending to more than 1,000 A. F. of L. affiliated bodies, of violating the very principles which he has championed in the past by allowing himself to become a party to injunction proceedings instituted by the "legal" building trades department against the "illegal" building trades department.

McDonough, as president of the latter organization, is to appear before Associate Justice Oscar R. Luhring at 10 a. m. Monday to show cause why a temporary injunction should not be granted to the recognized department restraining him and his separate slate of officers from continuing to exercise jurisdiction.

Since the first of the year the "Building Trades Department, American Federation of Labor," of which McDonough is president and William C. O'Neill secretary-treasurer, has kept headquarters in the Machinists building at Ninth and K streets northwest, directly opposite the A. F. of L. building.

Its former offices in the A. F. of L. building now are occupied by the "Building Trades Department, American Federation of Labor," headed by James W. Williams, president and Herbert Rivers, secretary-treasurer.

Williams, Rivers and other officers of the "official" department last week made application for the injunction which would compel the other group to give up its money, property, furniture, books and records, and discontinue use of its name.

The letter, signed by McDonough and O'Neill, and which is being sent to all international unions, building trades councils, central labor unions and members of the executive council of the A. F. of L., charges that Green "has obligated the American Federation of Labor to participate in the injunction proceedings."

The other faction consists of seven unions, but represents a far greater number of workmen, because the powerful carpenters, bricklayers and electrical workers' organizations are included among the seven.

Mayflower Hotel Report Is Adopted

Senate District Committee Acts on Refinancing.

The Senate District Committee yesterday adopted the report of its sub-committee criticising the recent refinancing of the Mayflower Hotel and instructed Senator Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, to file the report in the Senate.

Senator William H. King, chairman of the committee, pointed out that the committee was powerless, as the District Supreme Court already has approved the reorganization, but he recommended that a copy of the report be given to Justice F. Dickinson Letts, who presided in the case.

The sub-committee in its report recommended appointment of a special master by the District Supreme Court "to communicate fully with all bondholders, analyzing all pending propositions and those which may hereafter be submitted to the court" and then decide what is best for the bondholders.

R. G. Donaldson Sued For $46,207.50 Notes

Charging that R. Golden Donaldson, former president of the Commercial National Bank, had neglected to pay four promissory notes aggregating $46,207.50, the National Savings and Trust Company yesterday asked the District Supreme Court for a verdict against him for that amount.

The trust company also filed suit against Ada Newlands Dabney and Virginius Dabney, 1633 Connecticut avenue northwest, who were named as having failed to pay promissory notes of $28,112.

Roosevelt Acts To Place Works On Merit Basis

Amendment to Allow Use of Civil Service List Being Drafted.

President Roosevelt dealt a blow at congressional patronage seekers yesterday as a Senate sub-committee held a hearing on a bill to extend the mrit system to the New Deal agencies and other governmental branches not now under civil service.

A letter written by the President to H. Eliot Kaplan, executive secretary of the National Civil Service Reform League, revealed that an amendment has been drafted to the $4,880,000,000 public works bill to allow the utilization of civil service eligible lists in appointments for administrative positions.

The Logan bill to extend the merit system was given unanimous approval by a group of organizations interested in the welfare of Federal employes, and Senator Logan (Democrat), of Kentucky, indicated that it will be favorably reported within a few days.

League Made Report.

A statement by the National Civil Service Reform League explained that the league had written to Roosevelt urging an amendment to section 3 of the public works bill providing for the selection of employes through the machinery of the Civil Service Commission.

The President wrote:

"Replying to your letter of January 22, in connection with section 3 of the $4,880,000,00 work relief bill, in which you suggest an amendment which would allow the utilization of existing registers of the Civil Service Commission, I am glad to tell you that this matter has already received consideration in my hands.

"On instruction from me, the Civil Service Commission has prepared an amendment to this bill which would bring about the result you desire, if Congress sees fit to accept the amendment."

Bill Still Unchanged.

The amendment, it is understood, has not been approved by the Senate Appropriations Committee, and the bill still provides that employes shall be selected without regard to civil service.

Harry B. Mitchell, president of the Civil Service Commission, appeared before the Senate sub-committee in favor of the Logan bill. He submitted a statement showing that on June 30 there were 199,507 employes in the executive departments without civil service status. Of these, 70,000 were at that time in the emergency agencies.

Mitchell suggested that the New Deal employes might be brought under civil service by executive order because of the indefiniteness of the life of some of the departments.

Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, which is sponsoring the Logan bill, introduced a number of witnesses and testimony in support of the measure.

Postmaster Change Asked.

The Logan bill provides that all civilian employes of the executive branches of the Federal Government would be brought under Civil Service by submitting to noncompetitive examinations upon recommendation of the department heads.

Suggestions were made at the hearing that the bill be amended to include first, second and third class postmasters and other post-office employes now exempt.

Among the witnesses heard by the sub-committee, besides Mitchell and Steward, were:

Dr. Luther Gulick, director of the Commission of Inquiry on Public Service Personnel; Kaplan, of the National Civil Service Reform League; Mrs. Harris T. Baldwin, of the National League of Women Voters, and Representative John Dingell (Democrat), Michigan.

Ex-Convict Finds Girl Tricked Him

a month," he told friends in America. And as far as he knew during the long years in prison for murder, she had written.

But his homecoming proved also that these letters which he had cherished were fakes, probably written at Maria's as one way of cheering Gentilcore in his cell whence she came to believe he never would return. So she married.

Gentilcore, who said his years in prison had taught him "it is the heart that makes for beauty," often sent part of his earnings as a convict to the woman, residing in the Calabria region, whom he made a widow by murdering her husband. Just before sailing from New York he sent the last money order to her, for 3,000 lire (about $250).

He plans to remain here and seek work, probably as a shoemaker, a trade he learned while in the penitentiary.

One villager advanced the idea Gentilcore might marry the widow of the man he killed—but he'll probably remain a bachelor.

tilled, stored, transported or otherwise handled untaxed whisky.

Acting on a motion of Sterling Hutcheson, United States attorney for the Eastern District of Virginia, immediately after the grand jury had made its report, Judge John Paul directed that capiases be issued for the defendants. Federal investigators deputized as deputy United States marshals set out for Franklin County to apprehend the defendants with the understanding that they would be taken before the United States commissioner at Rocky Mount and bailed for appearance in Roanoke March 4.

The Federal agents asserted they were after the higher-ups, and to avoid the possibility of interference or intimidation the grand jury had been chosen from the upper valley of Virginia and summoned to meet here, more than 190 miles from the scene of the alleged violations.

Otha Thomas was the one indicted on a perjury charge. He was one of more than 200 witnesses heard by the grand jury during nearly 30 days of deliberations, which produced more than 3,000 pages of testimony.

Defendants Are Named.

Named as defendants in the general conspiracy indictments were:

Herman Sively, Guy W. and C. Buford Nolen and Grover L. Martin, of the Ferrum Mercantile Co., Inc., which also was named specifically in the indictment; Robert P. DeHart, merchant, and Walter Hatcher, alias Peg Hatcher; T. Roosevelt Smith, Willard R. Hodges, John H. Turner, Walter Turner, Lcuade Shively, J. O. Shively, Nick Prilliman, Leonard L. Fralin, Jack Best, Tom Cooper, Elonard Davis, Earle Eastern, Charles Williams, Posey Jones, Clifford Martin, H. J. Wright, Thomas C. Cundiff and C. P. Griffith, alias Cap Griffith.

The co-conspirators included A. J. Bondurant and J. F. Bondurant, who were shot some time ago by Franklin County officers; Joseph P. Hodges, jr., brother of the former sheriff; T. J. Richards, former deputy sheriff, who was shot to death while taking a prisoner, who also was killed, to the Rocky Mount Jail; Mrs. Willie Carter Sharpe, driver of liquor pilot cars, whose diamond-studded teeth caused a sensation in the courtroom; and A. Shrine Lays Plans For Big Meeting

Group to Raise $150,000 for Convention Here.

The committee which will make financial arrangements for the annual Shrine convention to be held here next June held its first meeting yesterday and laid preliminary plans for raising $150,000. Francis G. Addison, chairman, presided.

More than 100,000 visitors from all parts of North America will be attracted to Washington by the convention, said Addison, reading from a letter which has been sent to all prospective subscribers to the guaranty fund. He expressed belief that guarantors will have the full amount of their subscriptions returned after expenses are paid.

Edgar Morris is vice chairman of the finance committee. Robert P. Smith, director general of the 1935 convention, also attended yesterday's meeting.

Bill Would Prohibit Dog Experiments

Frazier Offers Measure Protecting D. C. Canines.

The prohibition of experiments on dogs in the District, sought without success for several years, is asked in a bill introduced in the Senate yesterday by Senator Frazier (Republican), of North Dakota.

The bill, which was referred to the Senate District Committee, carries a penalty of from $100 to $500 fine or imprisonment of from three months to a year.

Other District bills introduced yesterday:

To extend the rights of incorporation to fraternal and mutual benefit organizations incorporated outside the District, but licensed to do business here; by Senator Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas.

To permit the United Daughters of the Confederacy to erect a stone marker on the Jefferson Davis highway in Washington at a site to be approved by the Fine Arts Commission; by Senator Copeland (Democrat), of New York.

Representative Pettengill (Democrat), of Indiana, introduced a resolution in the House asking that a night, as well as day, guard be stationed at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington Cemetery.

Besides his coupe the men took $5.50 in cash from young Davis, a George Washington student, as well as an AAA employe.

"When they let me out, Hamilton told me they planned to drive to New Orleans and that I could find my car there," Davis said.

The youth carried with him a photograph bearing the autograph of Representative Richard M. Kleberg, of Texas.

among Republic and Corrigan-McKinney officials, the suits also were a possible factor, financial experts said, in a four-point decline today in quotations on Republic's preferred stock on the New York Stock Exchange. Corrigan-McKinney's stock, listed in Cleveland, declined three points.

Girdler, and Donald B. Gillies, president of Corrigan-McKinney, both expressed astonishment at the Justice Department's action, but indicated they were hopeful of overcoming the objections.

The proposed merger, the, said, "has no purpose or effect in restraining trade. As they stand, each company has certain deficiencies in plant and equipment which the other could supply."

Corrigan-McKinney has its principal plant in Cleveland. Republic's main plant is at Youngstown, Ohio. Both, however, have numerous plants in other parts of the country.

Republic was formed only six years ago by Cyrus S. Eaton, Cleveland financier, in a series of huge mergers similar to the one now pending.

J. M. Kline Reelected Head of G. A. R. Unit

John M. Kline was reelected commander of the Department of the Potomac, Grand Army of the Republic, at the annual meeting of the group yesterday at the home of Mrs. K. P. McElroy at 1412 Sixteenth street northwest.

Other officers elected were William F. Dorsey, senior vice commander, and John T. Ryan, junior vice commander. All other posts were filled by reelection of the incumbents. The heads of organizations allied with the G. A. R. were present to present their greetings to Mr. Kline. Mrs. Matilda Robert, national president of the Daughters of Union Veterans, presented him with a basket of flowers. She was accompanied by Mrs. Mattie Tucker, the national treasurer.

House Rebels Force Inquiry On Patronage

House floor, McFarlane leveled a withering attack on personnel officers of the NRA, PWA, AAA and other emergency units.

"Whenever appointments are made in your district," he shouted, "you're not consulted. Nor is there any efficiency test. They write the political bellwether in your State—not you. Or they go to the A. and M. college or the chamber of commerce for recommendations. Most of the appointments are made from among your political enemies. It becomes a burden to be your friend."

In the executive session general debate which preceded adoption of the McFarlane resolution appeals for party harmony were voiced by Speaker Byrns, Representative McCormack, of Massachusetts; Chairman Sabath, Illinois, of the Steering Committee and other Democratic leaders.

McFarlane later observed that Byrns, McCormack and Sabath "waved the flag and urged the boys to stand by the President."

A speech by Chairman O'Connor of the Rules Committee in suport of the investigation was lauded by McFarlane as "fair and outspoken."

Representative Dies, Texas, failed to amend the resolution to provide for handling of the inquiry by the congressional Democratic committee. Veteran members outmaneuvered the Dies amendment for fear its adoption would give the impression that all members were dissatisfied over the patronage situation.

Will Go to White House.

Sabath, chairman of the caucus patronage committee, said the group would visit the White House and seek to compel Government executives to be courteous to members of Congress. He cited occasions on which the, had been refused information and had been required to cool their heels for hours while waiting to see bureau chiefs.

Named on the committee with Sabath were Representatives Taylor, Colorado; O'Connor, McFarlane, Bankhead, Alabama; Fuller, Arkansas, and Johnson, Oklahoma. Byrns was named as an ex-officio member.

McFarlane said he expected the committee to investigate charges of alleged petty graft at the Capitol.

The McFarlane resolution follows:

"Resolved that the chairman of the Democratic caucus shall appoint the committee already appointed by the Democratic Steering Committee, a committee of seven members, to investigate the distribution of patronage, departmental personnel and other affiliated matters and that the said committee shall make a partial report back to the Democratic caucus within two weeks from date of adoption of this resolution on such information and findings as they may have secured, a full report to be made to the Democratic caucus at this session of Congress as soon as possible."

Bandit Trapped On 2,000-Mile Trip With Body

patrol announced Frechette had confessed the killing.

Purported Admissions.

In the purported confession and in subsequent remarks to interviewers, the dapper 130 pound ex-convict admitted:

That he stuffed Brown's body in the trunk of the automobile and headed westward, intending to "ditch" the car and its gruesome burden in California and flee to the Orient.

That he held up two drug stores and a restaurant in Denver, obtaining $41 to help finance his trip.

That he went to a dance in Salt Lake City, leaving the automobile and its ghastly cargo parked in the street outside the dance hall.

Picked up the three passengers in Salt Lake City, agreeing to take them to the coast for $6 each.

Trapped by Telegram.

Sent a telegram from Elko, Nev., to Brown's father, Roy Brown, in Michigan, signing it "Robert" and asking that $50 be telegraphed to him.

That telegram led to his arrest.

The whole party was brought here—Frechette's other two passengers, Mrs. Victor Messenger, of Alameda, Calif., and her 4-year-old son, Raymond, were released from technical custody today.

Frechette in a cell went over the story of the killing at Howell, Mich., January 29. He said Brown made a disparaging remark about "his girl," Grace Curran.

"I knocked him down," the asserted confession then went on. "He crawled to the car and reached in a pocket and grabbed that gun (the .32 caliber pistol that was found in the death car).

"He pointed it at me and I grabbed his hand. I don't know whether it was his finger or mine did it, but the gun fired twice.

"I put him in the trunk. I didn't know whether he was dead or alive. I knew if I was caught I would spend the rest of my life in prison."

Frechette then assertedly said he spent that night in Kalamazoo, going to a movie. Then with the car, which belonged to Brown's mother, Mrs. Mabel Brown, he started west.

When Brown's parents received the telegram from Elko they notified Sheriff Charles W. Struble, of Kalamazoo, and the sheriff asked California officers to be on the lookout for Frechette and the missing automobile.

U. S. Refuses to Send Herrera Back to Cuba

New York, Feb. 7 (AP).—United States Commissioner Garrett W. Cotter today denied the request of the government of Cuba for the extradition of Gen. Alberto Herrera, former secretary of war and president of Cuba for a few hours, under a warrant charging him with the murder of Blas Maso, a member of a faction opposed to the Machado regime.

Commissioner Cotter ruled that the offense was of a political nature and therefore not extraditable under the extradition treaty now in force.

Bladensburg Firemen Name New Committees

Appointment of new membership and entertainment committees has been announced by the Bladensburg (Md.) Volunteer Fire Department.

The entertainment committee is composed of John Newshaw, Melvin Kent, Albert W. Fierstein, jr., Harry Jackson and Enos Bright.

Those named on the membership committee are Chief Andrew Gasch, George Schwab, William Norgle, William Wiseman and Carl Fierstein.

Fire Causes Damage Of $2,000 to Bees, Hives

Bees and hives of stored honey valued at approximately $2,000 were destroyed by fire of undetermined origin, which swept the barn of Fred Hagman, at Vienna, Va., yesterday.

Quick work on the part of the Vienna Volunteer Fire Department prevented the flames from spreading to nearby buildings.

Use of a Ferret Brings $20 Fine To Rabbit Hunter

Elizabeth, W. Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—Reverting to an ancient European custom of hunting, Okey Woodring, of Wirt County, has found the use of a ferret to catch rabbits an expensive proposition.

Woodring was picked up by Game Warden C. C. Carter, of Parkersburg, yesterday, who reported he found two dead rabbits in the defendant's possession as well as a ferret. The rabbits had been killed by the small red animal, which is banned in this State by the game laws.

Woodringht was arraigned before Justice John Boston at Elizabeth, who found him guilty of hunting out of season and owning a ferret. On the latter charge he was given a 60-day jail term and was fined $20 and costs on the former.

According to Carter, the appearance of the ferret in Wirt County was the first in a great many years.

R. M. Messick, U. S. Employe, Dead in Easton

Easton, Md., Feb. 7 (AP).—R. M. Messick, Army employe in Baltimore, died yesterday at his home here after an extended illness. He was 55 years old.

Mr. Messick was the grandson of the late Col. Arthur J. Willis, an officer in the Civil War and a cousin of the late Miss Anna M. Williams, whose profile adorns the silver dollar. He was the son of the late Senator R. M. Messick of Caroline County.

At the time of his death, Mr. Messick was a draftsman for the Army. Previously he had held Government positions in St. Louis and Washington. He was educated at Washington College, Pennsylvania Military College and at the University of Maryland.

Surviving are his widow; a son, Robert Messick, of Easton; two brothers, Oscar W. Messick, of Wilmington, N. C., and A. J. Messick, of Bethlehem, Md. He was associated with the latter in a canning business near here.

Funeral services will be held at his home tomorrow at 2 p. m. Interment will be in Spring Hill Cemetery, Easton.

Bradford Zirkle Buried

New Market, Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.) Bradford B. Zirkle, 81, well-known retired farmer and one of the two boys who discovered the famous Endless Caverns in 1879, was buried in St. Matthews Lutheran Cemetery here today.

Mr. Zirkle, with his brother, Clay, whose father formerly owned the Endless Caverns property, followed a rabbit into a hole in the foothills of the Massanutten Mountain in 1879 and discovered the cave.

Mr. Zirkle's death occurred Tuesday. Besides his widow, Mrs. Jane Aleshire Zirkle, a son, C. Hunter Zirkle, Harrisburg, Pa., and two sisters, Mrs. J. E. Biedler, New Market, and Mrs. J. Harvey Rosenberger, Washington, survive.

Rites for Mrs. Hubbard.

Cambridge, Md., Feb. 7 (AP).—Funeral services were held here today for Mrs. Linda C. Hubbard, widow of the late Rev. Edward Lecompte Hubbard. Burial was at Frederica, Del.

Mrs. Hubbard succumbed Tuesday after a long illness. She was born and brought up at Frederica. For the past 25 years she had resided at Castle Haven and Cambridge. Her husband died in 1924.

Surviving are a son, the Rev. Carlisle Lecompte Hubbard, of Cleveland; two daughters, Mrs. Linda Hubbard Stewart, of Baltimore, and Miss Agnes Hubbard, of Cambridge; four grandchildren and a great-grandchild.

Shaffer Services Today.

Winchester, Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—Services will be conducted tomorrow for William H. Shaffer, of this city, who died after a protracted illness, Tuesday. Burial will be near Lebanon, Shenandoah County.

Mr. Shaffer is survived by two sons, Carson and Newton, of Lebanon Church; a daughter, Mrs. Thomas Lillis, of this city; two brothers, Milton Shaffer, of New York, and Newton Shaffer, of Baltimore; and two sisters, Mrs. Ida Dove, Annapolis, and Mrs. Anna Bowers, of Martinsburg, W. Va.

Mrs. W. E. Crooks Dead.

Keyser, W. Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—Mrs. Alice Grey Crooks, wife of W. Ellsworth Crooks, died yesterday of pneumonia. She was a daughter of the late Dr. John B. and Harriet Clayter Harding, of Bedford Springs, Roanoke County, Va. She had resided in Keyser since October, 1894.

Surviving are her husband, and two daughters by a former marriage, Miss Harriet Estes, at home, and Mrs. Maurice Jones, New York.

Coal Utility Bill Urged on President

Guffey and Lewis Take Measure to Roosevelt.

Senator Joseph F. Guffey (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, yesterday took up with President Roosevelt his bill to declare the bituminous coal industry a public utility and to bring it under Federal regulation.

With him on his call at the White House was John L. Lewis, president of hte United Mine Workers. Lewis lately has been attacking the NRA and New Deal officials, but he said discussion today was limited to coal.

Beyond the statement that his conference was "very satisfactory," Senator Guffey declined to comment. He said he explained to the President provisions of his bill, which calls for creation of a Federal coal commission and appropriation of $300,000,000 to acquire a national coal reserve.

Editor's Mother Dies.

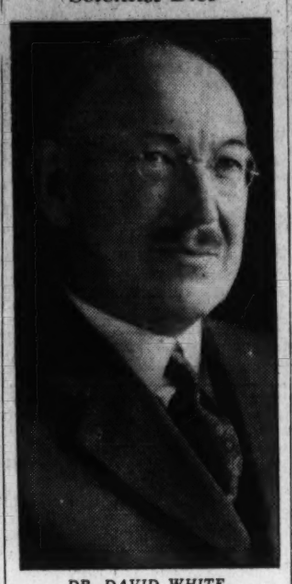
Scientist Dies



DR. DAVID WHITE.

Dr. White, 72, Head Geologist Of Survey, Dies

Noted Paleobotanist and Paleontologist; Rites Set Tomorrow.

Dr. David White, principal geologist of the Geological Survey and one of the Nation's most noted paleobotanists and paleontologists, died early yesterday morning in his sleep at his residence, 2812 Adams Mill road. He was 72 years old. Physicians said death was due to a cerebral hemorrhage.

For many years Dr. White was chief of the survey. When he left his administrative duties, he assumed the post he held at the time of his death.

Although past the retirement age, Dr. White remained actively attached to his department. President Hoover waived the retirement law in the scientist's case because he considered his services invaluable in the field of research and study.

Dr. White went to his office as usual on Wednesday, and when he retired Wednesday night apparently was in the best of health.

Born in Palmyra.

Born in Palmyra, N. Y., in 1862, Dr. White was graduated from Cornell University in 1886. He also held degrees from the University of Cincinnati, the University of Rochester and Williams College.

Immediately after leaving Cornell, Dr. White came to Washington with the Survey, and rose rapidly in his chosen field. He was particularly noted for his research in coal and oil.

In 1922, Dr. White was appointed a delegate to the International Geological Congress at Brussels, Belgium. In addition to his other duties, Dr. White was curator in paleobotany at the Smithsonian Institution, and an associate of the Carnegie Institution.

Member of Scientific Groups.

He was a member of the National Academy of Sciences, the Paleontological, Geological and Botanical Societies of America, the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers, the Washington Academy of Sciences, the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and the American Philosophical Society. He also was the author of various papers on geology and paleontology in the Government and in scientific publications.

Dr. White is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary Houghton White. Funeral services will be held at his residence tomorrow at 3 p. m. Burial will be private.

tutionality of the sale of the annuity temporarily upset this plan. The constitution requires the proceeds of the sale to be used for the State debt and not general funds. State's Attorney Herbert R. O'Conor had ruled that it could be legally sold and outlined a method.

Conferences Are Held.

The twin developments set in motion a series of conferences between Gov. Harry W. Nice, State Comptroller William S. Gordy, jr., the attorney general and others, to seek a means of raising needed revenue. The House ways and means committee and Senate finance committee simultaneously began their consideration of the budget and other possible measures of revenue.

The State Board of Public Works, consisting of the Governor, State Comptroller William S. Gordy, jr., and Hooper S. Miles, State treasurer, met in the Governor's office, after the legislative session, to consider the situation. The attorney general and William Lee Rawls, Baltimore attorney and constitutional authority, met with them.

Comptroller Gordy declared he thought some way would be devised within the "next 24 hours" to clear the situation so that a loan at least could be negotiated.

Fears on Employes' Pay

The shortage in the treasury raised fears as to the possibility of the State to meet payments due to employes on February 14. The comptroller would not comment on this, pointing out that February 14 "was quite a time off."

It was pointed out that $5,849,513.19 is due the State in back taxes, including $3,589,071.37 for the current year.

Some of this money may be received at any time, and a substantial payment would ease the situation. The State, under the constitution, also is empowered to borrow $50,000 from time to time to meet its needs.

Although the State had $5,826,293.66 available on January 31, it was pointed out that practically all this is earmarked for definite purposes. An item of $1,394,418.88 represents Federal funds advanced for relief, while $984,301.94 is in the State roads bond issue fund and $591,887.01 in the State roads debt service fund.

Other funds are earmarked to the annuity bond fund, the State accident fund, the Federal highway fund, schools and vocational education.

At the comptroller's office, it was learned that the State expected to be in a position to meet $1,500,000 in bond redemptions and interest falling due on February 15. This would involve a shifting of funds for the purpose.

Carran prevailing wage amendment was said to be as follows:

For—Senators Copeland, Thomas, Russell, McCarran, O'Mahoney, McAdoo and Truman (Democrats), and Keyes, Steiwer, Dickinson, Townsent and Carey (Republicans),—12.

Against—Senators Glass, Hayden, Byrnes, Coolidge, Adams and Bankhead (Democrats), and Hale and Norbeck (Republicans),—8.

Pressure for immediate passage of the work measure was eased yesterday, after Federal Relief Administrator Hopkins disclosed he now has funds to last through February 20. Secretary of Interior Ickes revealed $50,000,000 has been transferred to FERA out of a total of $180,000,000 in unobligated PWA funds. Up until Wednesday, Administration forces argued the works bill must be passed by tomorrow, or FERA money would be exhausted.

Poor Health of Officer, Night Club Victim, Cited

San Francisco, Feb. 7 (AP).—Two physicians testified today at the inquest of Maj. Charles A. Ross, who died in a stairway scuffle early Tuesday at a night club, that the Army officer's heart was in such serious condition any unusual emotion or exertion would have killed him.

The club owners, Clem Gaviati and Joe Vanessi, and the head waiter, Sam Erlich, former tavern keeper at Linden, N. J., are charged with manslaughter.

Long Takes Both Sides in Debate Within an Hour

Senator Huey Long (Democrat), Louisiana, showed the Senate a new trick yesterday, arguing on both sides of a question within an hour.

He first supported a proposal by Senator Carey (Rebublican), Wyoming, to permit loans to live stock farm corporations, then, in a few minutes was leading the debate against it, the Associated Press reported.

Legion of Maryland To Banquet Friday

Baltimore, Feb. 6 (AP).—World War veterans from all sections of the State are expected here Friday to attend the annual banquet of the American Legion of Maryland. Frank N. Belgrano, national commander of the organization, will speak. Gov. Harry W. Nice and Mayor Howard W. Jackson, of Baltimore, are expected to be among the 1,500 persons present.

J. F. McNulty, commander of the Maryland Department, said so many reservations have been received it will be impossible to seat all persons in the Lord Baltimore Hotel ballroom, but provisions have been made for all to enter during the national commander's speech.

West Virginia Company Bids Low on Park Road

The Keeley Construction Co., of Clarksburg, W. Va., was low bidder yesterday, according to the Associated Press, on construction of 7.3 miles of skyline drive in Shenandoah National Park. The Keeley company's bid was $501,015. The contract called for grading and subsurfacing with crushed stone within 375 days from the date the award is made.

Approximately 34 miles of the drive already has been completed, and an additional 33 miles are under contract. The stretch on which the bid was opened yesterday is from Swift Run Gap to Simmons Gap.

Long Submits To Local Court In Libel Answer

Huey Contends 'Public Duty' in Reply to Suit by Ansell.

Senator Huey P. Long, of Louisiana, twice frustrated in efforts to escape a $500,000 libel suit here, finally filed a formal answer to the complaint against him in District Supreme Court yesterday. He thus legally submitted to the jurisdiction of the local court.

Damages are being sought from Long by Brig. Gen. Samuel T. Ansell, counsel to the Senate committee which investigated the election of Long's junior colleague, Senator John H. Overton. Ansell complained that Long had mailed out copies of a Senate speech attacking him libelously.

In his answer, Long fell back on a claim of congressional immunity. He added also that he had been actuated by a sense of "public duty." He said his charges could be substantiated to relieve him of liability, should the immunity claim be disregarded.

New attacks on Ansell were contained in the answer which charged Ansell with irregularities in practicing before the Board of Tax Appeals; with allegedly improperly preparing his own appointment as judge advocate general of the Army, and with aiding Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, so-called "draft dodger," to flee from the United States.

Huey Long a Menace, Italian Paper Says.

Turin, Italy, Feb. 7 (U.P.).—"Senator Huey Long, and not floods, is the real menace to the Mississippi Basin," the newspaper La Stampa said editorially today.

After asserting Long's wealth program had been tried experimentally several times by humanity, culminating in Lenin's communist state, La Stampa admits a more equitable distribution of wealth certainly represents the most urgent problem facing all civilized countries. The paper warns, however, that "it is necessary to proceed with greater intelligence and civilized action."

John D. Rockefeller's Son Is Fingerprinted

Rockefeller had his prints taken after hearing J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the United States Department of Justice division of investigation, urge all citizens to have their prints filed at the Bureau of identification at Washington.

Murray Sees Ill Omen In Tilt of Huey's Nose

Brownsville, Tex., Feb. 7 (AP).—W. M. (Alfalfa Bill) Murray, who retired last month as Oklahoma's Governor, thinks there's something ominous about the upturn of Senator Huey Long's nose. Here today for a rest, Murray observed:

"There was a French revolutionist once whose nose turned up the way Huey Long's does. He started the revolution and came out of it with his head chopped off for his pains."

Fisch's Friend, On Stand, Calls Reilly a 'Liar'

"Yes."

"In your business connections did you ever see him write or print anything?"

"Yes."

Reilly picked up the envelope in which the second ransom note was inclosed—one that contained the cruel lie that the child, already dead on Sourland Mountain, was "well and in gut care."

"Does the lettering on this envelope resemble Fisch's writing?"

"I don't know," Uhlig replied.

Then he told about coming back to America after Fisch died and going to see Hauptmann. Uhlig said he wanted to get the suitcases and box which Fisch left with Hauptmann. That shoe-box, according to Hauptmann, is the one that contained the $14,600 ransom. Uhlig said Hauptmann refused to turn Fisch's belongings over to him.

They let Uhlig go then, and he walked out of the courtroom. He didn't smile at Hauptmann.

In the closing hours of the defense's case Walter Manley got out of his sickbed to testify that he, too, was in Fredericksen's bakery in the Bronx on the fateful night of March 1, 1932. He got there about 8:15 o'clock he said. An hour later somebody—miles away in New Jersey—kidnaped Charles A. Lindbergh, jr.

"Did you see Mrs. Hauptmann in the bakery?" asked Reilly.

"Yes."

Manley was pale and trembling.

"Did you see anybody else there?"

"Yes, that man over there."

Points to Hauptmann.

Manley gripped the arm of the witness chair with one hand and with the other pointed to Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

That testimony brought to five the number of persons who have sworn they saw Hauptmann in or near the bakery that night. They are Mrs. Hauptmann, Elvert Carlstrom, Louis Kiss, August Van Henke and Manley.

Much of today was devoted to wrangling over a yellow piece of wood that is an upright in one section of the ladder that was found 70 feet from the Lindbergh house after the baby had been kidnaped. The State contends Hauptmann ran short of lumber when he was building the ladder, so he went up into his own attic and ripped away the yellow board and used it.

Arthur Koehler, Department of Agriculture wood expert, spent almost two days testifying that this board came from the Hauptmann attic.

Today the defense produced Charles De Bisschopp, of Waterbury, Conn., who said he was not a wood expert, but a "practical lumber man."

This yellow board, De Bisschopp said, bore no relation to the rest of the floorboards in Hauptmann's attic. He swore that it was his opinion that neither the grain nor the knots in the attic wood and the board in the ladder corresponded. De Bisschopp comes back tomorrow to complete his story.

Hint Bruno Was Framed.

This yellow piece of board is identified in court as "rail 16." That is the number written on it by the court clerk when he tagged every separate piece of wood in the ladder.

Hauptmann's lawyers have fought stubbornly to overcome testimony to the effect that their client took rail 16 out of his own attic. They even have brought forward hints and insinuations that Hauptmann was framed by police who took the ladder to pieces in the course of their investigation. The insinuation is that the police threw away the original rail 16 and built a board from Hauptmann's attic back into the ladder.

That was the line of testimony that Dr. E. M. Hudson, a New York fingerprint expert, was proceeding along today. It all simmered down to a question of nail holes in rail 16.

Other Witnesses.

Hudson said that when he came into the Lindbergh case—about the middle of March, 1932—he examined the ladder with a magnifying glass and found only one nail hole in rail 16.

Today there are four nail holes in rail 16.

How they got there, nobody has explained. Wilentz contends they were there all the time and that Hudson simply didn't see them.

Karl Henkel was on the stand briefly today to testify that he never suspected his wife, Gerta, and Hauptmann of improper relations. Hauptmann admitted he used to drop by and drink coffee with Mrs. Henkel on occasions when her husband was not at home. Then Mrs. Augusta Hile, Mrs. Henkel's mother-in-law, testified she lent $4,300 to Isador Fisch and never was repaid.

Three Sourland Mountain residents testified that Millard Whited, a State witness, had a poor reputation for veracity. Earlier in the trial Whited testified he saw Hauptmann near the Lindbergh home about the time of the kidnaping.

Defense Pushes Case Toward Finish

Fight Centers on Ladder as Hudson Clings to His Story.

Flemington, N. J., Feb. 7 (AP).—Dr. Erastus M. Hudson, a New York physician who has made a hobby of fingerprints, was still a hope of the defense today as the murder trial of Bruno Hauptmann edged near to a conclusion.

Associate Defense Counsel Frederick A. Pope asked Dr. Hudson to identify some sketches and notes he made after examining the kidnap ladder. Pope offered the memorandums in evidence, but Attorney General David T. Wilentz requested the offer be deferred until he examined the witness. Pope acquiesced.

Wilentz began cross-examination of Dr. Hudson on his specimen charts of fingerprints taken from the kidnap ladder. The witness said he made the charts during March, 1932, from measurements made at the Lindbergh estate from the prints on the ladder.

Q. You were mistaken yesterday in your testimony about the nail holes and the knot in rail 16 (ladder upright)?—A. I told what I thought. I have other notes, not here.

Q. Is there any reference to any nail holes in those charts (indicating those in the witness' hand)?—A. No sir.

Quizzed on Nail Holes.

Wilentz soon turned to the physician's statement he saw only one nail hole where the State contends there were four.

Q. You appreciate the importance of the nail holes in this case?—A. No, I can't say I do.

Q. Very well, do you remember how many nail holes you observed in the ladder rails?—A. I saw only one hole made by a square-cut nail.

Q. In all the uprights, how many nail holes did you see?—A. Only one.

Q. By the way, do the New York police use your fingerprint method?—A. I have no idea.

Q. On March 1, 1932, your process was not being used by the police departments?—A. As far as I know, they were not.

Q. You knew the New Jersey State police did not know about your process?—A. They were very glad to hear about it.

Q. So far as you know no police department in the country used your method?—A. Not as far as I know.

The attorney general showed the witness a picture of nail holes in the ladder.

Q. Assuming that this picture was taken in March, 1932, would you agree that possibly you were mistaken in your testimony?—A. Well, under your premise, I would say yes.

Q. If this piece of wood were examined in March, April, May, 1932, by persons other than the State police and they saw those four nail holes and filed reports on their finding, would that induce you to believe you had been mistaken?—A. No, it would not.

Q. If United States Government experts found those nail holes and so reported, would that induce you to change your opinion?—A. No, sir, it would not.

Attack on State Witness.

William Whitehead was called by the defense. The defense planned to use the witness to attack the credibility of Millard Whited, the State witness who placed Hauptmann twice near the Lindbergh home prior to the crime.

The witness said he was 54 years old and had known Millard Whited all his life. The questions were put by C. Lloyd Fisher, co-counsel for defense.

Q. What's the reputation of Millard Whited for veracity?—A. No good.

Fisher released the witness and Wilentz asked if Millard Whited had ever been in jail.

Whitehead said no.

"Have you ever been in jail?" Wilentz asked.

"I were," Whitehead replied.

"That's all," said Wilentz.

George E. Lenz, another witness on Whited's credibility, followed.

He said he lived in Hopewell, at Featherbed lane, and had known Whited for 20 years.

Q. What is the reputation of Millard Whited for telling the truth? Fisher asked.

A. Not good.

Wilentz took the witness.

Q. You and Mr. Whited had some difficulty between you?—A. Yes, sir.

Lenz said the "controversy" was over a purchase of lumber for which the logger allegedly had not paid.

Another Hopewell Resident.

William Diehl, another Hopewell resident, was then sworn.

He told Fisher he knew Whited.

Q. What is his reputation for truthfulness?—A. 'Taint any good.

Wilentz showed Diehl a small note-book sheet. This allegedly was his signed statement that he had not discussed Whited's reputation. Diehl said he signed it, but could not read it. He understood, he said, it concerned Whited.

Mrs. Augusta Hile, the mother-in-law of Gerta Henkel, was the next witness.

She told Edward J. Reilly, chief defense counsel, she knew Isador Fisch ever since he came to this country.

Q. Did he borrow some money from you?—A. $4,350.

Q. Did he pay you back before he sailed from Germany?—A. Not a cent.

"When did you last see him?" Reilly asked.

"Oh, I see him the second of December (1933)."

Mrs. Hile said she loaned the money, "in three parts," to Fisch. Part of it went into a pie-baking concern and part in furs.

Karl Henkel, husband of Gerta, was then sworn.

Q. How long do you know Isador Fisch?—A. Since 1926.

Q. How long do you know Hauptmann?—A. Since 1932.

Reilly was conducting the examination.

Q. Where did you meet Fisch?—A. We had an apartment together in 1928. (With Fisch and Henry Uhlig.)

Q. You were married then and went to live with your wife?—A. Yes. Fisch and Uhlig stayed together.

Friendly With Bruno.

Henkel said his wife met Hauptmann about eight days before he met him. Subsequently he said he and Hauptmann became friendly.

Q. Did you know Hauptmann used to drop in and have coffee at your house in the morning?—A. Yes.

Q. Have you ever had the slightest thought there was anything irregular or improper in their relation?

An objection blocked the answer.

Q. Did you ever see anything improper?—A. No.

Q. Ever feel there was anything improper?—A. Never.

Wilentz, in cross-examination, brought from Henkel that he had introduced Hauptmann to Fisch in his own home.

Q. Did your wife bring Hauptmann to your home and introduce you?—A. No.

Uhlig, the mutual friend of Hauptmann and Fisch, was called. He described himself as "Fisch's best friend."

He related briefly how he, Fisch and Henkel lived together when they came to his country.

Q. What business was he in?—A. Fur cutter.

Uhlig said Fisch also had been in the pie-making business, and had operated as a fur trader.

Q. He lent you money when you didn't work? Reilly asked.—A. He did not, that's a lie.

Q. He paid your fare to Germany?—A. With money I lent him to invest in his phony bakery.

The German furrier coughed, he said, and retired early because of his condition.

The witness recalled there was no limit on the amount of American money a traveler could bring into Germany when he and Fisch arrived there in December, 1933. He explained, however, that to exchange dollars for marks, a traveler would have to go to a government bureau.

Uhlig described a traveling bag bought by Fisch.

Q. What did he have in it?—A. I don't know.

Uhlig said that on arrival they went to the home of Fisch's parents.

Q. Did you at any time see Fisch give his sister any papers?—A. No, sir.

Q. Sure about that?—A. Yes.

Uhlig said he visited the family only twice a week.

Q. Did you ever see any bundles in Fisch's possession?—A. Yes.

Q. Did he have two suitcases?—A. Yes.

Q. He took them to Hauptmann?—A. Yes, I went down in the garage and saw them.

Q. You take them?—A. I don't remember.

Q. In particular you went for a little, small package Fisch left with him?

Reilly was striving to bring back into the picture the ransom money shoe box, but the State objected to the question and was sustained.

The defense chief then inquired whether Fisch spoke with a Saxon dialect. Uhlig said he did, explaining Fisch had been born in Saxony.

Q. And he wrote, did he not, with a Saxony script?—A. Yes.

Reilly then began inquiries as to a fur cutter friend of Fisch named Kern.

Witness Shown Envelope.

Uhlig could not say where the man lived March 4, 1932.

Reilly exhibited an envelope mailed March 4, 1932.

Q. Does that resemble Fisch's printing?—A. I don't know.

Q. Where did Hauptmann live in March, 1932?—A. I don't know.

Q. Where did he live in the fall of 1932?—A. I don't know. I met him at Henkel's house.

The attorney general asked Uhlig one question in cross-examination.

Q. Mr. Fisch was an American citizen, was he not?—A. Yes, sir.

Walter Manley, a painter from the Bronx, was then called.

Reilly asked him if he were familiar with the Fredericksen bakery, where Hauptmann said he had been on the kidnap night.

Manley said he was.

Q. On March 1, 1932, were you in that bakery?—A. Yes, I was.

Q. What time were you there?—A. About quarter to seven.

Q. Did you see Mrs. Hauptmann there?—A. Yes, she waited on me.

Q. See anyone else there who is in the courtroom?—A. Yes, Mr. Hauptmann.

Q. Where was he?—A. In the front of the bakery.

Wilentz asked if Manley knew the Hauptmanns. He said he did not, but had seen the defendant's picture in the paper.

Manley said Hauptmann was drinking a cup of coffee when he was in the bakery.

Wood Expert Called.

A defense wood expert, Charles A. de Bisschopp, of Waterbury, Conn., was called.

Q. Have you made a study of the ladder rail No. 16 and this piece of wood (the attic floor board)?—A. Yes, three times.

Q. I ask you from your study do you believe they are all a part of the same board, then sawed apart, and that a missing piece of an inch and three-eighths once existed between them?—A. I can say they are not.

Q. Is there anything in these boards to lead you to believe they came from the same tree?—A. No, there is not.

The attorney general got from the witness that he was called into the case Monday and that his entire study of the ladder and connected exhibits took only three hours yesterday afternoon.

Wilentz continued his cross-examination beyond the customary adjournment hour, without interruption by Justice Trenchard.

Wilentz agreed to adjourn until tomorrow, although he said he had expected the defense to rest tonight.

2 Speculators Are Subpenaed To Arms Probe

Bragg and Smith Called; Past Witnesses May Be Accused of Perjury.

(Associated Press.)

Subpenas for two stock market speculators and a move toward possible perjury action against past witnesses emerged in quick succession yesterday from the Senate Munitions Committee.

The committee issued the subpenas to bring before it Ben Smith and Thomas Bragg, some of whose speculative activities have been heard about before on Capitol Hill.

They will be questioned concerning reports that "Washington contacts" tipped them to buy New York Shipbuilding Corporation stock before PWA money was turned into the naval construction program.

Garnett Gets Record.

Shortly after the committee made known the subpena issuances, it also disclosed it had turned over to the U. S. district attorney, Leslie Garnett, a record of last week's testimony for him to determine whether conflicting stories told about an alleged ship contract "fixer" involved possible perjury.

In a verbal statement, Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, said all records bearing on testimony that a "fixer" had offered to secure naval contracts for Gulf Industries, of Pensacola, a shipbuilding firm, for a "consideration" of $250,000 had been turned over.

Yesterday's testimony brought a story of a Wall Street race for stock of the New York Shipbuilding Corporation that concluded with Gene Tunney, former heavyweight champion, sharing the "saddle" with the Cord Corporation, a power in the industrial world.

Rise of Stock.

The committee was given evidence that the stock buying saw the New York corporation quotations climb from $3.50 a share to $22.50 in a six-months period following the inauguration of President Roosevelt.

It was this rocketing price of New York Shipbuilding stock that set the committee off on the track of a "Washington contact."

Asked if Tunney would be called as a witness, Senator Clark (Democrat), Missouri, asked:

"Why should we?"

Tunney was described as sitting on the board of directors for Smith and Bragg, representing their half interest, while representatives of Cord Corporation, once headed by the noted automobile manufacturer, E. L. Cord, comprised the rest of the board.

Manning Testifies.

L. B. Manning, chairman of the board of Cord Corporation and of the New York Shipbuilding Corporation, testified that his organization held half the stock while the two represented by Tunney held the balance, the two groups taking control in August, 1933.

"It seems to me that Bragg and Smith must have given you some assurance they would get some public works money," Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, insisted.

"We had no such assurance," Manning replied. "Anybody could have known it. The newspapers were full of it."

"Did you buy into New York Ship," Vandenberg continued, "because you hoped Ben Smith and Tom Bragg could remove part of the speculation out of the investment through their Washington contacts?"

"It's still quite a speculation," Manning replied. He said the company had sought to keep politics out.

Question of Vandenberg.

"Is that why you hired the Democratic secretary of state of New York as soon as you took over?" Vandenberg insisted.

"That had nothing to do with it," Manning asserted.

Vandenberg said he referred to Edward J. Flynn as the treasurer, but he declined to indicate the "Washington contacts" he referred to.

Earlier the committee introduced evidence in the form of letters that the New York corporation had sent checks of $250 each to two New Jersey ministers for aiding in settlement of the shipyards strike last spring. The two were named as the Rev. John Pemberton, jr., of the Centenary Tabernacle, Methodist Episcopal Church in Camden, and the Rev. Harold P. Sloan, of Woodbury.

The committee recessed until Monday, when it will begin examination of officials of the Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co.

Radio Stations Asked to Guide Pacific Planes

(Associated Press.)

The pioneering ocean flights of Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh yesterday guided the Pan-Amerian Airways application for construction permits to build five radio stations as a step toward a trans-Pacific airline.

The applications filed with the Federal Communications Commission proposed a chain extending across the Pacific toward the Philippines. Permits were asked for construction of directional aeronautical radio stations at Alameda, Calif., at Kaneohe Bay in the Hawaiian Islands, on one of the Midway islands, on Wake Island and on Guam in the Marianas group.

While plans of the company were not detailed, the recent transfer of Wake Island from the Interior Department to the War Department for administrative purposes and statements of Postmaster General Farley in his annual report were taken as indications that an early start of trans-Pacific service could be expected.

Airmail Service Foreseen.

Farley told Congress he hoped to start airmail service direct to the Orient before the end of 1935 and trans-Atlantic service within a short time thereafter.

The applications, which were not made public because of commission formalities, asked for permission to establish directional point-to-point stations with a beam radius of 1800 miles instead of the usual 300-mile radius for land stations.

The pioneering work on the Pacific air route was undertaken in 1931 by Col. Lindbergh. It was on this trip that his wife, the former Anne Morrow, first began aiding him by radio experiments. They flew the North Pacific, arriving in Japan August 26, 1931, and later going on to China. They did not complete their trip, however, because Mrs. Lindbergh's father, Dwight Morrow, died and they were called home.

Flying Boat in Service.

The Pan-American recently put into trial service on its Caribbean Sea route to South America, one large flying boat that was understood to be intended for the trans-Pacific service. This is one of the largest planes ever built and sister ships are said to be under construction.

The longest hop of the trans-Pacific service would be from the mainland of the United States to Hawaii, a distance of approximately 1,800 miles, all over water.

If the radio stations asked for mark the exact route to be followed, the route would swing slightly north from Kaneohe Bay to a point in the Midway Islands, about 600 miles from Hawaii. There it would swing south about 600 miles to Wake Island, thence 500 miles to Guam, a United States possession, at the south end of the Japanese mandated Marianas. Guam is about 600 miles from Manila, the Philippine capital being a comparatively short flight from either China or Japan at that point.

'No, Sir; No, Sir,' Rudy Sings; Fay Offers to Drop Her Suit

New York, Feb. 7 (AP).—With Fay Webb sobbing, her father accusing her estranged husband, Rudy Vallee, of teaching her to drink liquor and opposing counsel hurling charges of "blackmail" and "bluffer," the bizarre Webb-Vallee suit almost came to a close today.

As Supreme Justice Salvatore Cotillo pounded his gavel for order, Thomas I. Sheridan, counsel to the crooning orchestra leader's wife, offered to drop her suit to invalidate a $100 weekly separate maintenance agreement.

His surprising offer was based on two contingencies—Fay would sue Vallee in New York for divorce on charges of misconduct and Vallee would agree to break the separate maintenance agreement. He also offered to drop a California maintenance suit.

Vallee's array of counsel seemed bewildered for a moment, the crooner lost his complacency as he hastily conferred with them and then they all chorused:

"No, sir; no, sir!"

For hours the opposing attorneys wrangled about the alleged telephonic records of Mrs. Webb's conversations with Gary Leon, adagio dancer, and the details of the conference at which the agreement was signed.

Finally, after Justice Cotillo said he would "go into the question of whether Mrs. Vallee was a dutiful wife," the hearing resumed with Mrs. Vallee's father, Clarence Webb, police chief of Santa Monica, Calif., on the witness stand.

"There is the man who taught my daughter to drink," the gray-haired father suddenly burst forth, pointing to Vallee. "When my daughter married Vallee she was not a drinking girl. After he plied her with liquor he would bring her home drunk. I lay it all on that young man there."

Risky Ceilings Close a School In Mt. Rainier

Elementary Pupils Enjoy Holiday as Repairs Are Ordered.

Pupils of the Mount Rainier Elementary School were enjoying a vacation yesterday after Prince Georges County officials ordered the school closed because of the danger of falling ceilings.

Nicholas Orem, county school superintendent, said that while there was but small chance that the ceilings would fall, he did not feel that even that small risk should be allowed. He consequently ordered all ceilings replaced.

The work is being done with ERA labor. All emergency relief workers on county school projects have been ordered to Mount Rainier and it is expected that the institution, which closed Wednesday, will be ready for use Monday morning. The cost to the county will be approximately $300.

Mr. Orem said the danger of plaster falling was first noticed by the local janitor, who notified the county office at Upper Marlboro. After an inspection the superintendent ordered one of the rooms replastered.

As the workmen attempted to remove the old plaster from one ceiling it began to crumble. Remembering that the basement ceiling had fallen several years ago, a complete renovation was decided upon.

Mr. Orem pointed out that the plastering, which he feels was not properly laid when the building was erected, was "renailed" several years ago. Plastered ceilings have been done away with in all Prince Georges County schools, except the Mount Rainier Elementary, he said.

Planning Board Urges $414,700 Public Projects

13 Works Proposed in Worcester County's Relief Program.

Berlin, Md., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—Construction of 13 work relief projects in Worcester County, costing $414,700 as part of the proposed $4,000,000,000 Federal public works program, was formally proposed last night at a meeting of the newly organized Worcester Works Relief Planning Board.

The $414,700 improvement program was prepared by the planning board from projects submitted by Ocean City, Snow Hill, Pocomoke City, the Worcester County Board of Commissioners and by the Worcester County Board of Education.

The projects follow:

Worcester County Almshouse for Aged, $83,000; Ocean City sewage disposal plant, $75,000; new municipal hall at Snow Hill, $45,000; new municipal hall at Pocomoke City, $35,000; Ocean City bayfront bulkhead, $25,000; county public roads, $25,000; new school buildings for Negroes at Pocomoke, Berlin and Snow Hill, costing $15,000 each, totaling $45,000; Snow Hill street widening project, costing $10,000; deepening-draining the Pocomoke River between Snow Hill and Delaware line, $10,200; construction of bay bulkhead at public landing, $7,500; erection fire protection reserve water tanks at Newark, Bishopville, Stockton, Girdletree, Whaleyville, costing $10,000 each, totaling $50,000; Pocomoke City sewer improvements, $2,000, and painting major county schools built since 1930, $2,500.

The town of Berlin has not submitted any works relief projects to date, the board announced.

Daring 'Possum Captures a Hen At Leonardtown

Leonardtown, Md., Feb. 7 (Spl.). A resident of Leonardtown hearing a commotion in her hen house last night, called to her son to bring a flashlight and rushed out to find an eight-pound 'possum with a six-pound hen in his jaws. He refused to release the hen until beaten over the head with a stick, when he retreated into a corner, snarling. There the woman piled bricks on him until nothing was visible but his tail. He was later released. The hen had to be killed.

Wild things are driven to boldness by cold and hunger, coming right into the town, officials report.

J. Y. Himelright Burned, Recovery Is in Doubt

Winchester, Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—Suffering with severe burns, John Y. Himelright, 82, retired farmer, of Star Tannery, prominent in county Democratic circles, is a patient in a hospital here. Doubts are entertained that he will recover.

Mr. Himelright was alone in his house at the time of injury. He had been resting on a cot, and when he attempted to stand up, fell backward to the floor between a stove and the wall. Dazed, he called for assistance, but some time elapsed before Mrs. John M. Himelright, his daughter-in-law, returned. She found his clothing smoldering, his left arm and side and left side of face severely burned.

Prince Georges Garbage Plant Rejection Seen

Municipal Officers Group, Civic Units Condemn Project at Hearing.

Defeat of the proposed bill drafted by the Prince Georges (Md.) County Community Council and the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission for the collection and disposal of garbage and refuse in the metropolitan suburban area was spelled at a public hearing Wdnesday night in Hyattsville.

Practically a unanimous vote of representatives of the Prince Georges Municipal Officers Association and many citizens' groups was recorded against putting such a system in operation at present. It was generally recognized that ultimately the area would require some modern method of collection and disposal of refuse, but majority opinion was that the estimated cost of installation would be prohibitive until better times are seen.

As a means to eliminate unsightly and insanitary dumps in the county, representatives of both incorporated and unincorporated towns voted unanimously in favor of an amendment to the present sanitary district law by which the sanitary commission would be authorized to buy or rent suitable dumps for trash and to maintain them. The motion to draft the amendment was made by Dr. Thomas B. Symons of College Park.

Financed by Water Revenue.

According to T. Howard Duckett, chairman of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission, the purchase or rent of dump sites would be financed from surplus water rent receipts without affecting the tax rate. Water rent receipts now are slightly in excess of $300,000 a year.

Drafting of the amendment was assigned to the committee of the community council, which includes Dr. C. P. Close of College Park, chairman; former State Senator Oliver Metzerott and Prof. S. S. Steinberg of the University of Maryland; Dr. H. T. Willis, Mayor of Hyattsville; William A. Carson, Mayor of Riverdale; Norman A. Pruitt, Mayor of Mount Ranier; members of the legislative committee of the county Municipal Officers Association, of which Bird H. Dolby is chairman, and the sanitary commission.

It was explained by Mr. Metzerott that under an amendment to the law the sanitary commission not only will be able to acquire dumps and supervise them, but can charge fees for licenses for use.

$10 Per Capita Charge.

Under provisions of the defeated bill, a collection and disposal system would cost each householder approximately $10 a year. With fewer collections this could be reduced to about $5.50 a year per householder. It was brought out by representatives of several towns that a number were now collecting and disposing of their own trash and garbage at a much lower cost. It was admitted, however, that in most instances it was not known where the refuse was taken.

The defeated bill also would have provided for erection of a central disposal plant, to be financed through a bond issue of $100,000, which would take care of two plants in Prince Georges and Montgomery counties. The bonds would be amortized through surplus water revenues and a small ad valorem property tax.

England Revives 1904 Kidnap Case; Suspect Fled Here

Sheffield, England, Feb. 7 (AP).—Henry Ross, 69, was committed to trial today on a charge of kidnaping a child in England 31 years ago and taking him to New Jersey.

The prosecutor charged that in 1904 Ross obtained permission to take John William Whitnear, 4, on a fishing trip. Instead, the prosecutor said, they boarded a ship for the United States and settled in Newark.

Authorities quoted Ross as saying the boy's mother "told me I was the father of her son and on several occasions had told me to take John away."

This was denied by the mother, who has since remarried.

Ross, who lived in Newark as Harry John Ingle, the prosecutor said, returned to England in 1922. A warrant for his arrest had been issued in 1904, but was not served until eight days ago. He will be tried at the next assizes and was released on bail.

Examination Scheduled For Postmaster's Job

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.). The commission of Capt. Gunyon M. Harrison as postmaster at Fredericksburg expires February 25 and the United States Civil Service Commission has announced an open competitive examination for the position.

Capt. Harrison, who has been postmaster for the past 12 years, during which time he has served four presidents, is an applicant for reappointment. Other seekers of the office are Horace F. Crismond and Dr. R. J. Payne. Salary of the office at this time is $3,300, less 5 per cent.

Murder Charges Faced By Virginia Youth, 16

Powhatan, Va., Feb. 7 (AP).—Lloyd Talley, 16, today faced charges of murder here in the early morning shooting of Cary D. Clements, 30. He was given a preliminary hearing this afternoon.

Young Talley was reported as saying the shooting was in self-defense. Witnesses reported it took place after an all-night session of "rummy." Talley is the son of J. L. Talley, of Powhatan County.

Two Colonels In Marines Win Brigadier Rank

Buttrick and Vogel Promoted; Other Changes Are Announced.

Two colonels of the Marine Corps were named brigadier generals yesterday when it was announced that President Roosevelt had indorsed the findings of the Marine Senior Selection Board.

Ma. Gen. John H. Russell, commandant of the corps, was president of the board which started work early in January. In addition to the colonels named as generals, 10 lieutenant colonels were raised to become full colonels and 13 majors were promoted to the rank of lieutenant colonel.

The new brigadier generals are: James T. Buttrick and Clayton B. Vogel. The following lieutenant colonels were named colonels: John R. Henley, Ross E. Rowell, Paul A. Capron, John Potts, Edward A. Ostermann, John Marston, Samuel M. Harrington, Harold L. Parsons, Julian C. Smith and Charles J. Miller.

The new lieutenant colonels, raised from the rank of major, are David L. S. Brewster, Harold S. Fassett, James T. Moore, Louis Whaley, Thomas E. Bourke, LeRoy P. Hunt, Clifton 3. Cates, Leo D. Hermle, Lemuel C. Shepherd, Frank Whitehead, Roswell Winans, Robert Blake and Alfred Noble.

Cavalry Reserve Seek Assignments With CCC

Richmond, Va., Feb. 7 (AP).—Headquarters of the Sixty-second Cavalry, an organized reserve unit, today began getting in touch with holders of reserve commissions in this corps area in anticipation of opportunities for service with the Civilian Conservation Corps.

Maj. James C. R. Chwenck, in charge of the move here, said it was rumored in Army circles that possibly 500 reserve officers in the Third Corps Area will be assigned to duty.

Two West Virginians Hurt as Car Tips Over

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—Mrs. George Michaels, 70, suffered a fractured pelvis and collar bone and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Harry Michaels, spine and side injuries this afternoon when the automobile in which they were riding from their home near Berkeley Springs, W. Va., to this city, skidded east of Hedgesville and turned over on an embankment.

St. Mary's Farmers Cut, Store Ice for Summer

Leonardtown, Md., Feb. 7 (Spl.). Taking advantage of the 8-inch ice covering the rivers and bays for many miles on St. Marys County's shore line, thrifty farmers are filling their icehouses as their fathers did before them. The firm ice will keep from one year to the next when properly stored, it frequently being necessary to remove last year's remains when preparing for the new supply. A full icehouse is a great saving to those living any distance from towns where commercial ice is sold.

Contracts' Test In Montgomery Believed Likely

Question as to Legality of Agreements Voted by Commissioners.

Legality of contracts with employes, voted by the Montgomery County commissioners, probably will be tested, it was indicated yesterday.

Revelation that there is some question as to the legality of the transaction which was evolved by the commissioners to defeat the purpose of several bills pending in the General Assembly to change patronage control in the county treasurer's office and to abolish the liquor control board and reduce salaries of the chief of police and county assessor came at the meeting yesterday from County Commissioner Robert D. Hagner, Democrat.

In the course of an argument over some minor appointment detail, Hagner burst out:

"You fellows think you are smart with your contract business. Perhaps you don't know those contracts aren't worth the paper they are printed on. County commissioners can only contract up to $250 for labor and $500 for material without auvertising for bids, according to the law."

The board took no official cognizance of the statement, but informally directed Edward Peter, counsel, whose $5,000-a-year salary is one of those to be protected by contract to guard against reduction by legislative action, to delve into the law on the subject.

Clarksburg Announces Employment Unit Shifts

Clarksburg, W. Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.). Sweeping changes in the executive staff of the Clarksburg area Federal reemployment service include the transfer here as assistant manager of Arte M. Starling, of Parkersburg, formerly manager of the service at Beckley. He succeeds P. Maybury Harrison.

Other appointments to the Clarksburg area staff include Miss Margaret Curran, of Wheeling; Paul Spurgeon, of Morgantown, and Bryan McQuain, of Glenville.

Cutter Rescues Yacht Imperiled by Drift Ice

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 7 (AP).—The yacht Carib, ashore in Currituck Sound, was floated today by CG-128, it was reported this afternoon to Norfolk Coast Guard headquarters.

The Carib went ashore close to the spot where the steamer Virginia Dare last week was sunk by the ice. Conditions due to drift ice made the position of the yacht dangerous and rescue work was difficult.

Dr. Studebaker To Talk Today

Virginia College Group to Hear Educator at Lynchburg.

Lynchburg, Va., Feb. 7 (AP).—Dr. J. W. Studebaker, United States Commissioner of Education, will deliver an address here tomorrow night to the Association of Virginia Colleges, which will be in annual session Friday and Saturday.

The association will hold sessions Friday morning and afternoon and Saturday morning. Dr. Studebaker will speak at the annual formal dinner tomorrow.

The program calls for a consideration of the general topic, "coordination among institutions of higher education in Virginia." The subjects of college entrance requirements, of coordination in graduation requirements and of coordination in curricular studies will be discussed from the points of view of all types of schools, public and private secondary schools, State-supported, non-State-supported and professional colleges.

President James N. Hillman, of Emory and Henry College, is president of the association and will preside at the opening session and at the dinner tomorrow evening.

WASH OUT 15 MILES OF KIDNEY TUBES

Win Back Pep . . . Vigor . . . Vitality

Medical authorities agree that your kidneys contain 15 MILES of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy.

If you have trouble with too frequent bladder passages with scanty amount causing burning and discomfort, the 15 MILES of kidney tubes need washing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and vitality, getting up nights, lumbago, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.

If kidneys don't empty 3 pints every day and get rid of 4 pounds of waste matter, your body will take up these poisons causing serious trouble. It may knock you out and lay you up for many months. Don't wait. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS . . . a doctor's prescription . . . which has been used successfully by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years. They give quick relief and will help to wash out the 15 MILES of kidney tubes.

But don't take chances with strong drugs or so-called "kidney cures" that claim to fix you up in 15 minutes, for they may seriously injure and irritate delicate tissues. Insist on DOAN'S PILLS . . . the old reliable relief that contain no "dope" or habit-forming drugs. Be sure you get DOAN'S PILLS at your druggist. © 1934, Foster-Milburn Co.

A British Warning.

The difficulties which the British are encountering in carrying out reforms in the system of unemployment relief, as described in an article on the page opposite today, should convey a lesson to Americans who assume that a grandiose plan of Federal relief could end our troubles in this field. The collapse of the British plan is especially noteworthy because it is the outcome of prolonged experimentation with local relief methods and in no sense represents a sudden resolve of the national government to interfere with local systems.

This new plan of unemployment "assistance" is designed to supplement the modest insurance benefits which run for a limited time and which are payable without regard to the private means of recipients. When insurance benefits have been exhausted, workers have been given relief on the basis of a local "means test" which provided for no uniformity of practice. Recently this system has been nationalized with the intention of obviating the injustices resulting from varying local scales of payment. However, the elaborate regulations designed to secure equality of treatment under the new nationalization board have failed lamentably to meet the requirements of the situation.

Riots have occurred in Sheffield as a protest against the new dole system and, after a month of operation, the Minister of Labor has acknowledged that the new machinery, described by our correspondent, is not functioning effectively. Although it had been intended to provide for a more liberal scale of remuneration, the safeguards thrown about the grants to determine the need of the recipients appear to have caused great dissatisfaction. Consequently, the government has decided to change its regulations at once without awaiting a legislative revision of the law.

If the British with their long and careful experience in handling unemployment relief find that they have made serious miscalculations in the present instance, it is a safe conclusion that Federal agencies would be certain to make serious errors in dealing with local authorities in this country. The British experience again illustrates the theoretical desirability of the Federal-State cooperation sponsored by our pending social security legislation.

Patch Work.

Consistency has been abandoned by the Senate Appropriations Committee in its effort to rationalize the Administration's $4,880,000,000 work-relief bill. First the committee almost decides that the dole should be continued as far more economical than made work. Then it suddenly approves a much more extravagant scheme of public works than that advocated by the President.

This floundering is a logical result of the struggle with the inchoate proposal that the President be allowed a staggering sum for expenditure on a completely undefined program of public works. Every effort to discover a definite plan that might justify the authority requested has failed. The committee is torn between a desire to abolish demoralizing doles and a growing fear that the Administration's proposed experiment will prove to be a colossal blunder. Under the circumstances irrational committee action is to be expected.

While the Administration mysteriously found $50,000,000 to carry on relief work for a few days, it is still relying upon the pressure of emergency to bring about the enactment of this legislative monstrosity. But the Senate does not like to be subservient. Unlike the House, it can not swallow unmasticated lumps of legislation without a little gulping. Being unable to learn enough about the Administration's program to make intelligent changes, the appropriations committee has struck out wildly and blindly.

The vote by which the committee wrote into the bill a provision requiring payment of prevailing wage rates on all public works undertakings is a case in point. The President has emphasized the obvious desirability of keeping wages paid for made work below those of private enterprise, first, to save the Government from bankruptcy, and second, to prevent further discouragement to private enterprise. This policy must be considered a cardinal principle in any successful public works program.

Criticism of the committee must be tempered, of course, by realization that it has no tangible program before it. The President insists that the Government "must and shall quit this business of relief." With this broad objective both Congress and the public are sympathetic. But no practical alternative to the dole has been offered. Congress is asked to pour out an immense sum on the bare assumption that somehow, somewhere it will afford employment to able-bodied men now idle.

The public works program has reached such a muddled stage that the enactment of a practical measure involving the expenditure of $4,880,000,000 can not now be anticipated. The defects in the bill will not be remedied by a few hastily devised amendments. The crux of the difficulty runs back to the fact that the Administration has no specific program on which intelligent legislation could be based.

In these circumstances, continuation of the dole, for all its undesirability, may be more rational than a wild plunge into an unplanned program.

Reciprocity, Not Barter.

President Roosevelt has rejected the plan sponsored by his special trade adviser, George N. Peek, to barter 500,000 bales of American cotton for German goods, with cash payments limited to 25 per cent of the total.

This action is a notable victory for Secretary Hull, who has opposed the barter plan for specific reasons as well as on the ground of principle. Specifically, the State Department objects to entering into an agreement of this sort with a country that has discriminated against American creditors. Apart from these considerations, however, the plan for direct barter is opposed because of the evidence that exclusive agreements of this sort divert trade into restricted channels, and in the long run discourage instead of assisting trade expansion.

The State Department is committed to application of the most-favored-nation principle in the negotiation of reciprocal tariff agreements, believing that international trade (and that means our own export trade) can best be served by gradually lowering tariff barriers and eliminating special exclusive arrangements. The enunciation of that principle is set forth in the trade agreement just signed between this country and Brazil. At the Montevideo conference, "the generally adverse effects on international trade of policies designed to provide for exclusive preferences at the expense of third countries were pointed out, and it was recognized that adherence to the principle of unconditional most-favored-nation treatment serves not only to promote the long-run economic interests of all nations, but also to avoid the international friction and disputes to which discriminatory policies give rise."

In short, the State Department believes that a general expansion of international trade, not simply a diversion of trade from other countries, for the benefit of American exporters, provides the best and ultimately the only sound method of expanding our foreign trade and obtaining payment for capital invested abroad. By assisting other nations to sell more, whether to the United States or to the rest of the world, we shall be strengthening their purchasing power and creating demands, either directly or indirectly, for American goods.

Direct barter agreements of an exclusive character do not, on the other hand, solve the basic problems presented by inadequate purchasing power on the part of foreign customers. They tend, instead, to dislocate existing trading relationships. For they interfere with the multilateral exchanges that enable nations to buy goods in quantity from countries to which they sell little, making payment out of the proceeds of their sales to other countries.

Barter agreements which exact a quid pro quo obstruct these compensating movements of goods. However immediately advantageous they may seem to the groups directly affected, they tend in the long run to restrict the total volume of trade between nations. It should be, but is not, unnecessary to emphasize the elementary fact that foreign trade can not thrive unless those to whom sales are made are enabled to sell their own goods and thus acquire means with which to pay for their purchases abroad.

Give The HOLC A Chance.

Following the recent congressional denunciation of the HOLC for refusing to distribute jobs as patronage plums, comes a demand for investigation of that agency. Representative Sweeney, of Ohio, asserts, with naive indignation, that "the HOLC has been mismanaged ever since it was created." From this broad generalization, which may merely mean that the home rescuing agency has not been subservient to individual Congressmen, Mr. Sweeney concludes that a campaign of harassment is in order.

One specific complaint is that the HOLC has removed 19 State managers. Any one familiar with the set-up under which this organization began to function might well consider these dismissals as essential steps toward efficient administration. Mr. Sweeney cites them as "sufficient justification" for a congressional inquiry. The justification would perhaps have been far greater if the removals had not been made.

If there is substantial graft in this large governmental business organization, the primary fault may be traced directly to Congress itself. That body deliberately exposed the HOLC to attack by the spoilsmen. More than that, Congress bluntly refused to place appointments in this organization on a basis of merit and efficiency even after grave abuses had been called to its attention. Such an attitude is invariably conducive to loose management and corruption. In these circumstances the HOLC deserves credit for the progress it has made toward efficient administration.

Congress can never expect satisfactory administration by first making an agency vulnerable to politics and later subjecting it to periodical baiting. The only sensible course is complete emancipation of this and other business institutions serving a public need from the machinations of unscrupulous politicians. When that has been done, calls for congressional investigations of operation methods will be taken more seriously.

Mexico's Internal Conflict.

The widespread reaction to the recent Borah resolution indicates the serious nature of the controversy between the Mexican government and the Catholic Church. The Senator's request for a congressional investigation of alleged religious persecutions below the Rio Grande has brought forth vigorous complaints against the Mexican authorities and equally emphatic defense of their position. In a situation with so much potential dynamite, an objective and impartial attitude is imperative.

The Mexican government is so anxious to have its viewpoint understood abroad as well as at home that it has published a historical and legal essay on the subject by Attorney General Portes Gil. In this volume the clergy are accused of having undertaken "a campaign of open sedition in which they clearly reveal their intention of going as far as rebellion." Complaints are also made that capital is accumulated in the hands of the clergy and "disastrously exported from the country;" that the influence of the clergy results in "moral and physical enslavement of the masses," making it impossible "for any political organization to undertake an energetic program of government."

According to this Mexican official his government's effort is to achieve "the moral and economic emancipation of the country." To accomplish this, he says, "the necessity on the part of the Public Power to repress and if possible to suppress altogether the temporal activities of the clergy of Mexico becomes imperative." That is one side of the picture, painted by an obviously prejudiced hand.

On the other side, the government is reliably accused of "attempts to destroy all religion," of introducing socialistic propaganda into the schools and of inciting vicious persecution of both clergy and parishioners.

Senor Portes Gil admits that the government is trying to "give education definite orientation and guidance in the sense of socialism" and that one of its chief aims is to acquaint youth with "the vices of the capitalistic regime." There is more than a suspicion that the state has gone a long way beyond its stated objective of separating religious and temporal functions.

From the viewpoint of the United States, however, it is eminently clear that this is a deep-seated Mexican problem which can only be solved by the Mexican people. Interference by our Congress could be justified neither by common sense nor by any principle of international law. In the light of the recent isolationist vote in the Senate, for which Mr. Borah shares responsibility, this effort to meddle in the domestic affairs of a neighboring country seems the more illogical and intrusive. Moreover, if there is any definite evidence of injury to American lives and property, the problem is one for the State Department, not Congress, to take up in the first instance.

Inexcusable Delay.

Mrs. Norton's exasperation over the inactivity of sub-committees chosen to study District bills is shared by thousands of local residents. There is no excuse for the postponement of local issues until the latter part of the session, when they will be ignored because of other more pressing business. Such procedure suggests a lack of interest in the welfare of the Capital City that explains many of its deficiencies.

Eight of the bills on the District Commissioners' 10-point program have already passed the Senate. Of course, that body, because of its smaller membership, is much busier than the House. Yet the House District Committee has not yet considered these important measures. They remain bottled up in sub-committees which appear to be giving them very little attention. Representatives from distant States have no end of talk about what should be done in the District, but when the Commissioners outline an urgent legislative program, after careful study, these legislators are inclined to ignore it.

Introduction by Mrs. Norton of the bill providing for the election of local delegates to national political conventions is an important step toward breaking this log-jam. As chairman of the House District Committee this representative from New Jersey has clearly manifested her interest in the welfare of Washington. If she can not secure cooperation from other members of the District Committee, the House leadership ought to select a new group for this important legislative task.

Man, poor boob, is proud to display his knowledge, however insignificant. It tickles him pink, for instance, to tell a stranger the way to the postoffice.

"How your environment looks to you depends entirely on how you feel inside," says a philosopher. No wonder things seem so empty to a lot of us.

No Easy Tinkering.

(From the Newark Evening News.)

Secretary Wallace's plan for easier amendment of the Federal Constitution does have timeliness. It is a flimsy merit, derived only from the current speculation of how the serious consequences arising, should the Supreme Court hold the gold clause repealer illegal, might be averted. Just what would be gained Mr. Wallace does not say, except that the present method takes a long time. Well, why not? Tinkering with the organic law is something that should be kept difficult. The original drafters were wise in making it so.

The Mullen Bill.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

This is to thank you for your excellent and timely editorial on the Mullen bill, which petitions Congress legally to regulate elections of delegates representing the various political parties in the District to national political conventions.

The bill was written by a Washington lawyer and approved by the corporation counsel for the District of Columbia. With The Washington Post there are thousands of local residents and various civic and political associations sponsoring this bill. They can see no fair or just reason for delay in its enactment into law, more especially since considerable time and money must thereafter be spent in setting up the designated mechanics, redistricting, etc.

This bill clearly states the voting requirements—and thereby establishes the definition and fixes the status of a "District resident." This will be valuable for immediate use in the campaign to be launched on "District jobs for District residents" forced by wholesale filling of these positions with congressional constituents.

The Federation of Citizens Associations sounded the tocsin in last Saturday evening's meeting by announcing that Cathedral Heights-Cleveland Park Citizens Association will devote its entire meeting on Tuesday evening, February 12, in St. Alban's Parish Hall, to a council of war on this subject.

A Disciple For Townsend.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The opponents and proponents of the Townsend plan seem to have ignored some patent facts.

If, as charged, the plan is fantastic and cockeyed, then the entire pension plan of the country, as a whole, is also. When we consider that teachers, firemen, policemen, veterans, Government clerks, employes of all large corporations, widows and orphans are pensioned, we begin to see the ramifications of the system. If the Townsend plan became law these other pensions could be dropped, and the additional cost would be negligible.

Added to this if all people over 60 were removed from industry, younger people could be employed and the slack in employment be taken up. There would be no need for almshouses, asylums, etc., maintained by States, counties and municipalities. The enormous accumulated sums now tied up in pension funds could be released to pay for the initial cost of the Townsend plan.

In contrast, if the niggardly sum of $30 a month were granted, there would be a mass of miserable old people, for no one could live on that. They would merely exist, with no surplus for enjoyment, medical care or funeral expenses.

In the Townsend plan, the revolving idea seems to be the best part of it, for all money spent would encourage production and trade and hence industry. A. H. G.

Lifeboats.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Regarding the recent disasters at sea in fog and very clear weather, where the lifeboats in some instances could not be lowered without the combined labor of sailors and passengers, I venture an idea regarding lifeboats on seagoing steamships:

Would it not be possible to connect all lifeboats with steam pipes so that they could be lowered in zero weather in a short time?

Fagin Lectures.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Permit me to commend the excellent series of lectures by Dr. N. Byrillion Fagin, of Johns Hopkins University, given every Thursday night at the Jewish Community Center.

I attended the lecture last week on "The Influence of Minority Groups on American Literature," the particular group then treated being the Indians. I was a trifle late and had difficulty in getting a seat and suggest that the Community Center officials provide a larger hall for next Thursday night's lecture and discussion.

Dr. Fagin has a broad knowledge of literature, a deep psychologic understanding and a genuine sympathy for those individuals and groups in society that have not always received a square deal at the hands of the majority. He approaches these problems with a scientific analysis which shows them to be due to lack of understanding of the highest social good. He is worth reading. "LITTERATEUR."

"Forget To Be Forgotten."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Usually The Post is to be commended for its aptitude in reaching a final conclusion in the treatment of public affairs. But in the issue of February 4 is an editorial paragraph which I think falls short in this respect:

> Prosperity will have returned when the condition of the forgotten man is improved to the extent that we can turn loose and forget him again.

Because of our experience of the past two years, I doubt whether it would do lasting good to cut the forgotten man loose so as to "forget him again." I am submitting a paraphrase of the paragraph as I would like to have it appear in print:

> Prosperity will have returned when the condition of the forgotten man is improved to the extent that when we turn him loose he will forget to be forgotten again.

Analyzing The Senators.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I have been, as an ardent baseball fan, greatly interested in the calamity howling in the local press concerning this year's Senator team.

The pitching situation and shortstop seem to be the chief source of contention. What is the matter with Burke, Russell, Weaver, Whitehill and Stewart for starting pitchers, with the probability of Linke—who can win ball games—coming back, and of Hadley really aiding? Some of the youngsters—quite possibly Cohen who can hit—may come through in a blaze of glory.

The shortstop situation, in the papers, is confined to Lary and Kress. How about Bluege, the best fielding shortstopper in baseball and a man who knows how to get on base and what to do when he gets there? What a shame, that due to such stars as Peck and Cronin, he has had to be anchored at third during all his career!

The catching department is what worries me. I hope young Holbrook lives up to expectations, for Bolton, improved as he was last season, is far from, and I feel sure, never will be a first-string big league catcher. SENATOR FAN.

Lincoln's Favorite Song.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

"Your Mission" was President Lincoln's favorite song, and he encored it no less than 18 times when it was sung at a Sunday school convention in Washington in 1864.

As an old timer, I would suggest that the churches and other organizations include this old song in their Lincoln Day programs as a request number. The words can be found in "Heart Throbs."

Is Ethiopia Doomed?

Within the last two months hardly a week has passed that dispatches from East Africa have not told of raids of Abyssinians across their borders into the neighboring Italian colony of Eritrea and into the colony of French Somaliland. And not much longer ago we began to hear of disputes between the Abyssinians and the English over certain rights near the sources of the Blue Nile.

Now, it may be true that in these forays and disputes the Abyssinians have been the aggressors, but the long, long history of Europe's exploitation of Africa warrants the suspicion that these outrages by the natives of Ethiopia may be as ingeniously manufactured as were many of the tales of German atrocities with which we were fed during the World War.

The great Menelek, who crushed an Italian army 40 years ago, no longer sits upon the throne of Ethiopia. But even a Menelek could hardly cope with the forces which Italy or France or Great Britain could now bring against him. If they wish to play again in Africa the game that Japan is playing today in Asia, what is to prevent them? The Emperor Haili Sellassie may call upon the League of Nations for justice until he is hoarse, and it will avail him nothing. More than once the great powers, in their colonizing adventures, have played the part of the upstream wolf who complained that the downstream lamb was muddying the water so that he could not slake his thirst. So now, they may find some plausible pretext for the dismemberment of the last remaining native empire in Africa, the subjugation of the last of the independent peoples in all that vast continent.

The Airplane In Industry.

The airplane is more and more establishing its place as a practical implement of industry.

A few years ago some wanderer discovered gold deep in the interior of the Island of New Guinea. Between the gold-bearing spot and the coast lay a mountain range as high as the Rockies, and hundreds of miles of jungle, infested with snakes, insects and cannibals. To build a road or a railway line would have taken years of hard, dangerous labor and the expenditure of millions.

An engineer suggested the use of an airplane. Natives were flown in to clear a site for settlement. Sawmills were flown in, and tools for building houses, and furniture, food supplies, cows, even tractors for plowing. Finally, a 60-ton dredge was taken apart and flown in piece by piece.

Now, in the midst of the wilderness, surrounded by savages, unapproached by road or river route, stands a healthy, flourishing colony, built and entirely sustained by airplane. And its product, new-mined gold, is daily dispatched by airplane to the coast.

The Post Impressionist

Turncoat Dinner-Coats.

Post Office, Friday.

In a fury second only to its still flaming quarrel over the meaning and merits of modesty, the British capital is now feeding a dialectic bonfire about the rival claims of dinner-coats and tail-coats for what "gentlemen's gentlemen" still call "evening-dress."

* * * *

Of course, the London Times had to be chosen for the catastrophe. That "Thunderer" is one of the world's historic newspapers and has just celebrated its hundred and fiftieth anniversary—whereon the Post-Impressionest heartily congratulates Printing House Square, Hyde Park Corner and Downing Street. Throughout all its honorable career, the Times has served the Empire not alone as a wonderful purveyor of news and a more wonderful adviser of British political policy. Through its letter-columns, it has also provided at once a safety-valve for English indignation against (almost) any wrongs and a debating-platform for (almost) any problem.

So to the London Times came the opening of the new discussion.

* * *

It came through a man who was, or pretended to be, in a dire dilemma. He wrote:

"I am constantly receiving invitations to dinner without any indication whether I am to appear in talk with a white tie or in a dinner-jacket with black tie. These necessitate inquiries to my hostess either by telephone or letter."

Perhaps he found the letters too expensive. Perhaps, like other Londoners, he found that to telephone through the London exchanges was to delay the solution of the puzzle until after the date of the dinner. Anyhow, he wanted, or said he wanted, advice.

* * *

Unhappy soul!

At least, when we first saw his letter in print, we should have called him an unhappy soul if his signature had not made us a trifle suspicious. He didn't sign his real name. He signed himself "Diner-Out"—and it does seem to us that anybody who is a sufficiently habitual diner-out to call himself by this title may either:

(a) Have acquired a sixth sense whereby he can tell from the form of the invitations the sort of habiliments required, not to say entailed—

(b) Or else have fallen to that depth to which the constant acceptance of dinner-bids brings so many addicts: we mean the end of a descent from amusing gossip to malicious trouble-making.

So, suspecting his purpose, we passed no judgment on his plight. We merely wondered whether it wasn't possible that he was trying to start something.

And, in a few days—whatever his intention—something was started! Advice poured in to the Times.

* * *

One undoubtedly honest man replied to "Diner-Out." Mr. J. Leng Sturrock (surely nobody would choose that name for an alias!) wrote:

"A kind hostess of mine long since solved this masculine worry. Her invitations bear the initials 'L. & W.,' or else 'S. & B.' 'Long-and-white' means an 'occasion;' 'short-and-black' indicates a less formal dinner."

* * *

But the thing hasn't stopped there.

Other people wrote careful explanations of how a guest may determine, without initialed hints, the expected clothes. And many of these explanations conflicted with many others.

Then, after a proper prolongation of suspense, the voice of the true English Conservative was heard in the land:

"Diner-Out," wrote the true English Conservative, "must pull himself together. There is only one style of 'evening-dress' for a man—namely, 'tails.' If an indulgent host or hostess is willing to pander to the present-day slackness in the matter of clothes, he or she will doubtless say so at the time the invitation is given." (But silence in this particular permits, it would appear, of only one interpretation.) "In the good old days dinner-jackets were never seen outside one's own home."

* * *

That was enough. That brought the dispute down to essentials. That robbed the war of all chivalry. The conflict is now being waged without mercy on the fundamental issue: "Why dinner-coats at all?"

* * *

This may seem a light matter to the present generation over here—a question entirely trivial. But let no one mock it in the Oath of Washington, or laugh at it in New York's Askelon. In almost the last play in which America's Edwardian clothes-idol, John Drew, starred, he won critical praise for an inspired piece of "stage-business." A young lady visited (in the play) his bachelor rooms. Her mother knocked at the door. He hid the young lady and, to prove to the mother that he had no feminine company, he changed from claw-hammer to dinner-jacket before he opened that door!

You see, even in America "it was only yesterday."

New British System Ends Relief Stigma

Reorganized Plan Distinguishes Between Charity And Insurance Benefits.

By Frank Darvall
(Special Correspondence of The Post).

The following is the first of two timely articles by an English correspondent on the British system of unemployment relief. On this page tomorrow Mr. Darvall will examine the policy of his government with regard to various forms of work relief.

BRITAIN has recently reorganized her system of unemployment relief. Persons who are, because of unemployment or other cause, in need of relief are now turning to one of three agencies for help. If they are workers in insured trades, and a large majority of British wage-earners are so, they look to the unemployment insurance fund.

They will have been paying during their period of employment 10 pence (20 cents) per week to this fund—less if under 18 or female—and their employers and the government will have been paying in respect of them a like amount. They will therefore be entitled to a standard rate of benefit, now about $4.25 a week, for the first 26 weeks during which they are out of work. If they have been contributing for a longer period, and have made few claims against the fund, this rate of benefit may continue for a further 26 weeks, making a year in all. To this standard benefit will be added $2.25 for each adult dependant and from 50 to 75 cents for each juvenile.

This benefit will be payable to them without question and without regard to their private means, provided that they are registered at, and regularly report to, a labor exchange maintained by the government, and can thus prove that they are genuinely seeking work.

• • • •

AFTER they have exhausted their rights to insurance benefit, or if for some technical reason they are not entitled to insurance benefit, such workers in insured trades should now apply to a newly constituted body, the unemployment assistance board. This national board, through its local offices and committees, will conduct an inquiry into their claims and means, and, if they are revealed as needing and entitled to help, will pay them a weekly benefit which may be either more or less than insurance benefit, depending on their circumstances.

Normally it will pay them $6 a week, if the claimant is a married man, adding 75 cents for each child under, and $1.12 for each child over 11. This benefit is, however, based on the assumption that the claimant has so, or very little, private means, and that he is paying $1.75 rent a week for his flat or cottage. If he has private means, or relatives, who ought to support him, who have such means, his benefit may be proportionately reduced. If his rent is more than $1.75 a week his benefit will be proportionately increased.

Only if he is outside the circle of insured trades, or if for some unusual reason he cannot gain relief from the insurance fund or assistance board, should the worker apply to the third and last—and oldest—relief agency, the poor law.

• • • •

POOR law responsibilities, which date from Tudor England, and which were once vested in the parish overseers of the poor, and the county justices of the peace, are now handled by the public assistance committees of the county and borough councils. These committees succeeded a few years ago the regional board of guardians which since 1834 had replaced overseers and justices as poor law agents, and which had earned for the poor law a harsh reputation.

They have for the last year or two been carrying a very heavy burden of relief, unemployment and destitution being so heavy, and the national insurance fund so ill-equipped to handle such an emergency. They have indeed had thrown on them by that fund the unpleasant duty of administering the means test, or inquiry into private income, and reduction of benefit in proportion to it, to which the fund has resorted as a measure of economy when so many workers have been unemployed for long spells, and therefore, compelled to resort to transitional, or actuarially unjustified, benefit, instead of to the insurance benefit for which their contributions had paid.

They are now to be relieved of such tasks and of a large part of their former burden of relief. All insured workers are now to look, when their insurance rights are exhausted, to the new assistance board, which will administer the means test and pay transitional benefit.

• • • •

THE poor law will, therefore, be left only a small residuum of its former duties, the relief of the steadily decreasing number of uninsured unemployed and of the sick, the indigent and the unemployable.

In handling their needs it will continue to employ varying methods and to pay varying rates of relief, depending on the preferences—and often on the party complexion—of the various councils and their assistance committees.

The insurance fund, now to be watched over by an influential, permanent statutory committee, which will have the duty of making recommendations designed to preserve its solvency, is so to adjust the contributions demanded of employers, employed and the state, and the benefits payable to contributors, as to secure a balance of income and expenditure, including that on the retirement of the fund's large debt. The British insurance system, so wrongly called one of "doles," is therefore again to become as it was between 1911 and 1921, strictly an insurance system.

The unemployment assistance board, which is also a permanent, influential body, will be financed by an exchequer grant, and therefore paid for out of the general field of national taxation. It will, however, at least to begin with, indirectly receive grants from the county and borough councils, and thus from local taxation, to the extent of part of the cost of the relief which it is now taking over from these local bodies.

• • • •

IT WILL, within the limits of the act of Parliament to which it owes its origin, to the extent that annual parliamentary appropriations allow, and subject to the formal confirmation by Parliament of its regulations, which it has to lay before the two houses, be an impartial, independent, executive body.

The residuum of duties left to the poor law authorities, that is, to the county and borough public assistance committees, will continue to be financed out of the yield of local taxation.

It will also continue to be a local responsibility to see that no one is prevented merely by lack of means from receiving the essential minimum of food and shelter. It will therefore still be to the local authority that the homeless and the tradeless will appeal, for lodging in the workhouse, or for other charitable assistance.

It is in order to emphasize the distinction between insurance and relief, which will carry no stigma, and charity, which often must do so, that Britain has thus reorganized her system, throwing the former onto, respectively, the insurance fund and assistance board, and leaving the latter with the poor law.

Whether the change from the romanticism of Verdi to the realism of Mascagni and Leoncavallo had anything to do with the case or not, there was a noticeable quickening of vitality in last night's double bill, affecting not only the principals, but the entire company. The singing had a note of conviction which one missed at the opening performance on Monday, and the general tempo of the production was stepped up, with the result that attention was stimulated.

Casting one's imagination backward 45 years to that May night in Rome when young Pietro Mascagni's adaptation of Giovanni Verga's short story about hot-blooded Sicilian peasants was first disclosed on a stage, one can picture the audience startled and then captivated by the invasion of the realistic school. We have become so acustomed to "Cavalleria Rusticana" that we no longer realize fully how fresh and novel was the irruption of verisimilitude among the romantic traditions.

Emilia Vergeri, an experienced Santuzza, sang and acted the role last night with complete abandon to its emotional demands. Her voice, with its marked differences in timbre, was particularly effective, for the change of color in the lower range gave precisely the impression of speech broken by emotion.

The Turridu was Ralph Gerard, who substituted for Luigi Ruffino as he did recently for Armand Tokatyan. He was in fine voice and sang with a fervor and clarity which deepened the good impression he made with Max Rabinov's organization. His impassioned impersonation matched that of Signora Vergeri, and the two of them were responsible for the elan of the performance.

Rocco Pandiscio, who was roundly applauded for his robust reading of the prologue, and Fortunato de Angelis easily carried off the honors in "Pagliacci." Verne Adelman's Nedda did not reveal any remarkable vocal distinction and the other principals offered more or less routine support.

Along The Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

The Gleichgeschaltung.

UNDER our new form of government the gleichgeschaltung—the what?—the gleichgeschaltung over in the AAA was front-page news. It would not have been under the old order. In the past our undersecretaries have come and gone with scarcely more than passing attention. It was seldom that we got wrought up over subordinates of even lesser light.

BARGERON.

But manifestly under the new order, just as in Germany, these gleichgeschaltungs in the various departments are important happenings. Some of our relatives may be involved. We want to read of them as we did the casualty lists during the war. Maybe a brother, a cousin or some kinsman has been knocked off. We are intimately concerned. What with everybody engaged in the Government, with all of us putting our shoulders to the wheel, as it were, these periodical purges, liquidations, consolidations or what-not, may affect a loved one at any time.

• • • •

No one can feel more keenly than I, in fact, over the fate of Jerome Frank and Gardner Jackson. Both delightful fellows, though Jackson of late had become quite fretful. But to know two men and then have them get caught in a purge—well, it just brings the purging right home to one. Yet I knew they were bound to come to an untimely end sooner or later. They insisted on serving in the front line. Their loss is the price of revolutions. Ah, it's the sad thing about them. One's friends go down in battle, either killed or maimed. It's something we have got to be brave and philosophical about.

We should not under any circumstances lessen our confidence in our leader. It grieved him just as much to clip off these two fellows as it does us. They were friends of his, trying always to help him in the great cause. It was for the good of the State that they had to be shot.

• • • •

We will make a serious mistake, however, if we take these recurring personnel losses as meaning a change in the Government. They do not have that significance. Our concern is that the victims may be related, in friendship or blood, but they do not betoken a return to normalcy.

Although Jerome is gone, Chester Davis is still seeking the very power which Jerome wanted. He is still seeking the passage of the so-called clarifying amendments to the agricultural act giving the Agricultural Administration power to tell the processors of farm products, the millers, the packers, how to run their businesses.

• • • •

In this connection those whose sole apprehensions these days are whether we go Fascist or Socialist will see in Chester's victory over Jerome a Fascist administration of the dictatorial authority. Had Jerome stayed in it would have been a Leftist administration. He was a crack-down boy, he wanted to bear down on the processors. Chester will be more conservative.

The difference is, if the authority is obtained, Chester will be more sympathetic to the business view in telling the processors how to run their businesses. Jerome would probably have made them cut down on the number of traveling salesmen on the theory that people have to eat anyway and salesmanship is not needed and the money thus saved could be paid to the farmers. Being a business man, Chester probably sees the need of salesmen.

The question should be why either Chester or Jerome or any other bureaucrat in Washington should have the authority to tell the processors how to run their businesses.

• • • •

The purges have their benefits, though. With more and more men getting knocked off the seriousness of the revolution will be felt in an increasing number of homes. The friends of Frank and Jackson will probably now ask themselves the question for the first time whether a revolution is really worth while.

Sooner or later Davis will get knocked off. Then his friends will wonder about it all. It might result eventually in a revolt against bureaucracy itself.

"Don't take those corners so fast while I'm shaving!"

No End Of Books

Douglas S. Freeman Places Magnificent Capstone On His Great Life Of Robert E. Lee.

By Theodore Hall.

THERE is the danger, when one comments on a biography, of confusing the worth of the book with the excellence of the hero, of crediting virtues to the writer which belonged more exactly to his subject. But that pitfall of reviewing does not exist in the case of Douglas Southall Freeman's "R. E. Lee: a Biography," the four volumes of which are now completed by the pair issued today (Scribner, $3.75 each).

For though Dr. Freeman had the "Southern Arthur," as he calls Lee, to deal with—a man who inspired in the South a far more idolatrous blend of personal reverence, filial devotion and affection than did Lincoln, while alive, in the North—this great biography can match its subject in those points of distinction proper to a book.

Dr. Freeman writes of Lee, in the final beautiful chapter, "What he seemed, he was—a wholly human gentleman, the essential elements of whose positive character were two and only two, simplicity and spirituality." And to take this biography as a construction out of a myriad choices, literary and scholarly (which is the first and last analysis of a book) is to see the massing effect of a study-table conscience quite as admirable.

• • • •

WE left the story, last October, at the great Southern victory of Chancellorsville—at once the high point in Confederate hopes and the root of disaster. For "Stonewall" Jackson lay dead.

Dr. Freeman may investigate every military order, may plot out every march of the Army of Northern Virginia, may report Lee's slightest word and trace out in footnotes all the minutiae of campaigning—and he does all this, to the satisfaction of the closest scholar—but never does he lose grasp on the great sweep of events. They advance, as interlocked and inexorable as a Greek tragedy. For with Jackson dead came the reorganization of command; and from that shuffling was born the confused and blunted weapon of Lee at Gettysburg.

Many writers have told the story of Bloody Angle and Little Round Top. Yet Dr. Freeman, bearing all his burden of historical detail, makes it live with fresh and appalling vividness. From the heat of those July days to the sullen stubbornness of Longstreet, from the carnage of Pickett's charge (one company went in with 100 men, came out with 9, and 20 Southern battle flags lay in a space 100 yards square) to Lee's gallant, agonized cry: "It is all my fault!"—the narrative of Dr. Freeman is sustained and overpowering. There is no need for the photograph of a Pennsylvania meadow after the battle, as quietly horrifying as anything which came out of the World War.

• • • •

ON PAST the defensive lull, the grim campaigns of the new year (Wilderness, Spotsylvania and Cold Harbor rise out with their terrible drama), and the "winter of growing despair" with Lee at bay in Petersburg, the story comes to a heightened intensity in the spring of '65.

Grant could bring up 280,000 men; the Confederacy had but 65,000. And when the Southern line was broken, it is Lee whose self-control shines out in the starvation and exhaustion of the retreat to the west. Hemmed in and harried, he had only 15,000 armed troops on April 7. Two days later he had scarcely 10,000, and he was at Appomattox.

That afternoon he mounted Traveler and rode, escorted, through the Union lines to town. He entered a house owned by a Maj. McLean, who four years before had owned the farm where the first clash of Bull Run had taken place. And in Maj. McLean's parlor the war ended. There are few more poignant scenes in history than this one of Lee gravely thanking Grant for his consideration, going out on the porch, smiting his hands together absent-mindedly as he looked off toward his army (how revealing a gesture that is!), lifting his hat once, and riding off before the bare-headed Union generals to break the news to his men.

In the five quiet years which were left him, building up as president the little Washington College at Lexington, that self-mastery is no less apparent. It lasted up to that early morning of October 12, 1870, when Lee murmured "Strike the tent," and died.

• • • •

FOR 19 years Dr. Freeman has been working on this sterling narrative of a great life. Some glimpse of that care and labor (as if the 2,200 pages of text were not sufficient witness) comes in the 26 pages of "select critical" bibliography, in the ten solid pages of acknowledgment of help—including such names as Marshall Foch, Lloyd George, Winston Churchill and John Buchan. Immensely careful and faithful it all was. One has a sense that as the work drew to a close, the author lingered over it, cherishing and working over it—a feeling which produced such a degree of finesse as that on page 137, vol. IV, where we look over Lee's shoulder as he reads the terms of surrender which Grant has just written out, and turn our page in hand just where Lee turned the sheet before him.

That reluctance to part is quite understandable. For after two decades' companionship with his hero, Dr. Freeman must be feeling quite as lonely as did a portly little gentleman, on a warm July evening above Lake Leman 150 years ago, when he scrawled the last page of "The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire."

Fort Ashby Presented By D. A. R. to W. Va.

Keyser, W. Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—The offer of a committee from Potomac Valley Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, to the Mineral County Court to give Fort Ashby to the county upon the condition that it be repaired and restored to its original state, has been accepted. The transfer will be made at once.

This building is in the village of Fort Ashby and was erected in 1755 by order of George Washington as a protection against the Indians. It is the only original fort now standing south of the Potomac River and was purchased by Potomac Valley Chapter in 1927 from Thomas F. Pyles.

Dickens Again

By Wm. Lyon Phelps

ONE effect of the enormous popularity of the screen versions of Dicken's novels—"David Copperfield," "Great Expectations," "A Tale of Two Cities," etc.—should be to set the whole reading public of America to a perusal of his stories.

During the last two years, I have been reading Dickens in chronological order, with an enjoyment, an appreciation, an enthusiasm too great for words to express. I began with "Pickwick Papers" and I am now nearly through "Bleak House." I am overwhelmed by the tremendous genius of Dickens.

• • • •

It is a delight, too, to observe the first appearance of characters that were to take on immortality; to see how quietly they often enter the pages of the book and begin to possess the reader's heart. Sam Weller was the first of his immortals; but how many were to follow, more than were ever created by any other novelist in any country in the world.

For many years Dickens had more popularity than fame. His case is unusual; there are novels that attract no attention when first published, and many years later become famous; "Wuthering Heights," by Emily Bronte, is a good illustration. And there are novels that have immediate and extensive popularity; yet they smell of mortality, and are little read by future generations. "The Castle of Otranto," by Horace Walpole, is a good illustration.

• • • •

The successive novels of Dickens were received with passionate acclaim; they were talked about everywhere among English-speaking people. His popularity has never waned. But his fame is immeasurably higher today than ever before. Many first-rate critics, many able novelists, regard him as the greatest of all the great English story writers. That was never the case until the twentieth century.

I remember my surprise in the first decade of the twentieth century, when I was reading with delight "Joseph Vance," "Alice-for-Short," "Somehow Good," by the novelist William De Morgan when he told me, in response to my question concerning his literary tastes, "I have read only a few authors in my long life; I have been a professional potter, with little time for general reading. But I have read Dickens every year and all the time, since I was a child, with constantly increasing wonder and enthusiasm."

It is not often that I can recommend others to follow my example in anything; but I can in this: I wish everyone would begin now, and reread Dickens straight through, from "Pickwick Papers" to Edwin Drood. It is an experience that enriches daily life.

Report Urges Career Service

System Is Advocated for Federal, State and Local Units.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 7 (A).—Establishment of a career service system in the various governmental units, Federal, State and local, was recommended in the report of the commission of inquiry on public service personnel received today by Gov. Peery.

The independent committee, which carried its investigatoin into many States of the Union, including Virginia, asserted that career service is a required next step of the American Government.

The committee was composed of L. D. Coffman, chairman, president of the University of Minnesota; Louis Brownlow, director of public administration clearing house; Ralph Budd, president of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad; Arthur L. Day, vice president of the Corning Glass Works, and Charles E. Merriman, of the University of Chicago, with Luther Gulick, director of research and secretary to the commission.

The commission concluded that the abolition of the spoils system through the universal use of the short ballot and career service will result in more efficient government.

Drewry Names 2 to West Point

Petersburg and Hopewell Youths Appointed.

Albert Louis Tobias, of Petersburg, and Mercer Patton Davis, of Hopewell, were nominated yesterday by Representative Drewry, of Petersburg, for appointment to the Military Academy at West Point, according to the Associated Press.

William Parkham Kevan, jr., of Petersburg, and John Edward Norfleet, of Jetersville, were named as alternates.

At the same time, it was announced that Warner Winston Croxton, jr., of West Point, Va., had been nominated by Representative Montague, of Richmond. John William Dodson, of Richmond, and Arthur Henry Tuttle, jr., of Ashland, were designated as first and second alternates to Croxton.

Pedestrian Awarded $4,250 for Injuries

A jury in Chief Justice A. A. Wheat's court yesterday awarded Winton E. Disney damages of $4,250 from the District government because of injuries received when he stepped into a depression in the sidewalk at Georgia avenue and Blair road northwest.

Disney, represented by Attorneys Henry I. Quinn and Albert E. Esher, said he was walking along the walk when it broke beneath his weight and threw him heavily into a deep hole.

Senate Relief Vote Will Stifle Recovery

Committee Move Supporting Prevailing Wages For Relief Flouts President.

By Elliott Thurston.

BY voting, 12 to 8, yesterday to have the Government pay the prevailing wage rate on such work as is created by the New Deal's $4,880,000,000 relief bill, the Senate Appropriations Committee destroyed what to many minds was the most important principle stated by President Roosevelt in his annual message to Congress. In that message, the President publicly recognized for the first time what economists had long since emphasized—that the Government must not compete in wages with private industry if private business is to be revived.

By its action the committee struck a deadly blow at recovery. The reason for the action is clear enough. The Senators who voted for the prevailing wage have no intention of frustrating private business. They were acting, as they thought, in the interest of organized labor. However, organized labor apparently realized the importance of preventing the Government from competing with private business in bidding for labor. Eager to protect wage levels and codes, the A. F. of L. proposed that the Government pay the prevailing wage rate but provide shorter hours. Thus, the A. F. of L. hoped to save the wage structure and at the same time, by shorter hours, to insure that workers would get more income from private employment.

Senator McCarran offered the amendment adopted by the Appropriations Committee. As that amendment stands it does not provide for shorter hours. It provides specifically for having the Government compete with private industry in wages. And that has long been a major cause for complaint by industry and business generally. The inevitable result is to prevent the very recovery of private activity which is vital to get the Government out of the business of relief, as the President aspires to do, and to save the country from bankruptcy.

• • • •

THE CONSEQUENCES can readily be seen in connection with the low-cost housing which the Government evidently means to provide out of a large if not a major portion of the relief sum. The only real promise of a revival in the long-stagnant construction industries lies in reducing instead of freezing prohibitive costs. There is reason to believe that the building trades could be persuaded, by the exercise of strong Government leadership, to discard existing hourly wage scales, temporarily at least, if by so doing they were assured of getting more income in the long run.

At present, as the New Deal's favorite British economist, John Waynard Keynes, has said, building costs in this country are "scandalous." They are clearly prohibitive. The building industry has been flat on its back ever since the depression set in. There is now a tremendous accumulated shortage of construction. The frozen condition of the mortgage market has been one of the most serious factors, but prohibitive building costs have been quite as serious in causing prostration of the industry.

The whole theory of price-raising, the trend of the NRA codes, worked against the cost readjustments necessary to stimulate revival. By insisting on prohibitive hourly wages, the building trades have been victimized by the same delusions underlying the demand for the 30-hour week at this time. Organized labor's policy has been largely responsible for political failures so far. Even politicians who knew better, who knew that the wage, hour and cost policy was holding back recovery and depriving labor itself of earnings, have been timid about facing the facts.

• • • •

EVEN assuming that by occupying the low-cost housing field the Government is not usurping the domain of private enterprise, it is apparent that if the Government is to pay and thereby perpetuate the prevailing and demonstrably prohibitive wages, private industry will not and can not go ahead in that part of the field not invaded by the Government. Willing, even eager, buyers have been and are discouraged by the prevailing costs. So-called prefabricated housing may yet come to their rescue, but if it does the present building industry and trades do not stand to benefit. They will, in effect, be handing over their market and opportunity to competitors able to undercut and undersell them.

If it stands, the action of the Senate Committee will tend only to perpetuate prostration in industries long since set for revival, which have all along shown the greatest degree of unemployment, and now hold the largest promise for a genuine, normal recovery. The majority of the committee not only ignore the ABC's of economics and the plain facts of recent experience, but they flout the President and invite the whole train of disasters which follow inescapably if the Government is to go on as a competitor and substitute for private business. That is the royal road to Federal bankruptcy and inflation.

Once Overs

Portrait of a Memory.

Pemberton X. Pettigrew had a memory.

It was a memory of memories. The best memory, in fact, in Wall Street.

He was like the elephant who never forgot.

Or maybe the elephant was like Pemberton X. Pettigrew who never forgot.

Pemberton could remember away back when you had to look at the financial pages oftener than once a month to get the latest stock quotations!

Wotta memory!

• • • •

Pemberton X. Pettigrew retained things.

He could sit down and recall vividly the days when a stock like General Motors would be $30 a share today and something entirely different 30 or 60 days later.

Or even a stock not like General Motors, for that matter.

He remembered when those funny little machines called tickers had to be oiled occasionally to keep friction from damaging the working parts.

He could tell you of a time in the long ago when these tickers went "click-click-click" (just like that) for rather long stretches at a time.

If you got close enough in those days you could see the parts move.

• • • •

These tickers ticked off quotations on stocks.

It was in the era when they were known as "securities."

Pemberton X. Pettigrew, without obvious effort, could describe the period in history when these quotations frequently changed.

Sometimes they changed as much as a whole eighth of a point from month to month. And sometimes upward.

Mr. Pettigrew (Pemberton X.) had a stock once that changed a whole point upward.

People used to come in now and then and watch a ticker work.

• • • •

Pemberton X. Pettigrew could tell you vividly of the days when brokers used to hire boys to snatch the tape from these tickers and copy the quotations on a big blackboard.

The boys sometimes used an entire stick of chalk a week.

There was enough work to keep them awake.

And plump little men called customers used to sit and watch the blackboard.

Mr. Pettigrew remembered away back when as many as two men would sit and watch the blackboard at a time.

• • • •

Mr. Pettigrew (Pemberton X.) recalled away back when if you left a stock and went away for a year or so it might move.

Last week a funny thing happened. Mr. Pettigrew did go away for only five days and a stock actually did move.

Not much.

Only a quarter of a point.

But the shock killed Mr. Pettigrew.

It will be difficult to find a memory to replace him.

All in One Spot.

A Detroit manufacturer is to turn out an auto with the engine in the rear. This will concentrate all the disturbances in the back seat.

But it is going to seem funny to go to the rear of the car to fix the carburetor and go to the front for the spare tire.

Nice Weithe!

France has decided to abandon the Versailles Treaty clause forbidding Germany to rearm. Maybe Germany, which has been rearming in violation of the treaty for ten years, will appreciate the compliment.

Friends of the Commissioner say he expects to return to his desk at the District Building either Saturday or Monday.

Ray Semmes Appointed To FHA at Honolulu

Ray Semmes, Washington automobile dealer, has been appointed associate director of the Federal Housing Administration's activities in Hawaii and will leave within two weeks for Honolulu, J. S. Wright, now living in Hawaii, was appointed his executive assistant.

Semmes was born in Washington and entered the auto industry in 1905. In 1917 he joined the French Air Service, later returning to Washington to become sales agent for Dodge cars. He was appointed to the Hawaiian post because of his thorough knowledge of the Administration's program, having been active in the organization of the field work, according to officials of the Housing Administration.

World Peace Is Topic For Lord Lytton's Talk

"The Far Eastern Problem and World Peace" will be the subject of Lord Lytton's lecture at the Hotel Shoreham Sunday night under Town Hall auspices, it was announced yesterday. Lord Lytton, who is on a brief visit to the United States, was chairman of the League of Nations commission which investigated conditions in Manchuria three years ago.

Christened Victor Alexander George Robert Lytton, the second Earl of Lytton has distinguished himself as a public officeholder, author and town planner. He is the grandson of Bulwer-Lytton, famous English novelist.

Burke and Aids Reply to Critic At Probe Today

Flare-Ups Expected When Schulte Plies Queries at Crime Inquiry.

Already criticized for faulty administration and failure to close gambling houses until threat of congressional investigation "turned on the heat," three police officials are to appear before the House District crime investigating committee when it resumes hearings at 10:30 a. m. today.

Inspector Frank S. W. Burke, chief of detectives, who testified on Tuesday, is to take the stand again. Lieut. George Little, head of the special anti-gambling squad, and Sergt. George C. Deyoe, second in command, also have been called.

Each is to be questioned by Representative William T. Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, who sharply criticized Inspector Burke last Tuesday for inefficient administration of the detective bureau.

Schulte Demands Witnesses.

It was Representative Schulte also who demanded that Lieut. Little and Sergt. Deyoe be called to explain why more than 100 known gambling places had been permitted to operate without police interference until the imminence of congressional investigation "turned on the heat."

Verbal fireworks are expected to flare when the Indianan resumes his interrogation of the scrappy and already angry detective chief. Both were shouting at once, waving their hands and thumping the table at the last session. Inspector Burke intends to present to the committee an affidavit signed by each of the detective sergeants under his command. The men have sworn their reports in the past have been accurate, Representative Schulte charged some supposed to report at precincts never did so, but were in bed at home when their fellows reported them on duty.

Appropriation Voted.

An appropriation of $1,500 was voted the committee by the House yesterday at the request of Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, committee chairman. The appropriation had been recommended by Representative Lindsay Warren (Democrat), of North Carolina, chairman of the House Audit Committee.

The committee may select an attorney and an investigator at an executive session today.

Traffic 'Spotters' Increased to 200

100 Added in District's Safety Drive.

One hundred new traffic "observers" will be on Washington streets today. The secret committee, now 200, will join the current safety campaign by reporting minor and major traffic infractions.

Sergt. J. J. Agnew, traffic records chief and official recorder of reported violations, announced that the additional "spotters" were selected after careful research and will be notified of their appointments this morning.

The first 100 committee members were appointed last July. Since then they have reported an average of 125 violations each week, ranging from reckless driving to parking infractions.

Electrician Injured By Garage Elevator

James Bailey, 21, an electrician, of the 1300 block of Ridge place southeast, suffered fractures of his nose and jaw yesterday when a descending elevator in the municipal garage at the Ford Building, Pennsylvania avenue and John Marshall place, struck him.

Police were told he was standing on a ledge separating two elevators, searching for a key in the shaft of one of them when he was injured. He was taken to Emergency Hospital.

Truckman Kills 3 and Wounds 2

Shoots Himself After an Attack on Family.

Birmingham, Ala., Feb. 7 (AP).—A 22-year-old truck driver, indentified as Arthur Legrone, called at his father-in-law's home with an automatic gun today and started shooting, leaving three dead and two wounded.

The dead were D. Sherrill Dickerson, the father-in-law; Legrone, a truck driver, and Earl Legrone, 9 months old, the slayer's son.

Herman Lambert, 16, and his brother, Jesse, 18, were slightly wounded as Legrone fired all but his last shell before turning the gun on himself. Legrone, according to police, had been crazed by domestic troubles.

Politician Held Guilty by Jury In Vote Killing

Confident of Ultimately Being Freed, Joseph J. Bruno Asserts.

Pottsville, Pa., Feb. 7 (AP).—Convicted of voluntary manslaughter in the Kelayres election eve outbreak in which five were slain, Joseph J. Bruno, former detective and small-town politician, expressed confidence tonight that he eventually would be freed.

The jury returned at noon, after deliberating more than 65 hours on the testimony offered during the four weeks' trial, with the verdict that carries a penalty of 6 to 12 years' imprisonment. Bruno had been tried only for the death of Frank Fiorella, but four other murder indictments are still pending against him.

Hands plunged deep into trousers pockets, the former Kelayres political chief stood behind a screen in the Schuylkill County prison talking confidently of ultimate vindication.

"We have asked for a new trial and I'm sure everything will come out all right," he said. "The judge's charge said I had a right to shoot if they were attacking my house, but I didn't even shoot. I was there at the telephone all the time."

Jurymen disclosed they had taken 19 ballots. Six jurors voted for acquittal on the first three and five on the fourth to the eighteenth.

Bruno was unmoved by the verdict. He did not rise for the announcement. The procedure scarcely required three minutes.

Judge C. M. Palmer reserved decision on a defense motion for a new trial. H. O. Bechtel, defense attorney, said sentence will be withheld pending decision on the new trial motion.

Bruno's two sons, James and Alfred; his brother, Philip, and three other relatives are awaiting trial. Five indictments were found against each.

Mrs. Shepard Wanted to Die, Army Men Say

Medical Officers Testify She Had Ailment Sometimes Fatal.

Topeka, Kans., Feb. 7 (AP).—Two Army medical officers testified today Zenana Shepard suffered from a disease which occasionally proved fatal—trench mouth—and that she wanted to die.

Maj. J. C. Dye, of Washington, an eye specialist, and Maj. W. A. Rose, dentist, were called to the defense of Maj. Charles A. Shepard in combating again the Government's charge he killed his wife with poison so he might be free to wed a Texas blonde.

"I do not want to get well," Rose said Mrs. Shepard told him. "I do not care to live; I want to die."

Rose, treating her for trench mouth with a mouth wash he described as poisonous, testified he said "You shouldn't talk like that."

Four or five bottles of the mouth wash were used before Mrs. Shepard's death, June 15, 1929, at Fort Riley, Kans., Rose said. He added that the bottles contained a poison label and were placed on a table within reach of the patient.

Maj. Dye said he examined Mrs. Shepard two or three days before she was mysteriously strcken, and that Maj. Shepard did "everything he could" to improve his wife's condition.

"She said she didn't want to get well," Dye said. "She said she knew all about life and wanted to know about the hereafter."

The testimony was in line with the contention of Shepard's counsel that his wife suffered from alcoholism, feared she had inherited from her mother a taint of insanity and either poisoned herself accidentally or took her own life.

Grace Brandon, the Brooks Field (Tex.) stenographer, whose love interest, the Government charged, constituted a murder motive, was not in court today as the defense testimony entered the final phase of the fight to free Shepard, who was sentenced to life imprisonment at his first trial.

Washingtonian in Court On Back Alimony Count

Pittsburgh, Feb. 7 (AP).—Simon S. Fried, Washington, was haled into court today to show cause why he should not be adjudged in contempt of court for failure to pay Mrs. Fabrielle S. Fried temporary alimony, totaling $565.

Fried, resident manager in Washington of the Army and Navy Club, contends his wife sold his furniture and obtained more than the equivalent of the amount she claims he owes.

Court Frees 8 In Bonds After Raid Near 'Hill'

Post $2,000 After Pleas of Not Guilty on Gaming Charges.

Arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage on charges of setting up a gaming table, eight men, arrested Wednesday afternoon in a gambling raid near the Capitol, were released under $2,000 bond each yesterday.

All pleaded not guilty. They will be given a preliminary hearing before Turnage February 21.

Forty-eight others, seized in the raid in the first block of B street southeast, were released after police listed their names, but they were warned to be ready to appear as witnesses.

Those arraigned identified themselves as Charles Turner, 45, of the 1300 block of East Capitol street; John M. Cornell, 31, of the 900 block of E street northeast; Fred A. Stillman, 42, of the 1700 block of P street northwest; Kenneth Pumphrey, 29, of the 400 block of Fifteenth street northeast; John E. Goetz, 36, of the 1600 block of Q street northwest; Wilmer Long, 28, of the 700 block of Nineteenth street northeast, and Frank E. Lynn, 51, of the 500 block of Fifth street northwest.

The raid followed charges by Representative Blanton, of Texas, that a gambling establishment "which everyone knows" is in operation close to the Capitol.

Arson Charges Are Dismissed In G. W. Blaze

Indictment Blaming Two Youths for Fire Is Dropped.

Accepting the officially expressed opinion of Attorney General Cummings that Edward J. Carlton and Albert H. Smith, former George Washington students and members of the Sigma Chi Fraternity, were not guilty of a charge of setting fire to the fraternity house in July, 1933, United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett yesterday directed dismissal of an indictment charging the youths with arson.

Carlton and Smith were convicted in the District Supreme Court many months ago. While their appeal for a new trial was pending in the United States Court of Appeals, Mr. Cummings filed with that court a "confession of error" in which he stated he had caused an investigation of the facts surrounding the fire and was convinced there was no justification for a guilty verdict.

The appellate court refused to consider the "confession," holding that its duty was to review the case on its merits. After a study of the case, the court reversed the verdict and ordered the case retried.

With the case once back in his office for prosecution, Mr. Garnett decided that the personal investigation made by the Attorney General was sufficiently strong to warrant dismissal of the case.

Columbians in Difficult Play Score Success

"Mask and Face" Is Well Played Two Nights in Pierce Hall.

"THE MASK AND THE FACE." The Columbia Players present the comedy-drama in three acts by C. B. Fernald, based on "La Maschera e il Volto." Stage settings by Jane Lazater Rubey. Tapestries and back drop by Marion Murray. Directed by Eileen Fowler. Reviewed Wednesday evening by W. A. Whitney.

In presenting "The Mask and the Face" for the first time before Washington audiences on Wednesday and Thursday nights, the Columbia Players are to be acclaimed again not only for bringing to the capital a brilliantly written satirical comedy of modern matrimonial life and jurisprdence, but for choosing a play which permits the players to show once more that skill in acting and stagecraft that has made the group outstanding.

At times the lines seemed to be a bit more than the players were able to carry, but overlooking what few slips there were, the Players, in the trio of the current season, have presented no more completely satisfying evening in the theater.

They were at all times sure of the content of the drama and the author's intent, and, in making no attempt to assume an Italian dialect, the Columbians devoted their energies to giving an evening of unalloyed pleasure.

Centers in Proud Count.

The play revolves around the proud, arrogant Count Mario Grazia who, thinking his wife unfaithful, secretly banishes her to England. Immediately he confesses the "murder" and after ten months of prison is acquitted and finds himself a great national hero. The wife, however, reappears, and, with the ultimate reconciliation, everything works out all right, turning into grand comedy what might otherwise have been shunted into dire tragedy.

As the Count, Arthur Westover, Balboan beard and all, gave an excellent reading of the self-satisfied, conceited husband who vowed he would do thus and so, if——. Opposite him, as the wife whose love would permit the enduring of a ten-months' exile, Bess Kilkirson cut one of the finest jobs in the Columbian's distinguished catalogue.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Movie Boners Club

Hollywood, Feb. 7.

THE MOVIE Boners Club is in session again, and the following persons may step forward and get their certificate which shows that they are full-fledged club members.

Mickey is first in with a flicker flaw from "Lives of a Bengal Lancer," Gary Cooper and Franchot Tone have sticks put under their fingernails and then the sticks are set on fire. Yet in the next sequence both Gary and Franchot use their fingers as if nothing had happened.

In "Music in the Air," writes Florence Seymour, John Boles is sitting at the table with the blonde girl, June Lange. They have drinks before them. The girl tries on John's monocle and it drops in her drink. She then proceeds to stick her straw through the monocle and fishes it out of her drink very nicely.

When Maurice Chevalier, in "The Merry Widow," arrives at his apartment in Paris, claims Robert Fox, his aid, Sterling Holloway, walks in and throws his hat on a chair. The hat falls to the floor. The aid starts telling Chevalier an incident about two girls. Chevalier moves to the middle of the room and Holloway's hat is on the chair, although no one picked it up.

Another boner is when Chevalier sits at a table in a cafe with Miss MacDonald, the waiter brings the champagne and pours enough to fill a quarter of a glass, first serving Chevalier. Yet when Maurice picks up his glass to drink it is three quarters full. Send for Lubitsch.

ASCENE in the beginning of "The Little Minister," relates Harold Brickman, shows a carriage on the outskirts of Thrums conveying Katharine Hepburn to the town. On the roof of the carriage there is a trunk. In the next scene, when the carriage is in the town, there are three trunks atop the carriage.

Catherine Quinn becomes a club member by looking intently at "Student Tour" and discovering that at the beginning of the big race Maxine Doyle, who is suddenly appointed the coxswain, is wearing a black sweater. Yet at the conclusion of the race, which, of course, her crew wins, Miss Doyle is wearing a white sweater. It's a neat trick, swapping horses midstream, but changing sweaters is a better trick.

In "Flirtation Walk" Dave and Jerry noticed that when Ruby Keeler and Dick Powell were kissing under the Kissing Rock, Chase passed by with a girl. In the first scenes at West Point we observe that Chase is Powell's superior. Yet, with Powell ready to graduate, Chase is still there.

One has to be very observing to notice such movie boners and Felice Franklin must have been watching very closely to see the flicker flaw she insists occurred in "Imitation of Life."

In the early sequences of the picture, Claudette Colbert's child has very dark brown eyes. Later the child grows up and the older girl is played by Rochelle Hudson. Miss Hudson has light blue eyes. Perhaps Felice wanted them to wait with the picture until the child grew up so she could have played the older girl herself.

ROBERT DONAT is duelling with Sidney Blackmer in "The Count of Monte Cristo." In the long shots, Blackmer, according to Harry Halper, is duelling with the sword in his right hand. Then comes a close-up and Blackmer is holding the sword in his left hand.

A double was used in the long shots for the duelling sequence and for the close-up Blackmer posed with the sword, doing a few motions. But the director and the script girl should have checked on the scenes and seen to it that the double and Blackmer both used their left or right hands. This duelling sequence seems to be an example of never letting your right hand know what the other fellow's left hand was doing.

In "Mills of the Gods," says Dorothy Schlumboham, the action of which is supposed to take place in the year 1932, Fay Wray is in a cabin and sings "One Night of Love." So Miss Wray was singing this song a couple of years before it was written—another great trick.

Leave it to the movies to do tricks. There isn't any magic which the camera can't do. Often it accomplishes these feats without trying, without the knowledge that it is performing. There is a grand trick in "The Captain Hates the Sea" which was noticed by Lillian Emerson. A boat with a cargo of passengers leaves California. It is named Capeador. This boat, supposedly the same, with the same group of passengers, completes its voyage and sails into New York Harbor —but now the boat is named the Olympic. No wonder the captain hates the sea.

Six Are Confirmed For Wire Board

Sykes, Opposed by Bilbo, Is Among Number

The Senate yesterday confirmed the nominations of six members of the Communications Commission, including Eugene Sykes, of Mississippi, whose confirmation had been opposed by Senator Bilbo (Democrat), Mississippi.

Representative John McDuffie, of Alabama, was confirmed as Federal judge of the southern district of his State, the Associated Press reports.

Saturdays Off, Pay Rise Asked By Legislators

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 7 (AP).—The House of Delegates sent to the Senate today a proposal to double the salaries of all legislators and hooted down a suggestion of the Democratic floor leader that sessions be held on Saturdays to speed up lawmaking.

The salary-increase proposal is a resolution to ask the voters to amend the constitution to raise legislators' salaries from $500 to $1,000 annually. It was voted on yesterday, but the announcement was not made until this afternoon. The vote was 64 to 24.

Earlier, the Senate's finance committee in a closed session had instructed its chairman, Senator Luther Jones (Democrat), of Boone, to "confer with the Governor immediately regarding administration revenue measures and to urge the administration to prepare and submit its plans as soon as possible."

The bill offered by Delegate Lantz (Democrat), of Wetzel, to reduce the number of colleges supported by the State to three besides West Virginia University and West Virginia State (Negro school) was defeated by the House without debate.

Charge of Petting Reformatory Boys Denied by Women

Granite, Okla., Feb. 7 (AP).—The woman warden and women of Granite today vigorously denied charges that girl prison welfare workers sat on the laps of the youthful prisoners when they carried magazines to the reformatory here.

"These are my boys out here and you don't suppose that I'd let some girl come out here and sit on their laps, do you?" said Mrs. George A. Waters, the warden.

From members of the board of affairs, which is conducting an investigation of the institution, came statements treating the charges lightly. Granite women surrounded the board members protesting the accusations were untrue.

Mrs. Mabel Bassett, commissioner of charities and corrections, who is holding a closed hearing on charges of cruelty to prisoners, declined to comment.

Liquor Bill.

Palmer, Mass., (U.P.)—The Selectmen have received a bill for $3.15 from a motorist, who claims that a bottle of liquor worth that amount was broken when he drove over a stretch of rough road.

White House Dines High Court Off the 'Famous Gold Service'

But the Controversial Metal Is Definitely Not on the Agenda for Discussion as Seven of the Justices Attend Annual Function.

The Capital chuckled last night, the Associated Press says, at the coincidence which sent the justices of the Supreme Court to the White House to dine with President Roosevelt—who perhaps more than any other person wants to know what their decision in the "gold clause" cases will be.

But gold definitely was not a subject for discussion, despite the reminder brought about when the table was set with the famous gold service, customary for formal annual dinners such as the affair last night.

Year in and year out, the dinner to the Supreme Court is held at about this time. Invitations were sent out some time ago, when it looked as if the gold case would be history before February 7.

The associate justices, William Demitz Brandeis and Willis Van Devanter, did not attend. Justice Brandeis does not go out at night because of his health and Justice Van Devanter has gone to no social functions since the death of his wife last summer.

But the other seven, Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes and Associate Justices James Clark McReynolds, George Sutherland, Pierce Butler, Harlan F. Stone, Owen J. Roberts and Benjamin N. Cardozo, marched into the state dining room with some of the solemnity of tread that will take them to the bench for the gold decision.

Other distinguished guests were present: the Attorney General and Mrs. Cummings; ranking members of the House and Senate Judiciary Committees, the Solicitor General and Mrs. James C. Biggs, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard M. Baruch, Raymond Moley and Roland Redmond, counsel for the New York Stock Exchange.

Incidentally, the exchange is speculating on possible effects of the opinion with some of the feverish intensity of Administration officials.

At a recent social affair one of the justices firmly marched away from a group of guests because someone thoughtlessly or purposely made a tiny reference to the impending decision.

Whatever it may be, the Government is "ready for any emergency." That word came today from the Attorney General some hours before he donned white tie and top hat to journey dinner-ward. He smilingly declined, nevertheless, to detail just what the Government would do if it lost.

"Why make such a wild assumption?" he said.

Production Is At Peak on the Hollywood Lots

Arliss to Have Fine Cast; Fox to Begin Nine Soon; About the Showshops.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

With the shadow images of such giants of another day as Lord Wellington, who becomes "The Iron Duke" on the screen; Phineas T., "The Mighty Barnum;" King Henry VIII, and many more, revitalized by the cinema, and with such distinguished works as Dickens' "David Copperfield" and Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream" among the season's notable productions, either completed or "in work," it is important to note that two more films of impressive dimensions are in immediate prospect.

Darryl F. Zanuck, vice president in charge of production for Twentieth Century Pictures, makes known that he has completed the cast for George Arliss' next American-made vehicle, "Cardinal Richelieu," a celluloid adaptation of the Bulwer-Lytton play of the prelate-statesman, recently played at the National by Walter Hampden.

Supporting the star will be Halliwell Hobbes, Edward Arnold, Violet Kemble Cooper, Kathryn Alexander, Maureen O'Sullivan, Cesar Romero, Douglas Dumbrille, Francis Lister, Robert Harrigan, Joseph Tozer, Desmond Roberts, Boyd Irwin, Leonard Mudie, Lumsden Hare, Russell Hicks, Keith Kenneth, Murray Kinnell, Herbert Bunston, David Clyde, Charles Evans, Reggie Sheffield, Frank Dunn and William Worthington—an exceeding able assemblage.

Hugo Also Filmed.

Similar progress is being made in the casting of Twentieth Century's picturization of Victor Hugo's monumental work, "Les Miserables," played back in the remote, silent days, it will be remembered, by William Farnum.

John Beal, last seen locally as leading man in the title role of "The Little Minister," with Katharine Hepburn; Jane Kerr and Ian McLaren are the latest recruits for principal roles in support of the Messrs. March and Laughton.

These United Artists releases serve to add appreciable weight to the argument that to a degree never before paralleled in its history, the motion picture at the moment is making enormous strides in the direction of an adult, intelligent and authentic art as well an incomparable medium of mass entertainment.

It is with feelings of deep personal sorrow and heartfelt sympathy for the bereaved parents that I chronicle the sudden death late yesterday afternoon of Richard Crandall Payette, youngest child of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Payette.

Mr. Payette, general manager of the Warner Brothers' interests in the Washington territory, is one of the Capital's veteran motion picture executives. Mrs. Payette is the former Dorothy "Dixie" Crandall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Crandall—a name indelibly impressed upon the founding of the most extensive theater chain this city can boast.

Having been associated with the Crandall enterprises and Johnny Payette for approximately a decade, the death of Baby Richard Payette comes particularly close. The entire motion picture industry, and a host of friends outside it, will wish to share in these condolences.

Funeral services will be private. They will be held Friday morning at 11, which, had he lived, would have been Baby Richard's first birthday anniversary.

Fox Goes Into High.

Nine productions that will give employment to thousands and occasion an expenditure in excess of $3,000,000 are scheduled to go into work at the Fox West Coast studios within the next 18 days, bringing the "shooting" program up to a new high for the 1934-35 season.

Every star on the lot, with the single exception of Janet Gaynor, will be engaged. Miss Gaynor is being held for "The Farmer Takes a Wife," the film version of the Frank B. Elser-Marc Connelly comedy-drama of the old Erie Canal days, which had its premiere at the National early in the season and will go into production early in March with Spencer Tracy opposite Janet Gaynor at the head of an all-star cast.

The New Ones.

The new list of pictures includes; "The Torch-bearers," tentative title, with Will Rogers, Billie Burke, Alison Skipworth, Sterling Holloway, Madge Bellamy and Johnnie Arthur; "It's a Small World," with Spencer Tracy and Wendy Barrie; "Man Eating Tiger," tentative title, by Ben Hecht and Rose Caylor, with Lew Ayres, ZaSu Pitts, Claire Trevor, Siegfried Rumann, Jack Haley, Walter King and Mitchell and Durant; "$10 Raise" with Edward Everett Horton; "Dice Woman," with Claire Trevor, James Dunn, Jane Withers and Mitchell and Durant; "Heaven's Gate," new Shirley Temple starring vehicle; "Under the Pampa Moon," tentative title, with Warner Baxter and Ketti Gallian co-starred; "Secret Lives," with Mona Barrie and Gilbert Roland; and "Thunder in the Night," an Erich Pommer production the cast for which is not yet definitely set.

Another "Scandals."

In addition, George White's second screen "Scandals," "Dante's Inferno" and "Recipe for Murder" continue in production.

The entire resources of both huge Fox Film studios will be utilized during this unusual rush of production, and several companies will be forced to work at night because of the lack of stage room.

Of this imposing list, "Dante's Inferno," at least, may confidently be expected to add one more to that constantly growing roster of Grade A pictures that are marking the ethical and moral rebirth of the screen.

Dr. L. B. Hohman, associate in psychiatry at Johns Hopkins Medical School, and Dr. R. M. Dorcus, instructor in psychology at the same institution of higher learning, reinforced by a battalion of photographers, newspaper reporters and motion picture executives, might have been heard muttering "Oh, deer; oh, deer!" yesterday as dusk gently drew the mantle of night over the Virginia deer pen at the Washington Zoo.

It seems that these worthy gentlemen had conceived the noble notion of recording the intellectual reactions of a small herd of deer to the sight and sound of their own kind cavorting on a screen. It was a swell idea, but didn't quite seem to jell. When darkness fell and the sound film was spurted through the projector to startle the gentle deer with a few scenes from "Sequoia," in which the principal actors are a deer and a puma, nothing happened.

The lone buck and his five or six doe friends somehow just didn't seem to be interested.

So the psychiatrists and their accomplices called it a day, after a futile hour of trying to make movie fans of a bunch of unappreciative solid-horn ruminants, and packed up their equipment and beat it!

Evidently, the stag at eve had drunk his fill of this sort of foolishness, too, because he merely kicked his heels in the faces of the visitors and advised them to go and consult a couple of good psychiatrists!

Woman Pilot for "Theater."

Helen Richey, first woman pilot licensed to fly the air mail, will be the first to pilot the Central Airline "Flying Theater," when it leaves Washington for Pittsburgh at 5:35 this afternoon.

Miss Richey, an outstanding aviatrix, holds the world's endurance record for women fliers. The other pilot will be Harry Music, who is one of the few aviators to have amassed a record of more than 1,000,000 miles in the air.

The complete passenger list for the flight now includes Gen. Douglas C. McDougal, assistant commandant of the Marine Corps; Eugene L. Vidal, director of Air Commerce; Senator Joseph F. Guffey of Pennsylvania; Stephen A. Cisler, general superintendent of mails; Allen Trench, announcer from WCAE, National Broadcasting Station in Pittsburgh; Leon Shloss, of International News Service; Thomas Rigby, of Universal Service; J. A. Reichmann, of United Press; Philip DeIvernois and C. B. Neill, who will have charge of sound and projection of the picture, "Devil Dogs of the Air," with the flying marines as central figures.

In Pittsburgh, the passengers will be guests of Mayor McNair at a special dinner, following which they will return to Washington.

Radio station WRC will broadcast a description of the preliminary activities at Washington Airport, beginning about 5:30 p. m., as well as Announcer Trench's description of the flight after the plane has left the field.

The Belasco Theater will reopen on the 21st of this month with a new policy and virtually as a brand new theater. Equipped now for motion pictures, it will present the best of European films.

Among the first of these to be shown are "Chapayev," the Soviet film now in its fifth week at the Cameo Theater, New York; Feodor Chaliapin, in "Don Quixote;" Charles Boyer, in "Liliom;" George Arliss, in "The Iron Duke," and all Gaumont-British products released in America.

For the first time, Washington will have a theater devoted exclusively to the showing of European products. All such films, however, will be fully equipped with English titles.

Tonight's Preliminaries.

Tonight's entries in the preliminaries of the annual one-act play tournament, conducted under the auspices of the Community Center Department in the auditorium of Roosevelt High School, Thirteenth and Allison streets northwest, at 8 o'clock, include Minnie Frost Rands' Javanese play, "The Slamatan," to be presented by the Takoma Park Little Theater Group; Cloyd Head's "Grotesques," presented by the Musical and Theatrical Guild of the Department of Agriculture; Martin Flavin's "An Emergency Case," by the Masquers of Sligo Park Hills, and Harry Kemp's "Boccaccio's Untold Tale," presented by the Bartfield Players.

The third and fourth programs of preliminary contests will be held in the same auditorium on Tuesday, February 12, and Thursday, February 14.

Geographical Location Note.

Noted Revue Is Coming Sunday To Local Stage

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

"As Thousands Cheer," the Irving Berlin-Moss Hart revue, produced by Sam H. Harris and a capacity hit for 50 consecutive weeks at the Music Box Theater in New York, will open its week's engagement at the National Theater on Sunday night next, February 10. "As Thousands Cheer" is a topical revue heralded as the most successful musical entertainment of the past several seasons.

This is the only modern musical piece that has ever dared to confine its satire wholly to personalities still living and active in public affairs. Headlines are flashed upon a special curtain and then those headlines come to life upon the stage.

Dorothy Stone, daughter of the famous Fred, and Ethel Waters, foremost of the colored songstresses, are the stars of the revue, supported by Porter Hall, Jerome Cowan, Margaret Irving, Dave Fitzgibbons, Albert Carroll and Hal Forde, with Thomas Hamilton, Clifford Menz, Harold Murray, Grace Cornell, Kurt Graff and others in the secondary parts.

There will be the customary Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

Beginning on Friday, there will troop across the screen at Loew's Palace Theater all of the beloved characters of Dickens' novel of "David Copperfield." In bringing this classic story of David's triumphs and sorrows to the screen, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is said to have achieved almost the impossible by making a perfect selection of players for the leading roles. Among these are W. C. Fields, as Micawber; Roland Young, as Uriah Heep; Edna May Oliver, as Aunt Betsy; Lionel Barrymore, in the role of Dan Peggoty; Frank Lawton, as the adult David, and Freddie Bartholomew, as the juvenile; Maureen O'Sullivan as the tragic Dora, Madge Evans as Agnes, and Lewis Stone as her father. Others in the cast include Elizabeth Allan, Basil Rathbone, Herbert Mundin, Una O'Connor and scores more. Hugh Walpole, noted British author, and Howard Estabrook fashioned the screen play. It will be augmented by the usual supplementary short-reel subjects.

• • • •

James Cagney and Pat O'Brien, with Margaret Lindsay as the feminine interest, will be pictured on the screen at the Earle Theater next week, beginning Friday, in "Devil Dogs of the Air," a story of the flying forces of the United State Marine Corps. The picture was made with the active cooperation of the U. S. M. C., and the Federal Government. The picture is in the nature of a sequel to "Here Comes the Navy." The stage portion of the new bill will be headlined by Ina Ray Hutton and Her Melodears, one of the better female orchestras, featuring Miss Hutton in a tap dance; the Frazee Sisters, singers, and Dorothy Crooker, control dancer. Other acts will be presented by the Trainor Boys, nimble dancers, and the Three Swifts, "among the best clubmen."

• • • •

"Rumba," a vivid story of the love of a tempestuous dancer and a beautiful girl, will be the major screen attraction at Loew's Fox Theater next week, beginning Friday, with George Raft and Carole Lombard in the stellar roles, supported by Margo, Lynne Overman, Monroe Owsley, Iris Adrian and Gail Patrick. The stage headliner for the new week will be George Givot, the "Greek Ambassador of Good Will," who will appear in a specially written act in which he will be assisted by his radio aids, Tommy Mack, Frank Hearst and Eddie Young. The Hal Menken revue also will be on the bill. As a special added attraction the Fox will offer Joe Laurie, jr., and his "Memory Lane" revue, participated in by 15 stars of an earlier day in the theater.

RKO-Keith's announces a special Saturday opening for "Murder on a Honeymoon," third in the series of Edna May Oliver-James Gleason mystery farces. This is a new release in the series that brought "Murder on the Blackboard" to the same screen and in addition to the costars includes Lola Lane, T. De Witt Jennings and Chick Chandler in its cast. The program will be augmented by the customary array of abbreviated camera subjects, embracing Pathe News, cartoon comedy and novelty subjects of special selection.

An unusually strong cast will be seen in the principal roles of "Maybe It's Love" when that new First National production opens a week's engagement on the screen at the Metropolitan Theater tomorrow. The two leads are played by Gloria Stuart and Ross Alexander, a recent recruit from the Broadway stage and a juvenile comedian of the first water. Helen Lowell plays the role of Miss Stuart's mother; Henry Travers, her father. Ruth Donelly and Frank McHugh provide the play's vein of comedy, and Joseph Cawthorn, J. Farrell MacDonald and Maude Eburne complete the cast.

• • • •

Jesse L. Lasky, one of the screen's veteran producers, is the sponsor of "Helldorado," a thrilling and vivid drama that is said to embody the epic sweep of the cinema of an earlier day. It opens tomorrow for a week on the screen at Loew's Columbia. Among the screen notables assembled for his cast by Mr. Lasky may be mentioned Richard Arlen, Madge Evans, Henry B. Walthall, James Gleason, Ralph Bellamy and Stepin Fetchit. The scene of the play is a desolate mining town. The climax of the action is a modern gold rush.

"Sunkist Peaches" is the alluring title bestowed upon the burlesque attraction coming into the Gayety Theater for a week's engagement, beginning with the usual Sunday matinee. The stellar attractions with this Independent Burlesque Association traveling production are Wanda de Von, Washington's own "Venus de Milo," who returns after an absence of two years, and Alexianna, a sensational dancer. Jack Montague is the company's chief comedian, supported by Elvie, Karl Bowers, Charles La Forde, the "Harry Langdon of burlesque;" Lou Petel, Tiny Huff, Hermione and others.

They BRING LIFE TO EACH IMMORTAL CHARACTER

The world waited two years to see Charles Dickens' imperishable romance on the screen. It comes to life now in a mighty motion picture...a masterpiece the like of which has never before been created to quicken the heart-beat, to bring laughter and tears to millions. A cast of 65 great screen personalities portrays its immortal characters...they live again in what we predict will be the best-loved picture of 1935!

The stage and screen worlds of both America and England were combed for two years before the 65 players who portray the beloved characters were finally selected!

LOEW'S PALACE—NOW

(This page is reprinted from yesterday's Washington Post)

TO WASHINGTONIANS . . .

. . . an announcement of still another step in POST PROGRESS

●

● Beginning Monday, February 18, patrons of the "honor system" newspaper racks will be requested to procure their daily copies of The Washington POST from newsstands, newsboys or by carrier delivery service at their homes.

The POST will discontinue use of the racks on that date.

● Originally intended as a service to the public, the "honor system" racks have performed that service only falteringly.

In rainy weather, in the occasional winter blizzards, POST readers who patronize the racks have found their papers water-soaked, or torn, or both.

Unfortunately, the racks have also proved to be a serious encouragement to petty theft and, at the same time, have reduced the earnings of hard-working boys who sell papers upon the streets, carrier boys and newsstand dealers.

● The POST believes that Washingtonians will approve and appreciate its efforts to eliminate an inefficient system and, coincidentally, to remove temptation from the youth of the city and to provide additional employment and earnings for reputable newsboys, dealers and carriers.

When informed of The Post's new policy, various civic, religious and educational leaders of the community made the following comments:

DR. GRACE HAYS RILEY, President, Washington College of Law.
"This move is important, to my mind, in that it will provide employment for honest carriers and at the same time restore in another way a convenient purchasing method for the public. I feel that the honor system failed as much through carelessness on the part of adults as through intentional dishonesty among youngsters."

COL. LESLIE C. GARNETT, U. S. Attorney for the District.
"Removal of the street newspaper sales boxes takes away the temptation of petty theft and will aid immeasurably to the employment of newsboys. You know, most of our Presidents have been newsboys."

"There is no doubt that the present rack system offers boys on the streets an opportunity for petty theft and, although it will be inconvenient personally to me, a consistent rack buyer, I heartily approve of The Post's action."

THE REV. J. C. BALL, Pastor, Metropolitan Baptist Church.
"I approve heartily of your new plan. It not only saves the situation but also gives an increased number of Washington boys a chance to earn money honestly."

THE REV. J. H. HOLLISTER, Pastor, Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church.
"The removal of The Washington Post from the street racks is a very fine thing in my estimation. I also think that the interest which The Post is showing in its carrier boys most commendable."

"The Washington Post is making a very fine move in taking the paper off the street racks. I was once a newsboy myself and know how anxious the boys are to make a little extra money. This plan will do much to smother dishonesty."

MRS. L. B. CASTELL, President, D. C. Parent-Teacher Association.
"Facts seem to indicate that these honor boxes present temptation to both children and adults, leading them to become dishonest. I am glad to hear of their discontinuance by The Post."

DR. COLEMAN W. NEVILS, President, Georgetown University.

RABBI ABRAM SIMON, Washington Hebrew Congregation.
"What was originally installed as a convenience has unfortunately turned out to be a misfortune. I believe it would be wise for all Washington newspapers to agree to discontinue this practice."

"I approve cordially of your new policy to withdraw The Post from street racks, thereby removing possible temptation to dishonesty from our youth and, at the same time, providing additional employment for boys who wish to demonstrate their self respect and willingness to work."

DR. FRANK W. BALLOU, Superintendent of Washington Public Schools.
"In my opinion the move is a very desirable one, since it removes temptation from weak people and increases the possibility of boys doing honest work in the sale of newspapers."

"I have felt all along that these newspaper racks put too great a temptation in the way of children and that there is no possible way of checking the success or failure of such an 'honor system' as this constitutes."

"I have been opposed to these racks ever since they were installed. Such administrators of juvenile justice as Judge Sellers have for years agreed with me that the entire policy is wrong and that newspapers should sell through stores and honest carrier boys and should not set up on street corners this temptation to dishonest boys to steal both the papers and cash."

DR. L. A. ALDERMAN, Director of Education, Federal Emergency Relief Administration.
"I feel that this is an important move and a necessary one toward giving employment to honest news carriers and removing temptation from dishonest ones."

DR. GEORGE W. WOODS, Dean, College of Liberal Arts, the American University.
"The Post is to be commended upon taking this step, which I feel sure is in the right direction. I have felt for years that it was wrong for this temptation to be placed openly before young boys."

LINN C. DRAKE, Scout Executive, Boy Scouts of America, D. C. Council.
"I believe that it is in the interests of character development for boys to remove the temptation of the racks. The Post's action will save many boys from committing what the law regards as a crime."

MARY T. NORTON, Representative from New Jersey, Chairman of the House District Committee.
"In this time, when so many boys are seeking a chance to make a living, I am glad to see The Post give them a better opportunity."

"It should prove a healthy experiment in that it will place more responsibility on the newsboys and better equip them for business."

THE REV. EDWARD BUCKEY, Pastor, Saint Matthew's Church.
"I think that The Post is making a very fine move in aiding the news boys in Washington and also in depressing dishonesty. The papers which are scattered over the streets from these news racks are an eyesore."

DR. CLOYD HECK MARVIN, President, George Washington University.
"I am not an authority on the moral or ethical issues involved, but if only considered from an esthetic point of view, The Post is to be congratulated on its action to remove from the streets the newsstand racks."

DR. MAURICE SHEEHY, Assistant to the Rector, the Catholic University of America.
"The new plan of The Washington Post, which will remove temptation from some weaker boys and give employment to other deserving youngsters, has my hearty approval."

MAJOR ERNEST W. BROWN, Superintendent of Police.
"I never was in favor of the rack system for the distribution of newspapers. Not only do the racks form obstructions on the sidewalks, but they are a constant temptation to children and grown-ups alike. The Post is to be commended for its action. Children charged with taking papers from these racks without depositing money have long been a problem of our juvenile court."

White House Dinner Fetes Supreme Court Justices

Distinguished Guests Attend Fourth State Occasion of Season; Others Invited to Hear a Program of Music.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Varying from the pale pink flowers which have been used in the White House at state dinners this season, red and white carnations in profusion, with white buddleia and maidenhair fern were used at the dinner given last night by the President and Mrs. Roosevelt in honor of the Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States and their wives.

This was the fourth state dinner of the season and was attended by a large number of distinguished guests. The Attorney General and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings and the Solicitor General and Mrs. J. Crawford Biggs were the representatives from the Department of Justice. The Senate was represented by Senator and Mrs. William E. Borah and Senator and Mrs. Henry F. Ashurst.

From the House of Representatives the guests were Representative Hatton W. Sumners and Representative Randolph Perkins, with Mrs. Perkins. Chief Justice Fenton W. Booth, of the Court of Claims, was among the guests, as was Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat, of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, with Mrs. Wheat.

Musicale Is Held.

Following the dinner, there was a musicale, to which additional guests were invited. The program was given by two well known artists, Miss Viola Mitchell, violinist, and Mme. Eide Norena, Norwegian soprano, of the Metropolitan Opera. Miss Mitchell's selections included an andante by Mendelssohn, chanson and pavanne by Couperin, theme and variation by Corelli-Tartini; "Lotus Land" by Cyril Scott, "Polichinelle" by Kreisler, and Spanish dance and arrangement of the De Falla composition by Kreisler.

Mme. Norena, who was the guest earlier in the season of the Minister of Norway and Mme. de Munthe Morgenstierne, included on her program "Spirate Pur Spirato" by Donaudy, the Grand Air from Verdi's "La Traviata," "Eventide" by Agathe Backer-Grondahl, "Clover Field," by the same composer, "The First Meeting" by Grieg, "Sylvelin" by Sinding and "Echo Song," by Thrane, and sung from the famous version of Jenny Lind.

List of the Guests.

A complete list of the guests included the Chief Justice and Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, Mr. Justice James Clark McReynolds, Mr. Justice George Sutherland, Mr. Justice and Mrs. Pierce Butler, Mr. Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fisk Stone, Mr. Justice and Mrs. Owen J. IN A GAS HEATED HOME

No danger of forgetting to remember.

Like the letter we so often "mail" in our pocket, it's hard to remember to order fuel. But not in the Gas Heated home. Fuel worries and snow flurries never gang up to cause chills or fevers and you never forget to remember to have fuel on hand. It's simply there, an endless supply of it, used automatically, as your furnace needs it, and far more sparingly than if you were to regulate it yourself. You see, the gas furnace is run by a simple thermostat and when you set this to the degree of warmth you desire it's like "telling the sun to rise tomorrow morning." Your furnace maintains that temperature, just as sure as the sun will rise. There's nothing else for you to do, except enjoy this perfect comfort, and forget the heating question entirely.

Alimony Banditry Provides Women Legislators a Chance To Reform Heart-Balm Evil

By Malvina Lindsay

THE PUBLIC AIRING of the Fay Webb-Rudy Vallee alimony row should offer a suggestion to feminine legislators along what might be termed woman's sphere in politics. A legal step to reform alimony procedure might appropriately come from the sex that has so successfully followed this easy money pursuit.

* * * *

In the last few weeks women legislators in two States have gotten down to earth and hit at the heart-balm racket. A bill to outlaw such suits has been introduced by Mrs. Roberta West Nicholson in the Indiana Legislature. Mrs. Alma Smith, a member of the Ohio Legislature, announces she will introduce a similar bill in the Ohio body. The action of these women is gallant and courageous inasmuch as it particularly pinches the feet of their own sex. For women as a rule are the chief instigators and beneficiaries of heart balm banditry.

* * * *

Whether or not anything comes of these attempts, it is encouraging to note that women legislators are getting down out of the clouds and tackling concrete problems that should be the special concern of their sex, problems that should be boldly attacked even though they are not so altruistic or high-sounding as "social legislation."

Women in Politics.

FROM THE TIME women went into politics we have been hearing a great deal about their concern with child and social welfare. It has been to the credit of women legislators and members of Congress that in the main they have worked faithfully to eliminate child labor and promote maternal aid, widows' pensions, protection of women in industry and other forms of public welfare. But that has not been enough.

* * * *

Women in public life have shown a strange reluctance to come to grips with certain problems that it is peculiarly their province to deal with. An outstanding instance is their failure so far to work out any standards of hours and pay for domestic servants. The system of medieval serfdom that still prevails in household service is lamentable in view of the steps that have been taken to place under codes and legal protection women in other lines of work.

* * * *

It is begging the point for women to throw their hands in the air and declare that codes or standards can not be formulated for the girl who works in the kitchen, that the intensely personal nature of her work makes it impossible for her to be protected from exploitation. She can be given a definite working day as truly as can the girl who works in a factory. She can be given the same industrial protection and professional respect as any other worker, and it is one of the jobs of women in public life to see that she gets this.

Home Problems Difficult.

IT IS ALWAYS easier—and safer—to work for abstractions than for concrete and close-at-hand reforms. It is easier to enlighten the heathen than to practice Christianity in the midst of nagging relatives; easier to preach international peace than to pursue conciliation with disagreeable neighbors. Hence, women in public life have been a little slow to wade into the homely, under-foot problems.

* * * *

Alimony, like heart balm, is not a particularly "nice" subject for a woman legislator to ally herself with. But it is time women took the initiative in getting this matter worked out in a way not only fair to themselves but to men as well; in a way that will give ample and certain protection to the mother with children or the aging, cast-off wife, but that will curb a system which permits an able-bodied woman to obtain a pension for life through the device of getting a wealthy man's name attached to her marriage license.

* * * *

Women still suffer many legal, social and moral inequalities with men. To fight for these effectively they must have a record clear of unfair play and social chicanery. Feminine legislators might very well get active on some of these more personal matters in order that their sex may come into court with clean hands.

Husband, Wife Disagree Over Advisability of Man Boarder.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: We are an average young couple with one child, struggling to buy our own home. Now, this is our problem, ridiculous as it sounds. In order to make both ends meet, and save a little for a rainy day, we've decided we should rent out one room of our house.

* * * *

I have made some inquiries and am told that a man roomer is the best investment, because they are willing to pay a better rent without objecting, and because they make less work and less expense generally. They don't insist on doing their laundry in the bathroom, and don't expect to entertain their friends in the parlor.

* * * *

But my husband says it ought to be a woman. He is very much in love with me and very jealous, and while he has a sense of humor and jokes about the proverbial trouble that always sets in, domestically, when a man and wife take another man to board, yet he is very much in earnest.

* * * *

I have never got along well with women. I never did even with my own mother and sisters. I'm pretty sure I couldn't stand an older woman in the house, and I wouldn't want a young one either because I see no use in stirring up trouble that way, any more than my husband feels about me. So what should we do?

ANNABELLE.

Sociological Problem.

DEAR ANNABELLE: While it seems to be conceded by boarding-housekeepers that men guests are the best-paying investment, still, if your husband can not curb his emotional reactions when dealing with a financial problem, I believe you will be wise in yielding his point in the interests of domestic accord.

* * * *

It is a matter of statistical record among social welfare workers in many cities (possibly not in Washington, however) that a high percentage of marital discord in that class of society which must supplement an insufficient income by means of paying guests, follows in the wake of the "gentleman roomer." And no matter how gentlemanly the "roomer," if the husband is jealous, trouble is imminent. To heed your husband's frank avowal and choose a woman as your paying guest may be the stitch in time which saves nine later on.

* * * *

Since you have invited an objective viewpoint on this situation, I assume you are willing to make any reasonable sacrifice entailed in arriving at an amicable solution of the problem. And in my opinion that sacrifice means laying aside your prejudices against a woman boarder.

M. H.

America's Impression That British Are Reserved and Distant Is Contradicted by Two Vivacious Visitors From London

So this is America. That phrase has been figuring prominently in the conversation of Stella Langham, left, and Irene Manby, right, a couple of Londoners who arrived here a few days ago. They're impressed with the friendliness of our salesladies and cab drivers.

Stella Langham and Irene Manby Are Friendly and Enthusiastic; Manners of Shop Girls and Servants Impress Them.

ANYBODY who believes all Britishers are reserved and distant should meet Stella Langham and Irene Manby, a couple of Londoners who have been doing the town.

When the door of room 323 at the Mayflower flew open yesterday in response to the reporter's knock, Miss Langham extended her hand in hearty greeting. And right then and there she began living up to and yet contradicting the American conception of an Englishwoman.

She was tall, lanky and tweedy. Her A's were as broad as Pennsylvania avenue, and her speech as clipped as a yew hedge. So far she fitted in with the conception perfectly. But her enthusiasm, her warm friendliness, came near bowling over her interviewer.

"Oh, I say, it's nice of you to come to see us," she exclaimed. "Though I can't imagine what you'll find to talk about. Miss Manby and I are just over for a bit of a jaunt. We leave for Florida tonight. She's downstairs now. Can't imagine what she's up to, but no doubt she's found something to poke into. We English are curious, you know, or didn't you? And there's such a lot to see here in the hotel."

"Our women smoke more than yours. I've noticed it in the short time I've been here. At home we puff away at the cinema and on trains. But on the way from New York to Washington I'd just got a light when a trainman came along and said I really must put it out. He was ever so jolly about it."

Miss Manby Enters.

Then Miss Manby, a roly-poly figure with round brown eyes and silvery short hair, came into the room. Greetings over, she cuddled into an arm chair and announced:

"I've just seen the smartest little dress. The shop had dozens of smart little dresses in all sizes—for tall women, short women, big women, and little women. No wonder American women are smart looking. They can buy clothes that fit them. Inexpensively too. In England things are made in only a few sizes. Not only dresses but shoes. Our clothing makers instead of saying, 'What would you like to have? We will make it for you,' say, 'Here's what we have, you must like it.' But we're gradually getting away from that system. Don't you think so?" she asked Miss Langham.

Miss Langham thought they were.

"Your shop girls enchant me, simply enchant me," said Miss Manby. "I don't mean their clothes, but their manners. You see our trades people are rather servile. But here when I go into a shop an elegant young creature sidles up to me and says, 'Come right this way, dear, and we'll look at hats.'

Taxi Drivers Talkative.

"Oh, and remember the chambermaid at the hotel in New York?" laughed Miss Langham. "I almost fell to the floor when she asked me, 'And what are you going to do today, dearie?'"

"Yes, and the taxi drivers," put in Miss Manby. "They tell us their life histories, including their love problems. But we don't mind. Everyone is so jolly, so friendly. And the food is delicious; so tasty and so daintily served. But why do you keep your buildings so hot? We've nearly perished from the heat indoors and the cold outdoors."

Just then a news photographer arrived to take flashlight pictures of the Misses Langham and Manby. Both women declared it was just too exciting.

"Isn't this just typically American?" Miss Manby asked Miss Langham.

"It could never happen in London," answered Miss Langham.

And then they posed as amicably as a couple of movie stars.

Nicaragua Girls Transformed By 'Quake, Diplomat Declares

Dr. DeBayle Is Convinced Senoritas Are More Glamorous Since Necessity to Earn a Living Has Done Away With Prejudices.

AN EARTHQUAKE in Nicaragua four years ago did for the women of that country what the World War did for the women of the United States. It yanked them from kitchens and nurseries and set them down in front of typewriters and put them back of store counters. Which is all for the best, in the opinion of Dr. Henri DeBayle, Charge d'Affaires of Nicaragua.

He has noticed the girls in his native land are as alluring to men when they work beside them in offices as when they peeped over balconies and between iron grilles. He is convinced the Nicaraguan senoritas have as much glamour in sports costumes and bathing suits as they had in long, enveloping dresses. And they're a lot more companionable.

"Yes, we have got rid of our silly prejudices and we have the earthquake and North American influence to thank for it," said Dr. DeBayle yesterday afternoon at the Nicaraguan Legation. "The earthquake ruined many of our wealthy families, made it necessary for the daughters of those families to work and earn money. Formerly it was a disgrace if a girl of the upper class went into business, even into a profession."

Interested in Politics.

But now, he pointed out, women of the aristocracy are filling prescriptions in drug stores, teaching school, working on the staffs of newspapers and magazines, and, in a few cases, practicing medicine. Although they are not yet permitted to vote, they take a feverish interest in politics, and a couple of them have achieved cabinet portfolios.

But for all their emancipation the real ambition of girls in Nicaragua's upper class is still to find husbands, Dr. DeBayle confided.

"However, it is that way in the United States, too, it seems to me," he smiled. "But in my country marriage puts the woman back in the home. The husband feels it is an insult to his pride if his wife keeps on working to earn money."

As soon as a Nicaraguan girl is married she devotes her time to her household and to her personal appearance. Attention to the latter is responsible for the many happy marriages among his people, the Charge d'Affaires believes.

Social Life Contrasted.

"When the husband comes home the wife is always dressed prettily, so he will have something attractive to look at. She has powder on her face and red paint on her lips," Dr. DeBayle said. "And if the husband goes out in the evening, his wife usually accompanies him. That is, indeed, an advance in the social life of my country. I can remember when the men and women had separate bathing beaches and when the men spent their evenings at their clubs and the women stayed at home alone or visited with other women."

Dr. DeBayle believes North American influence has wrought this change in the social customs of Nicaragua; thinks that while Europe influences South America it is the United States which sways Central America.

Our modern ideas on child training, however, have not penetrated Nicaragua.

"Here you are what you call scientific," he smiled. "There, if a baby cries, the grandmother, the aunt, the mother, everybody rushes to it and pets it. We insist that our children be happy all the time. But your way of rearing them is excellent. You teach them self-reliance and through discipline give them a sense of responsibility. That is good."

How To KEEP WELL

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

FOR centuries medicine has been recognized as a beneficent service. While dentistry is a younger profession and less frequently involves the grave issues of life, nevertheless it holds within its grasp the intricate balance of human weal or woe. What can be more excruciating than the pain from an abscessed tooth?

Straightened Teeth.

The dentist performs a service of great value to mankind and in this connection we may well consider the recent development of orthodontia, the art of straightening teeth. In many a hapless child the mouth is marred and the features distorted by misplacement of the teeth. Such a one suffers a functional and esthetic handicap unless, through the skillful ministrations of the dentist, lines of symmetry and grace are restored. The child is thus given a fair chance in life and psychic inferority complexes vanish. It is not only a matter of a pleasing countenance, for it gives the proper means of mastication and of expanding the air passages for facility in breathing.

As a health measure the elimination of infection in the mouth is an important factor in the promotion of hygiene and in the prevention and control of disease. Many people have been handicapped by the retention in the mouth of diseased and putrescent teeth. This does not mean that every affected tooth must be lost. With modern methods of treatment many of these teeth may be saved and rendered healthy and serviceable. But it is with teeth as with other things—they can not be neglected indefinitely and still be preserved.

Highest Dental Achievement.

And here comes the final chapter of dental achievement. Few things in life would be more disastrous than to lose the teeth and be compelled to go forever after without them. Here the dentist steps in and supplies by his art the loss that had been brought about by disease.

Manifestly, were it not for the kindly offices of the restorative dentist the comfort and happiness of many persons would be seriously marred and their lives materially shortened. Any service as vital as this must be reckoned as a major contribution to the welfare of society, and the dentist must be regarded as a benefactor of the race.

Boy's Ambition Often Spurred By 'Best Girl'

HAS YOUR SON a "best girl?" Then rejoice and be exceedingly glad, for great will be your reward in that young son's progress. At least, so says a mother of sons writing in the current issue of the Parents' Magazine, who, without hesitation, declares:

"A best girl is the greatest spur to ambition that a boy can have. He is anxious to show up well in her eyes either on the field of sport or in his studies.

"If she is right—and she probably is—when your son rushes home from school, slicks his hair and scours his hands, don't be too sure he suddenly is taking your constant admonitions to heart. The chances are that a belle of his class has him under her spell and is training him in the way he should go much more successfully than you could. As years go on and he shows an increasing indifference to the family, a desire to take out the family car at inconvenient times, don't worry. His best girl, if she is the right sort, is inspiring him to high endeavor in something, almost anything—athletics, psychology, sociology, culture. It may even be from her he is taking a course in sane behavior.

Many Do Not Drink.

"If your son doesn't drink, don't be too quick to pat yourself on the back. The credit may belong to his best girl. She is the one who has to talk to him, drive in the car with him. If she is disinclined to expose herself to the discomfort of a partner overexuberant or dull, he does not risk her disapproval.

"A boy-and-girl attachment may develop into a serious love affair, of course, but better an elopement than for a mother to keep her son tied to her apron strings. By so doing, a mother keeps her boy from knowing the opposite sex and from possessing the judgment to make intelligent choice of the mother of his own children. If his friendship with girls is not encouraged when he is a youngster, when he comes to manhood and is urged by some inner force to seek the society of women, he will flounder about in that unknown sea like a mariner without a compass.

"With this dire prophecy in mind, foolish the mother who strives to keep all women but herself out of the picture."

Defense Group Will Hear Two Speakers Today

Mrs. Kahn and Col. J. O. O'Laughlin to Address D. A. R. Committee.

REPRESENTATIVE FLORENCE P. KAHN, of California, will address the national defense committee of the District of Columbia Daughters of the American Revolution at 10:30 o'clock today at the Mayflower Hotel.

Mrs. Kahn's husband, the late Representative Julius Kahn, chairman of the Military Affairs Committee during the World War, was sponsor for all legislation regarding the Army in the House of Representatives at that time.

Col. John Callan O'Laughlin, editor and publisher of the Army and Navy Journal, will also address the meeting on "National Defense." Col. O'Laughlin has campaigned in many parts of the world. He served under the late President Theodore Roosevelt, accompanying him to Africa and Europe.

Mrs. Baldwin at Hearing.

IN advocating on behalf of the National League of Women Voters the passage of the Logan civil service bill, designed to strengthen the classified civil service, Mrs. Harris T. Baldwin, vice president of the league, yesterday told the Senate Civil Service Committee the bill offered "an opportunity to launch a broad program of improvement in public employment."

"Our experience has taught us," Mrs. Baldwin said, "that the wisest of laws can be nullified and the best forms of administrative organization undermined by the appointment of incompetent and unqualified personnel. If we as citizens are to support these services with our tax money, then we have a right to demand that all public employes be well-trained and eager to do a good job."

Mrs. Miller to Review Book.

MRS. HOPE RIDINGS MILLER will review Isabel Anderson's latest book, "In Southern Seas," and discuss book reviewing for newspapers at the journalism group meeting of the District of Columbia League of American Pen Women at 8 o'clock tonight at the league's studio, 1120 Vermont avenue northwest.

Mrs. Edna Knight Gasch will give a talk on "Writing for Trade Journals." Mrs. Evelyn Norcross Sherrill is chairman of the group.

New Facial Kit On Sale Keeps Skin Healthy

By Ruth Anne Davis.

BUSINESS women who haven't leisure to spend on the care of their skin and appearance find the essentials for facial grooming in a small handy kit that has recently appeared.

It contains a cleansing cream which rids the pores of dirt and grime and removes all vestiges of old make-up. Also since it contains 750 vitamin D units, it is a big aid in restoring and keeping the skin in a healthy and normal condition.

For use after the cream there is an excellent skin tonic which is refreshing and soothing. In addition, there is a lotion, which softens and whitens the skin. It is exceptionally beneficial for preventing chapping. If your face—or hands—are already chapped this lotion will prove a real boon.

The kit is further completed with both powder and rouge.

Serviceable Jackets.

Velveteen or corduroy jackets in brown, green, red, rust and two shades of blue will go a long way toward brightening a winter skirt. Besides they are so serviceable. During the cold spells they keep you as warm and cozy as a couple of sweaters and yet they are several times more comfortable.

You'll find these in a downtown store reduced to $1.47 and $1.97.

While they are adapted to all ages and all types, they are proving particularly popular with high school girls.

Graphology Expert.

Your handwriting, just as the lines in your hands, tells the inmost secrets of your personality, those who are gifted in this manner of reading say.

For the time being there is a graphology expert at a downtown store who will look at your scribbling and tell you whether you're impulsive, indiscreet, analytical, self-conscious, nonchalant, emotional, talkative or generous.

Not only will he read for you, but he will give you a chart that will enable you to do a little graphology on your own. His fee is only 10 cents.

Three-Section Mirrors.

With one of the three-section mirrors on sale in a local store you can make your own dressing table from a mere shelf or soap box.

The mirror has one long centerpiece and two mirror wings. It will stand conveniently on any flat surface and allow you to see front, side and back.

Those who live in small apartments often turn the bathroom into a dressing room too. By building a small shelf here, adding some cretonne curtains and using the three-section mirror they have a handy and attractive dressing table that takes up little room.

Tapestry Bags.

Tapestry bags are favorites with many. They are a combination of so many subdued colors that they are suitable for almost any costume. Those featured are particularly popular because of their reduced prices. If you have ever shopped for similar bags you know they are usually expensive. These, however, sell for as little as $1 or as much as $3. They're available in myriads of designs, at least half a dozen styles, and many colors.

Suits With Two Skirts.

In February a woman's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of her spring wardrobe. She will find, if she visits a certain downtown store, that the suits featured here are the answer to her coat suit dreams.

These are jaunty affairs with double-breasted tailored coats with action backs. Each suit has two skirts, one to match the coat and the other in a contrasting shade.

The cost of these ultra chic suits is amazingly low since you're really getting two suits in one. They're only $16.95.

Convenient Knitting Bags.

For only 39 cents you may buy a knitting bag that looks as if it cost several times as much. It is woven from hundreds of strands of varicolored threads arranged in criss-cross patterns.

These come in plaids, stripes and checks in a myriad of colors. They are a splendid workaday size, being large enough to carry a complete batch of knitting and yet not so large they're troublesome.

Simple Sunday Roast Substitute Is Provided in a Planked Steak

Here is a dinner that men will rave about—sirloin steak, broiled to perfection, served on a plank and surrounded with spinach nests filled with diced buttered carrots and bordered with fluffy mashed potatoes.

Enthusiasm Will Greet This Dish Prepared With Little Work.

By Dorothea Duncan.

EVERY HOUSEWIFE should know how to prepare a planked steak dinner. This is one of the simplest of meals to fix, and it is one that men would walk a mile in which to indulge. Why not plan to have a planked steak dinner this Sunday instead of the traditional roast of beef or fowl. It will mean a lot less work for you, and the family will be enthusiastic about it from the moment it appears upon the dinner table.

The steak should be prepared with especial care. Preheat your broiler until it is very hot. Place the steak about 3 inches below the flame on the broiler rack. When one side has become seared and nicely browned, turn the steak and let the other side brown. If the family prefers their steak rare, this browning of both sides of the meat will be sufficient cooking. If the family prefers the steak medium or well done, lower the rack or the flame and cook for a while longer.

Place the steak in the center of a wooden plank and surround it at intervals with little nests of cooked spinach which have been filled with diced buttered carrots. Then make a border of mashed potatoes around the steak. This may be accomplished by forcing the potatoes through a pastry bag. Sprinkle the steak with salt and pepper and some melted butter and brush the potato border with beaten egg yolk. Place the plank under the broiler again until the potatoes are a delicate brown. This will take but a few minutes. The flame should not be too high for this final browning. Serve the steak immediately after it is removed from the oven. The plank is usually placed on a large platter in front of the member of the family who does the carving.

In Washington the steak, which combines the sirloin and the tenderloin, is called a sirloin steak and is one of the best for the planked steak. Have your steak about one and one-half inches thick. In case the family prefer their steak thoroughly cooked a thicker steak will dry out less than a thin one.

Coffee Caramel Parfait.

2 tablespoons medium ground coffee
2 egg yolks, well beaten
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ cup sugar, carmelized
½ cup sugar
1½ cups heavy cream

Scald coffee with milk in double boiler and strain immediately. Add caramelized sugar. Beat egg yolks with remaining one-half cup sugar and salt, and add to first mixture. Cook until slightly thickened, stirring constantly, then cool. Add cream and vanilla. Pour into a mold, filling it to overflowing, cover with waxed paper, press cover tightly down over paper and pack in equal parts ice and salt. Let stand three to four hours, or place in trays of automatic refrigerator and let stand three to four hours. Makes 1½ quarts of parfait.

To caramelize sugar, place one-half cup sugar in skillet over medium flame and stir constantly until melted and quite dark. Remove from fire. Add to coffee mixture and stir until dissolved.

Culbertson on Bridge

One Clover.

During the World Bridge Oympic a lady found difficulty in sorting her cards. Starting with six suits she finally got the hand down to five and it required the services of a kibitzer to scale it down to the necessary four.

With commendable deliberation she scrutinized her holding and then bid "One Clover."

Expert bidders are not content merely to arrive at their best contract or double opponents when they reach without interference a contract they can not make. If the opponents are too wary to overbid their hands unaided the expert steers them into the wrong contract and gently administers the lethal blow with the ax. Consider the highly dangerous, yet extremely subtle and almost unreadable way the East and West pair outmaneuvered the South player in today's hand.

1—A very bad bid, but South could not resist the temptation to overbid a hand containing two five-card major suits.

2—The first step in the campaign. West knows South can not hold great club support, but North will probably interpret the two diamond bid as showing club length. This bid, which indicates West has no club losers, will probably convince North that South has club support and South that North has a long suit.

3—East is not sure West is kidding or whether he really has no club losers. In either event South will feel compelled to take some action over the five-diamond bid and it will not be a penalty double since South has announced shortness in diamonds.

4—South bites at the bait and decides that the opponents are trying to steal something.

The Play.

The play was more or less cut and dried. A diamond was opened, declarer winning with the Ace and the Jack of spades was finessed. East winning with the King. A club return was taken by the Queen and the spade ten led, which, in a misguided moment, declarer decided to finesse. East won with the Queen and gave his partner a ruff. In addition to these three losing tricks declarer could not avoid giving up two trump tricks for a loss of 900 points.

What Today Means

By Mary Blake.
"Aquarius."

IF FEBRUARY 8 is your birthday the best hours for you on this date are from 11:30 a. m. to 1:30 p. m., from 3:30 to 5:30 p. m. and from 8:30 to 10:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 9:30 to 11:30 a. m., from 5:30 to 7:30 p. m. and from 10:30 until midnight.

Be careful you do not buy "a cat in a bag" today by trusting some one else to select something you wish to purchase unless you have complete confidence in his judgment as well as good taste. It will be good judgment in business transactions to refrain from "knocking" competitors or their goods, for you may find to your sorrow: "A knock is a boost." In business as well as social contacts be careful you do not allow the ill-advised action of a friend to cause you to vent your spleen on an innocent person.

Irratibility usually is the result of turbulent thinking, so today if something causes angry thoughts try replacing them with harmonious ones and you may be surprised at the gratifying results. People suffering from a financial pressure are likely to find the strain greatly lessened before the day is over.

If a woman, and February 8 is your birthday, the sooner you make up your mind to cheerfully regard what may now seem a burdensome task, as a labor of love, well worth your efforts, the happier you will become, and the easier your work will be. You will find one of the greatest gifts one can have is a faculty of being able to adjust one's self to a change in conditions.

If a man, and February 8 is your natal day, you will probably succeed best in a profession or business where original ideas can be developed and put into practice. Laboratory or scientific research work, engineering, painting or writing should be lucrative.

AIR STEWARDESS

By VIDA HURST

Irene Gardner finds the duties of an air stewardess soothing balm to her heartache after Dr. Bart Ralston breaks their engagement. To pursue his ambition he becomes engaged to Peggy Reagan, whose father is a famous surgeon.

Irene's indifference to men attracts Barney O'Sullivan, a pilot, who accepts her challenge by impudently kissing her. Though she protests volubly, Irene knows that she is irresistibly drawn to Barney.

Bart no longer disturbs her thoughts . . . even though he would like to. He has tired of his bargain and pleads with her to forgive and forget.

Peggy suspects that Bart still loves Irene, and counters with hints of a flirtation of her own. When Irene sees Peggy board the plane one morning with the mysterious suitor, she proceeds to nip Peggy's escapade promptly. The alleged "movie director," whose talk of Hollywood has turned Peggy's head, is only a film salesman whose reputation has already reached Irene's ears. Peggy is grateful to Irene, and solemnly asserts that she is a changed girl. Irene invites her to play tennis with her friends.

IT surprised Irene to discover that Peggy played a hard, swift game of tennis, better even than her own. On the court the girl had a sense of sportsmanship and fairness. Barney liked her and said so as the four of them walked slowly back to the Burbank station.

"That Peggy girl is all right," he said to Irene. "And can she play tennis?"

"All she needs is a chance," she admitted. "If she could find someone who really cared for her . . ."

"It's all any girl needs," he cried gayly. "Even you, my sweet!"

An Emotional Coward.

They had gradually dropped behind the other couple and now Barney's hand slid down her arm.

"Why are you afraid to admit it?" he demanded. "You are so brave about everything else."

"Oh, yes, you are," he accused. "Where your emotions are concerned you're just a coward. Not only that, but you are constantly deceiving yourself as to your real desires and motives."

Indignantly silent, she stalked beside him until they reached the station. Another pilot was taking her back to Los Angeles so Barney said goodby.

Peggy Was Excited.

"Think it over," he said, smiling into her eyes, "and you'll realize that I'm right."

Irene did not answer and after he had gone she had no time to think. Peggy engrossed all her attention with her conversation. Hadn't it been exciting, she gushed, and weren't Al and Barney fun? Barney was the sweetest thing and weren't Al's freckles adorable? Has Irene noticed the way he looked at her?

"Almost, but not quite, the same way that Barney looks at you," Peggy confided. "He said I certainly played a swell game of tennis, too, and he asked for my telephone number."

Family Might Worry.

Norman Drury's memory seemed to have been completely dissipated by the game of tennis. But on the way home Irene could see that Peggy was thinking.

"Do you suppose they'll be worried about me?" she asked. "I hid my suitcase in the garage and told father I was going to take an early ride."

"They may not have thought anything about it," Irene comforted her. "You'll be home in time for dinner."

"You don't think I ought to make a clean breast of it and tell Bart everything?" Peggy asked anxiously as if fancying herself in that dramatic role.

"No, I don't. Men are funny about things like that. He would be sure to take it much more seriously than you meant it and he would never be able to realize that you could do such a thing and remain so utterly unaffected by it."

Later Irene didn't know whether to laugh or cry when she saw that Peggy had dropped her imitation of Ruth Chatterton for one which the air hostess was forced to admit resembled herself. Steve had said she would do it eventually.

Irene was glad to be back at the apartment again. It had been a difficult day. Virginia was spending the night in Seattle and Eve was not at home. The apartment needed cleaning and the laundry had not been put away, but she was too tired to do anything but eat her dinner and go to bed. And she slept late the next morning, secure in the knowledge that she would not have to leave for San Diego until noon.

Uniform Was Gone.

When she started to dress, she discovered that her uniform had disappeared. Certain that she must have hung it up the night before, she searched her closet but it wsa not be found. The time to leave for the airport arrived and, although she looked every place she could think of, even in Eve's room, there was no sign of it.

Not daring to waste any more time looking for it, she telephoned the airport to find out who wasn't working not only that day but the next, as she would have to stay in San Diego over night. They told her that Nancy Briggs was due in at 11:15 and would be off until Wednesday. So Irene left word for Nancy to wait at the airport until she arrived.

It was humiliating to have to admit that she actually couldn't find the uniform she had taken off the night before. Nerve wracking to hurry to the airport and change clothes with the bewildered Nancy.

"But where is your uniform, Irene? Where were you last night?"

"I was at home in bed and sound asleep. I could swear I hung it up in my closet as I always do."

Nancy looked skeptical and Irene couldn't blame her, but there was no time to discuss it.

It was a bad trip. Foggy and rough. The plane was crowded and the passengers unusually difficult. rough. The plane was crowded and tered before she started, almost lost her temper when a man, who had been gruff and ungracious, handed her a tip.

Flushing deeply, she returned it. "I can't accept it," she said.

Irene Still Worried.

"Why not?" he insisted, attempting to force it into her hand.

But controlling herself, she managed to say calmly, "It is against the rules. Any courtesy we render is a part of the air line service."

He grunted and returned it to his pocket, but the experience had grated upon the girl's already jangled nerves. It was passengers like him who were the flies in her ointment. Men who either acted as if she were a servant, being pleasant in the hope of reward, or those who disdained her small attentions as if they were afraid she might be trying to flirt with them. She was frowning as she went to her hotel and, although a hot bath and good dinner restored her equanimity, she was still worrying over the disappearance of her uniform when she returned to Alameda the following day.

"If you can't find it, you'll have to get another one," the chief stewardess said. "You must have one by the time you go to work again."

France, Britain To Act if Reich Balks Air Pact

Two-Power Alliance Is Due if Hitler Refuses to Join Accord.

Paris, Feb. 7 (U.P.).—France and Great Britain tonight were believed prepared to negotiate a defensive air allegiance if Germany rejects their invitation to adhere to the proposed air pact suggested last week-end at London.

Diplomatic negotiations on this vital issue will be conducted in Paris with the arrival tomorrow of Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, who was party in London to the accord of air assistance suggested by Premier Pierre Etienne Flandin.

Reports from the British capital indicate the government has no intention of replacing the prewar Entente Cordiale by an alliance along similar lines on the air strengths—but these advices contradict a declaration published in Le Matin from London, quoting Sir John as saying replies to Germany and Belgium will not affect the proposed air entente with France. Belgium already has approved joining.

The Le Matin dispatch was taken to indicate the British cabinet is prepared to go ahead with the "aerial Locarno" without Germany, if necessary, although hoping Adolf Hitler will approve.

The return of the German Ambassador, Roland Koester, to Berlin, presages opening of discussions between Paris and Berlin over the London proposals.

Germany undoubtedly will offer counter-proposals which may not concern so much an air convention as two other principal preoccupations for Germany—equality of armaments and the projected Eastern Locarno. The Reich has not changed her stand of equality, and as yet remains dubious about entering into an Eastern European pact of mutual assistance.

Apple Ruling Causes Protest

Spray Edict, Growers Say, Would Mean Extra Expense.

Efforts to induce the Department of Agriculture to withdraw its order reducing the tolerance of lead arsenate spray on apples were made yesterday by members of the Washington State congressional delegation and representatives of apple growers and shippers throughout the West.

The Associated Press reported that the delegation had a conference with Secretary Wallace to discuss the recent order.

Shippers and growers say the order, if enforced, would cost them thousands of dollars a year in removing the spray by which insects and other pests are kept out of apples. They say it will mean several additional washings of the fruit after picking, which is a costly process.

Senator Byrd (Democrat), Virginia, said he was studying the effect of the order on Virginia apple growers and probably would make a protest to Wallace.

West Virginia Man Dies by Own Hand

Bullet Wound Fatal to C. H. Garrett.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.). Carroll H. Garrett, 65, died at a local hospital last night of a revolver wound self-inflicted on his head Tuesday afternoon at his home. He did not regain consciousness after being admitted to the hospital.

The family laid the act to nervous troubles and despondency. A verdict of suicide was given and no inquest ordered by the coroner.

He was a retired power company worker and a native of Frederick County, Va. The widow, one son, two daughters, two sisters and two brothers survive.

Burial will be here Saturday.

Ickes Announces Plans for Garage

Underground Structure to Care for 800 Cars.

Secretary Ickes yesterday announced plans for construction of an underground garage designed to take between 700 and 800 automobiles off the downtown streets.

The garage will be for use of Interior Department employes. It will be situated in the square bounded by New York avenue, Virginia avenue, Nineteenth and Twentieth streets. The land is owned by the Government and is now occupied by Temporary Building No. 2, which will be razed.

The garage will be paid for from $11,000,000 fund previously allotted for a new Interior Department building.

Flandin Power Periled in Vote By French Body

Premier Wins Narrow Victory After Hisses Greet Him in Street.

Paris, Feb. 7 (AP).—Booed and hissed in the streets of Paris yesterday, Premier Pierre - Etienne Flandin narrowly escaped defeat in the House of Representatives today.

A sudden surprise attack launched by Socialists, Radical Socialists and miscellaneous enemies of the regime came within an ace of besting the premier's forces. The margin of victory was 56 votes, the slenderest since Flandin came to power in November.

The vote—318 to 262—was on the examination of the cabinet's decrees, which Parliament must ratify. There was no question of confidence, but Flandin himself made the issue, insisting the normal procedure be followed. Friends thought his margin would be at least 250.

The vote came after Socialists, supported by Radical Socialists and others of Flandin's own government bloc, sought to have a special committee examine the decrees, thus giving Flandin's enemies an opportunity to concentrate their fire against ratification.

Opponents said the premier's prestige suffered greatly as a result of the public jeering to which Nationalists subjected him yesterday. They took that as an indication that Flandin was losing his popularity with the right and the center, upon which he depends for half his majority.

Head Named By Chamber Of Virginia

Johns Chosen President as Charlottesville Parley Ends.

$100,000 State Advertising Drive Approved by Delegates.

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 7 (AP).—Jay Johns, of Albemarle County, first chairman of the Virginia Public Works Administration Advisory Board and member of the State Art Museum and Armory Commissions, was elected president of the Virginia Chamber of Commerce at the close of the eleventh annual meeting here this afternoon. The directors also chose E. Lee Trinkle, of Roanoke, as vice president, and re-elected Julien Hill, of Richmond, treasurer.

The executive commitee for the next year will include these three as well as L. U. Noland, of Newport News, retiring president; Gordon Bohannon, of Petersburg, and Col. Leroy Hodges, managing director.

Plan Advertising Drive.

At the membership meeting this morning, representatives of 17 chambers throughout the State voted approval of a plan to obtain $100,000 for a Virginia advertising fund. Half will be asked of the General Assembly by the chamber and the conservation commission and the remainder will be sought among members. Before the matter was placed in discussion by Mr. Trinkle, Col. Hodges informed the members that execution of the plan would be impossible "unless the Virginia communities are ready to support such a movement."

An operating budget of $80,000 was set for the coming year.

Seven directors were elected this morning. Five who will represent congressional districts on the board are Marshall King, Alexandria, eighth; Heth Tyler, Norfolk, second; Robert Daniel, Brandon, fourth; James Gilliam, jr., Lynchburg, sixth, and Charles K. Brown, Staunton, tenth. All will serve three years.

5-Point Program.

Twelve others were chosen from the State at large for a one-year period. They are John Brownley, Norfolk; Heck Ford, Martinsville; Ben Gunter, Accomac; Dr. W. D. Haden, Charlottesville; Norman Hamilton, Portsmouth; Thomas Herring, Harrisonburg; B. O. Hill, Suffolk; R. C. Hopkins, Fredericksburg; E. A. Hults, Saltville; Mr. Johns, John W. Mimis, Luray, and M. Trinkle.

A program embodying five main points was presented by Mr. Noland in his address. This calls for study of the State's tax system with attention to the sales tax plan, and a series of research studies in public education, highway construction and needs, the industrial and employment trend in Virginia, and industrial zoning and stream pollution.

Along the Tri-State Trail

With

C. B. Carr

Post State Editor.

LIKE an incident plucked from the pages of a Bram Stoker novel, a woman was brought back to life this week in the Richmond Memorial Hospital after physicians had described her as dead.

The "temporary" death occurred during an operation for a brain tumor. After the heart action and breathing had stopped, a powerful dose of adrenalin was administered. The woman's eyes fluttered and her heart began to beat steadily. She was then placed under a mechanical lung which forced breathing for 13 hours before she died.

When interment is held this week for Allan Wallace, 56, who died in Cambridge, Md., it will be the second time that burial has been held in his name.

Five years ago his family received word that the body of a man of his description was found floating in the Baltimore Harbor. A friend of Wallace's visited the morgue and was convinced the body was that of Wallace. Rites were held and the body was interred in the Cambridge Cemetery.

Two weeks later, Capt. David Messick met Wallace on the street in Baltimore. Returning home, he assured his family of the mistake in identification.

A Lynchburg, Va., woman was arrested this week after she had mowed down 11 mail boxes along McKinney street with her automobile. She was charged with driving while intoxicated.

Bench and Bar Honor Memory Of Two Judges

Memorial Services Held at Annapolis for Digges and Worthington.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—The bench and bar of Maryland today paid high tribute to two former members of the State judiciary, W. Mitchell Digges, Charles County, and Glenn H. Worthington, Frederick County, both of whom died within the last year.

Judge Digges for ten years was chief judge of the Seventh Circuit, comprising Prince Georges, Calvert and St. Marys counties, while Judge Worthington presided over the Sixth Circuit, which embraces Montgomery and Frederick counties, more than a quarter of a century.

The life and services of the two jurists were extolled at memorial services held before the Court of Appeals, of which they were members, at 2 p. m. today. The courtroom was crowded by attorneys from the several counties, and many Senators and members of the House of Delegates. Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor, acting as master of ceremonies, formally notified the court of the death of the two judges and read resolutions adopted by the bar of the Sixth Circuit on Judge Worthington, and of the bar of the Seventh Circuit on Judge Digges. Addresses on the life of Judge Worthington were delivered by Attorney John S. Newman, of Frederick, and George H. Lamar, Montgomery County. Speaking on the life of Judge Digges were Attorneys John F. Mudd, Charles County; John B. Gray, sr., Calvert County; Ogle Marbury, Prince Georges County, and Philip H. Dorsey, St. Marys County. The response in behalf of the court was by Chief Judge Carroll T. Bond.

Judges on the bench during the exercises, in addition to Judge Bond, were Benjamin A. Johnson, First Circuit; W. Mason Sheehan, second; T. Scott Offutt, third; D. Lindley Sloan, fourth, and F. Neal Parke, fifth. Oddly, the absentees were the representatives from the circuits from which the deceased jurists came, Judge Walter J. Mitchell, of Charles County, who is suffering from a leg farcture, and Judge Hammond Urner, Frederick, detained by business engagements.

West Virginia Home Destroyed by Blaze

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—Harry F. French, of Allensville, near here, lost his home and all his furniture when a defective chimney started a fire yesterday. French and his family, 11 all told, battled the flames vainly after they were discovered in the six-room house. The loss is estimated at around $2,500.

Building Will Relieve Crowded Condition of Dormitories.

PWA Furnished Funds for Project, Started Last Year.

Harrisonburg, Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—Senior Hall, $140,000 dormitory just completed and being occupied this week by the Harrisonburg State Teachers College, brings the college within three buildings of the number originally planned for the school, now the largest women's college in Virginia. The new hall, three stories high and housing 116 students, greatly relieves crowded conditions in other dormitories.

The first floor contains a lobby, a men's lounge, three parlors, a chaperon's suite of living room, bedroom and bath, and a kitchen, equipped in the most modern manner. The second and third floors also have kitchenettes, for the use of students giving parties, and 29 suites, each of which has two bedrooms and a bath and accommodates four young women. The large basement and attic provide storage space.

In the basement also are rooms with equipment for distributing electric current for lights, clocks and bells, and for furnishing water continuously heated. The dormitory is heated from the college's central heating plant.

Walls of the bedrooms, parlors and kitchenettes are finished in light buff, while those of the corridors and lobby are in light green. Doors are of bottle-green color and all woodwork is in ivory. The floor coverings of the corridors are in green. Other furnishings are not yet complete.

The building, constructed of local blue limestone and trimmed with local gray limestone, is of the same general type of architecture as the other campus structures.

Architect's plans were drawn by J. B. Walford, of Richmond, who was represented in the construction work by T. Ewalt. The Public Works Administration, which furnished the money for the project, was represented by H. E. Calisch, of Richmond.

John C. Senter, of Roanoke, obtained the contract for building on March 16, 1934. It is said by engineers familiar with the construction of the dormitory that it probably would have cost $200,000 to duplicate if building had been delayed until this year.

The college will repay $105,000 of the building fund, using room rents charged those occupying the dormitory for that purpose. The other $35,000 was granted by the PWA.

Virginia Cuts Power Rates Third Time

Capitol Improvements of $1,759,000 Also Get Approval.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 7 (AP).—The State Corporation Commission today authorized the third reduction in Virginia Electric & Power Co. current rates within two years. The reduction ordered today totaled $402,000.

In an announcement of the reduction, the commission made public a table showing how the residential consumers' bills will be affected. It follows:

Current.	Under old rate.	Under new rate.
20 kw. hrs. per month...	$1.30	$1.20
30 kw. hrs. per month...	1.95	1.80
40 kw. hrs. per month...	2.60	2.25
50 kw. hrs. per month...	3.25	2.70
70 kw. hrs. per month...	4.25	3.60
100 kw. hrs. per month..	6.30	4.80
200 kw. hrs. per month..	7.50	7.05

A previous reduction of $41,000 was ordered January 1, when the home service rate was altered downward. The rates were cut $366,000 after the Saville inquiry in 1933. The 1933 reduction was followed by an increase of 4,000 in the number of company customers.

The reduction was announced after a conference today between H. Lester Hooker and Thomas Ozlin of the commission and Jack G. Holtzclaw, president, and T. Austin Moore, counsel, of the company. President Holtzclaw agreed to the reduction after approval was given by the company's board, which yesterday also approved recommendations for the expenditure of $1,759,000 in capital improvements in the company's service system.

"Rate reductions since 1933 have had some effect upon the increase in business," said Mr. Holtzclaw. "We do not know exactly how much is due to lowered rate and how much is due to the improvement in business generally."

The commission said it was "highly appreciative of the spirit of cooperation shown by the management of the Virginia Electric & Power Co. in granting these reductions without the necessity of a formal, expensive and long-drawn-out rate hearing."

Banquet to Give Harlow Farewell

400 to Attend Western Maryland Affair.

Westminster, Md., Feb. 7 (AP).—More than 400 people have made reservations for the annual banquet of the Western Maryland Carroll County Club tomorrow night in the Western Maryland College dining room.

The great interest is attributed to the fact that it will be a community send-off to Richard C. (Dick) Harlow, retiring athletic director here and new head football coach at Harvard University. Harlow is expected to address a local gathering for the last time. Provisions have been made to seat 550.

An informal reception will precede the banquet. A musical program has been provided by Mrs. Noah L. Schaeffer. Several vocal numbers will be given by Earl Lippy, Baltimore barytone; Mrs. Alice Richard Stabler, soprano, and Mrs. S. B. Staes, contralto. Miss Betty Smith and Miss Grace Anne Coale will dance.

Frederick Religious Meeting.

Frederick, Md., Feb. 7 (AP).—About 200 persons are expected to attend a three day meeting in the interest of the Oxford movement, a religious movement, beginning February 24. They will come from Maryland and nearby States.

2 Bills Urge Vote Judges' Pay Be Cut

$4 Reduction Asked on Registrar's Fee; Lower Loan Rate Sought.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—Two proposals embracing local legislation for Montgomery County were among a group of bills offered in course of a brief session of the House of Delegates today. The bills were sponsored jointly by Delegates Cantrel and Magruder. One provides reducing the pay of election judges and clerks from $8 to $6 per day and the compensation when serving as registration officials from $10 to $6, and raising the overtime pay from 50 to 60 cents per hour. The other measure is designed to fix the salary of deputy clerk to the Montgomery County suburban district at not over $2,000 per year.

State-wide measures placed on file included two by Delegate Webster, Baltimore City, one of which increases the petty loan license fee from $50 to $250 and requires a bond of $5,000 instead of $1,000, as under present law, and the other reduces the petty loan interest from 3½ per cent to 1½ per cent monthly. Bills have previously been introduced to make the interest rate 2 per cent.

A bill by Delegate Routson, Carroll County, would move the open season for raccoons and opossums from October 15 to January 15, and limit hunters with a dog or pack to a quarry of ten, and require permission of the owner before a tree is cut down to dislodge an animal.

Sponsors Rail Tax Exemption.

Senator J. Allan Coad, majority floor leader, sponsored a measure to continue for two more years the tax exemption on property of the Washington, Brandywine & Point Lookout Railroad.

The Washington County commissioners and the mayor and city council of Hagerstown would be given discretionary power to contribute up to $7,500 annually for the Washington County Hospital Association, under terms of two bills sponsored by Senator Ernst Miller. Under present law the governmental bodies are limited to $2,000 and $1,000 respectively.

Payment of taxes in Somerset County in monthly installments is provided in a bill by Senator Phoebus. The measure also provides for appointment of an assistant treasurer to assist in tax collectio Senator Phoebus said such a law was in operation when he was county treasurer and more beneficial results were obtained.

A bill directing the commissioner of motor vehicles to withhold automobile licenses in cases in which the Frederick County license tax has not been paid was presented in the House by Delegate Romsburg. Similar proposals by a number of other counties are now on the legislative file.

Would Divert Liquor Fees.

Delegate LeGore fathered a measure to change the method of distributing receipts from liquor fees in Frederick County. Under the present law 50 per cent goes to incorporated towns where licenses are issued and 50 per cent to the director of children's aid work.

LeGore's bill would divert the latter funds to the county commissioners for distribution, the Children's Aid Society having agreed to such an arrangement.

All proceedings involving State and county taxes in Baltimore County would be instituted by the attorney to the county treasurer, under terms of a bill by Delegate Tolle.

Exemption of sacramental wine from the State excise tax of $1.10 a gallon would be granted under a bill by Delegate Carroll, of Howard County.

Delegate Kephart, Carroll County, presented a proposal to reduce the amount Carroll County may borrow for current expenses from $200,000 to $100,000. The measure also empowers the commissioners to borrow $100,000 to pay for any emergency expenses not covered by tax levies.

Inability to Offer $2 License Tags Admitted by Nice

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—Gov. Harry W. Nice today acknowledged that he would be unable to supply $2 tags for motorists of the State, one of his pet campaign promises, at least until the latter half of his administration. In a formal statement, he placed the blame on the administration of former Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, claiming he failed to acquaint the people with the financial deficit facing the State.

Gov. Nice said: "I have been Governor less than a month, and during that time, in the face of the situation which was suppressed by the past administration during the campagin, I have redeemed my promise 37½ per cent and this without additional burden to the people. I have been able, without raising taxes, to reduce the average license fee from $8.30 to $5.20." By this the Governor referred to the administration bill which reduces the horsepower from 32 to 20 as the basis upon which license tags are issued.

Virginia Is Host To Fruit Growers

Meeting to Open Today at Horticulture School.

Washington, Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—Fruit growers from the counties of Warren, Frederick, Page, Madison, Culpeper, Orange, Fauquier, Clark, Shenandoah, Rappahannock and Loudoun will gather here tomorrow to attend the Northern Virginia Horticultural School, sponsored by the Rappahannock fruit growers committee. Lewis J. Turner, county agent for Rappahannock County, has obtained some of the most outstanding men in the horticultural field in the State to speak at the meeting. Among them are Dr. W. J. Schoene, entomologist, Virginia Agricultural Experiment Station; Dr. W. S. Hough, entomologist, Winchester Research Laboratory; Dr. R. H. Hurt, Piedmont Field Laboratory; A. H. Teske, horticulturist, Virginia Experiment Service, V. P. I.; A. L. Moore, assistant horticulturist, V. P. I.; Dr. N. D. Pettinger, soil specialist, Virginia Agricultural Experiment Station; E. V. Breeden, county agent of Madison County, and T. B. Hutcheson, agronomist, Virginia Agricultural Experiment Station.

Artilleryman Found Slain In Maryland

Dismembered Body of Fort Hoyle Private Located in Woods.

Investigation Started by Police and Army in Mystery Death.

Bel Air, Md., Feb. 7 (AP).—The dismembered body of an artillery private from Fort Hoyle was found today in the back woods near Joppa, starting an investigation into his death.

First Lieut. John Meade, of Fort Hoyle, identified the body as that of Victor Sikorsky, a missing member of the Sixth Field Artillery, stationed at the Army post. It apparently had been in the woods for some time.

Only portions of the body were recovered. These were removed to Bel Air for a medical examination. A detail is to be sent from Fort Hoyle tomorrow to search the woods for the missing portions.

Paul Wisser, who lives on a back road near Joppa, notified Sheriff Granville C. Boyle that a dog had located the body some distance from his house. Officers at Fort Hoyle were summoned.

An investigation was started by the sheriff, State's Attorney D. Paul McNabb, Coroner C. Harry Anderson, of Joppa; Deputy Sheriff Earl Francis, Police Chief Raymond Falker, of Bel Air, and Army officers who visited the scene.

Recheck Planned On Peach Damage

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—Washington County peach growers, who reported after a superficial examination of trees last week following sub-zero weather that only Hales were badly damaged, plan to make a recheck of the orchards in the Hancock peach area following reports from nearby West Virginia points that in some instances the peach crop had been wiped out.

In the check last week Hancock growers found Elbertas, the variety that predominates here, not badly damaged by frost. Hales were a 50 per cent loss.

Rents Room
Through Post Ad

Mrs. G. Thomas, 1125 14th St. N. W. had a vacant room to rent. She telephoned her rental ad to The Post Classified Department. Placed her order for seven days. Telephoned the following day to cancel her ad, for she had secured results "the first thing in the morning." Rented her room to a Post reader. The cost to Mrs. Thomas to secure a tenant for her room was exactly 34 cents.

You, too, can quickly and economically rent your vacant room, apartment or house by using Post Classified Ads. These mighty mites of advertising "cost little—and accomplish much" in bringing together tenant and landlord—buyer and seller.

France, Britain To Act if Reich Balks Air Pact

Two-Power Alliance Is Due if Hitler Refuses to Join Accord.

Paris, Feb. 7 (U.P.).—France and Great Britain tonight were believed prepared to negotiate a defensive air allegiance if Germany rejects their invitation to adhere to the proposed air pact suggested last week-end at London.

Diplomatic negotiations on this vital issue will be conducted in Paris with the arrival tomorrow of Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, who was party in London to the accord of air assistance suggested by Premier Pierre Etienne Flandin.

Reports from the British capital indicate the government has no intention of replacing the prewar Entente Cordiale by an alliance along similar lines on the air strengths—but these advices contradict a declaration published in Le Matin from London, quoting Sir John as saying replies to Germany and Belgium will not affect the proposed air entente with France. Belgium already has approved joining.

The Le Matin dispatch was taken to indicate the British cabinet is prepared to go ahead with the "aerial Locarno" without Germany, if necessary, although hoping Adolf Hitler will approve.

The return of the German Ambassador, Roland Koester, to Berlin, presages opening of discussions between Paris and Berlin over the London proposals.

Germany undoubtedly will offer counter-proposals which may not concern so much an air convention as two other principal preoccupations for Germany—equality of armaments and the projected Eastern Locarno. The Reich has not changed her stand of equality, and as yet remains dubious about entering into an Eastern European pact of mutual assistance.

Apple Ruling Causes Protest

Spray Edict, Growers Say, Would Mean Extra Expense.

Efforts to induce the Department of Agriculture to withdraw its order reducing the tolerance of lead arsenate spray on apples were made yesterday by members of the Washington State congressional delegation and representatives of apple growers and shippers throughout the West.

The Associated Press reported that the delegation had a conference with Secretary Wallace to discuss the recent order.

Shippers and growers say the order, if enforced, would cost them thousands of dollars a year in removing the spray by which insects and other pests are kept out of apples. They say it will mean several additional washings of the fruit after picking, which is a costly process.

Senator Byrd (Democrat), Virginia, said he was studying the effect of the order on Virginia apple growers and probably would make a protest to Wallace.

West Virginia Man Dies by Own Hand

Bullet Wound Fatal to C. H. Garrett.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.). Carroll H. Garrett, 65, died at a local hospital last night of a revolver wound self-inflicted on his head Tuesday afternoon at his home. He did not regain consciousness after being admitted to the hospital.

The family laid the act to nervous troubles and despondency. A verdict of suicide was given and no inquest ordered by the coroner.

He was a retired power company worker and a native of Frederick County, Va. The widow, one son, two daughters, two sisters and two brothers survive.

Burial will be here Saturday.

Ickes Announces Plans for Garage

Underground Structure to Care for 800 Cars.

Secretary Ickes yesterday announced plans for construction of an underground garage designed to take between 700 and 800 automobiles off the downtown streets.

The garage will be for use of Interior Department employes. It will be situated in the square bounded by New York avenue, Virginia avenue, Nineteenth and Twentieth streets. The land is owned by the Government and is now occupied by Temporary Building No. 2, which will be razed.

The garage will be paid for from $11,000,000 fund previously allotted for a new Interior Department building.

Flandin Power Periled in Vote By French Body

Premier Wins Narrow Victory After Hisses Greet Him in Street.

Paris, Feb. 7 (AP).—Booed and hissed in the streets of Paris yesterday, Premier Pierre - Etienne Flandin narrowly escaped defeat in the House of Representatives today.

A sudden surprise attack launched by Socialists, Radical Socialists and miscellaneous enemies of the regime came within an ace of besting the premier's forces. The margin of victory was 56 votes, the slenderest since Flandin came to power in November.

The vote—318 to 262—was on the examination of the cabinet's decrees, which Parliament must ratify. There was no question of confidence, but Flandin himself made the issue, insisting the normal procedure be followed. Friends thought his margin would be at least 250.

The vote came after Socialists, supported by Radical Socialists and others of Flandin's own government bloc, sought to have a special committee examine the decrees, thus giving Flandin's enemies an opportunity to concentrate their fire against ratification.

Opponents said the premier's prestige suffered greatly as a result of the public jeering to which Nationalists subjected him yesterday. They took that as an indication that Flandin was losing his popularity with the right and the center, upon which he depends for half his majority.

Head Named By Chamber Of Virginia

Johns Chosen President as Charlottesville Parley Ends.

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 7 (AP). Jay Johns, of Albemarle County, first chairman of the Virginia Public Works Administration Advisory Board and member of the State Art Museum and Armory Commissions, was elected president of the Virginia Chamber of Commerce at the close of the eleventh annual meeting here this afternoon. The directors also chose E. Lee Trinkle, of Roanoke, as vice president, and re-elected Julien Hill, of Richmond, treasurer.

The executive commitee for the next year will include these three as well as L. U. Noland, of Newport News, retiring president; Gordon Bohannon, of Petersburg, and Col. Leroy Hodges, managing director.

Plan Advertising Drive.

At the membership meeting this morning, representatives of 17 chambers throughout the State voted approval of a plan to obtain $100,000 for a Virginia advertising fund. Half will be asked of the General Assembly by the chamber and the conservation commission and the remainder will be sought among members. Before the matter was placed in discussion by Mr. Trinkle, Col. Hodges informed the members that execution of the plan would be impossible "unless the Virginia communities are ready to support such a movement."

An operating budget of $60,000 was set for the coming year.

Seven directors were elected this morning. Five who will represent congressional districts on the board are Marshall King, Alexandria, eighth; Heth Tyler, Norfolk, second; Robert Daniel, Brandon, fourth; James Gilliam, jr., Lynchburg, sixth, and Charles K. Brown, Staunton, tenth. All will serve three years.

5-Point Program.

Twelve others were chosen from the State at large for a one-year period. They are John Brownley, Norfolk; Heck Ford, Martinsville; Ben Gunter, Accomac; Dr. W. D. Haden, Charlottesville; Norman Hamilton, Portsmouth; Thomas Herring, Harrisonburg; B. O. Hill, Suffolk; R. C. Hopkins, Fredericksburg; E. A. Hults, Saltville; Mr. Johns, John W. Mimis, Luray, and M. Trinkle.

A program embodying five main points was presented by Mr. Noland in his address. This calls for study of the State's tax system with attention to the sales tax plan, and a series of research studies in public education, highway construction and needs, the industrial and employment trend in Virginia, and industrial zoning and stream pollution.

Shenandoah Set For Poultry Show

Exhibit Will Be Held February 22 and 23.

Strasburg, Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—The second annual Shenandoah County Poultry Show will be held here February 22 and 23. The event, under direction of W. Frank Wall, jr., who has charge of the vocational agriculture classes of the Strasburg and Toms Brook High Schools, is sponsored by the First National Bank.

Entries will close at 10 p. m., February 21. Prizes will be offered in two classes, one for egg breeds and the other for dual purpose and heavy breeds.

Named to Town Council.

Warrenton, Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—Edward C. Thornton, Warrenton druggist, has been elected a member of the town council to succeed T. B. Willis, resigned.

Along the Tri-State Trail

With

Post State Editor.

LIKE an incident plucked from the pages of a Bram Stoker novel, a woman was brought back to life this week in the Richmond Memorial Hospital after physicians had described her as dead.

The "temporary" death occurred during an operation for a brain tumor. After the heart action and breathing had stopped, a powerful dose of adrenalin was administered. The woman's eyes fluttered and her heart began to beat steadily. She was then placed under a mechanical lung which forced breathing for 13 hours before she died.

When interment is held this week for Allan Wallace, 56, who died in Cambridge, Md., it will be the second time that burial has been held in his name.

Five years ago his family received word that the body of a man of his description was found floating in the Baltimore Harbor. A friend of Wallace's visited the morgue and was convinced the body was that of Wallace. Rites were held and the body was interred in the Cambridge Cemetery.

Two weeks later, Capt. David Messick met Wallace on the street in Baltimore. Returning home, he assured his family of the mistake in identification.

A Lynchburg, Va., woman was arrested this week after she had mowed down 11 mail boxes along McKinney street with her automobile. She was charged with driving while intoxicated.

Petersburg Loan Unit Elects Pilcher Head

Petersburg, Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—The Petersburg Building and Loan Association has elected the following officers: Fred Pilcher, president; R. T. Jones, vice president; J. G. Weeks, secretary and treasurer, and Fred Pilcher, R. T. Jones, O. L. Winfield, Dr. C. S. Dodd, John K. Sheffield, E. O. Strailman, jr., G. E. Matthews, Walter A. Williamson and Alexander Hamilton, jr., directors.

Bench and Bar Honor Memory Of Two Judges

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—The bench and bar of Maryland today paid high tribute to two former members of the State judiciary, W. Mitchell Digges, Charles County, and Glenn H. Worthington, Frederick County, both of whom died within the last year.

Judge Digges for ten years was chief judge of the Seventh Circuit, comprising Prince Georges, Calvert and St. Marys counties, while Judge Worthington presided over the Sixth Circuit, which embraces Montgomery and Frederick counties, more than a quarter of a century.

The life and services of the two jurists were extolled at memorial services held before the Court of Appeals, of which they were members, at 2 p. m. today. The courtroom was crowded by attorneys from the several counties, and many Senators and members of the House of Delegates. Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor, acting as master of ceremonies, formally notified the court of the death of the two judges and read resolutions adopted by the bar of the Sixth Circuit on Judge Worthington, and of the bar of the Seventh Circuit on Judge Digges. Addresses on the life of Judge Worthington were delivered by Attorney John S. Newman, of Frederick, and George H. Lamar, Montgomery County. Speaking on the life of Judge Digges were Attorneys John F. Mudd, Charles County; John B. Gray, sr., Calvert County; Ogle Marbury, Prince Georges County, and Philip H. Dorsey, St. Marys County. The response in behalf of the court was by Chief Judge Carroll T. Bond.

Judges on the bench during the exercises, in addition to Judge Bond, were Benjamin A. Johnson, First Circuit; W. Mason Sheehan, second; T. Scott Offutt, third; D. Lindley Sloan, fourth, and F. Neal Parke, fifth. Oddly, the absentees were the representatives from the circuits from which the deceased jurists came, Judge Walter J. Mitchell, of Charles County, who is suffering from a leg farcture, and Judge Hammond Urner, Frederick, detained by business engagements.

West Virginia Home Destroyed by Blaze

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.). Harry F. French, of Allensville, near here, lost his home and all his furniture when a defective chimney started a fire yesterday. French and his family, 11 all told, battled the flames vainly after they were discovered in the six-room house. The loss is estimated at around $2,500.

Building Will Relieve Crowded Condition of Dormitories.

PWA Furnished Funds for Project, Started Last Year.

Harrisonburg, Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—Senior Hall, $140,000 dormitory just completed and being occupied this week by the Harrisonburg State Teachers College, brings the college within three buildings of the number originally planned for the school, now the largest women's college in Virginia. The new hall, three stories high and housing 116 students, greatly relieves crowded conditions in other dormitories.

The first floor contains a lobby, a men's lounge, three parlors, a chaperon's suite of living room, bedroom and bath, and a kitchen, equipped in the most modern manner. The second and third floors also have kitchenettes, for the use of students giving parties, and 29 suites, each of which has two bedrooms and a bath and accommodates four young women. The large basement and attic provide storage space.

In the basement also are rooms with equipment for distributing electric current for lights, clocks and bells, and for furnishing water continuously heated. The dormitory is heated from the college's central heating plant.

Walls of the bedrooms, parlors and kitchenettes are finished in light buff, while those of the corridors and lobby are in light green. Doors are of bottle-green color and all woodwork is in ivory. The floor coverings of the corridors are in green. Other furnishings are not yet complete.

The building, constructed of local blue limestone and trimmed with local gray limestone, is of the same general type of architecture as the other campus structures.

Architect's plans were drawn by J. B. Walford, of Richmond, who was represented in the construction work by T. Ewalt. The Public Works Administration, which furnished the money for the project, was represented by H. E. Calisch, of Richmond.

John C. Senter, of Roanoke, obtained the contract for building on March 16, 1934. It is said by engineers familiar with the construction of the dormitory that it probably would have cost $200,000 to duplicate if building had been delayed until this year.

The college will repay $105,000 of the building fund, using room rents charged those occupying the dormitory for that purpose. The other $35,000 was granted by the PWA.

Virginia Cuts Power Rates Third Time

Capitol Improvements of $1,759,000 Also Get Approval.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 7 (AP).—The State Corporation Commission today authorized the third reduction in Virginia Electric & Power Co. current rates within two years. The reduction ordered today totaled $402,000.

In an announcement of the reduction, the commission made public a table showing how the residential consumers' bills will be affected. It follows:

Current.	Under old rate.	Under new rate.
20 kw. hrs. per month...	$1.30	$1.20
30 kw. hrs. per month...	1.95	1.80
40 kw. hrs. per month...	2.60	2.25
50 kw. hrs. per month...	3.25	2.70
70 kw. hrs. per month...	4.25	3.60
100 kw. hrs. per month..	5.30	4.80
200 kw. hrs. per month..	7.50	7.05

A previous reduction of $41,000 was ordered January 1, when the home service rate was altered downward. The rates were cut $366,000 after the Saville inquiry in 1933. The 1933 reduction was followed by an increase of 4,000 in the number of company customers.

The reduction was announced after a conference today between H. Lester Hooker and Thomas Ozlin of the commission and Jack G. Holtzclaw, president, and T. Austin Moore, counsel, of the company. President Holtzclaw agreed to the reduction after approval was given by the company's board, which yesterday also approved recommendations for the expenditure of $1,759,000 in capital improvements in the company's service system.

"Rate reductions since 1933 have had some effect upon the increase in business," said Mr. Holtzclaw. "We do not know exactly how much is due to lowered rate and how much is due to the improvement in business generally."

The commission said it was "highly appreciative of the spirit of cooperation shown by the management of the Virginia Electric & Power Co. in granting these reductions without the necessity of a formal, expensive and long-drawn-out rate hearing."

Banquet to Give Harlow Farewell

400 to Attend Western Maryland Affair.

Westminster, Md., Feb. 7 (AP). More than 400 people have made reservations for the annual banquet of the Western Maryland Carroll County Club tomorrow night in the Western Maryland College dining room.

The great interest is attributed to the fact that it will be a community send-off to Richard C. (Dick) Harlow, retiring athletic director here and new head football coach at Harvard University. Harlow is expected to address a local gathering for the last time. Provisions have been made to seat 550.

An informal reception will precede the banquet. A musical program has been provided by Mrs. Noah L. Schaeffer. Several vocal numbers will be given by Earl Lippy, Baltimore barytone; Mrs. Alice Richard Stabler, soprano, and Mrs. S. B. Staes, contralto. Miss Betty Smith and Miss Grace Anne Coale will dance.

Frederick Religious Meeting.

Frederick, Md., Feb. 7 (AP).—About 200 persons are expected to attend a three day meeting in the interest of the Oxford movement, a religious movement, beginning February 24. They will come from Maryland and nearby States.

2 Bills Urge Vote Judges' Pay Be Cut

$4 Reduction Asked on Registrar's Fee; Lower Loan Rate Sought.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—Two proposals embracing local legislation for Montgomery County were among a group of bills offered in course of a brief session of the House of Delegates today. The bills were sponsored jointly by Delegates Cantrel and Magruder. One provides reducing the pay of election judges and clerks from $8 to $6 per day and the compensation when serving as registration officials from $10 to $6, and raising the overtime pay from 50 to 60 cents per hour. The other measure is designed to fix the salary of deputy clerk to the Montgomery County suburban district at not over $2,000 per year.

State-wide measures placed on file included two by Delegate Webster, Baltimore City, one of which increases the petty loan license fee from $50 to $250 and requires a bond of $5,000 instead of $1,000, as under present law, and the other reduces the petty loan interest from 3½ per cent to 1½ per cent monthly. Bills have previously been introduced to make the interest rate 2 per cent.

A bill by Delegate Routson, Carroll County, would move the open season for raccoons and opossums from October 15 to January 15, and limit hunters with a dog or pack to a quarry of ten, and require permission of the owner before a tree is cut down to dislodge an animal.

Sponsors Rail Tax Exemption.

Senator J. Allan Coad, majority floor leader, sponsored a measure to continue for two more years the tax exemption on property of the Washington, Brandywine & Point Lookout Railroad.

The Washington County commissioners and the mayor and city council of Hagerstown would be given discretionary power to contribute up to $7,500 annually for the Washington County Hospital Association, under terms of two bills sponsored by Senator Ernst Miller. Under present law the governmental bodies are limited to $2,000 and $1,000 respectively.

Payment of taxes in Somerset County in monthly installments is provided in a bill by Senator Phoebus. The measure also provides for appointment of an assistant treasurer to assist in tax collectio Senator Phoebus said such a law was in operation when he was county treasurer and more beneficial results were obtained.

A bill directing the commissioner of motor vehicles to withhold automobile licenses in cases in which the Frederick County license tax has not been paid was presented in the House by Delegate Romsburg. Similar proposals by a number of other counties are now on the legislative file.

Would Divert Liquor Fees.

Delegate LeGore fathered a measure to change the method of distributing receipts from liquor fees in Frederick County. Under the present law 50 per cent goes to incorporated towns where licenses are issued and 50 per cent to the director of children's aid work.

LeGore's bill would divert the latter funds to the county commissioners for distribution, the Children's Aid Society having agreed to such an arrangement.

All proceedings involving State and county taxes in Baltimore County would be instituted by the attorney to the county treasurer, under terms of a bill by Delegate Tolle.

Exemption of sacramental wine from the State excise tax of $1.10 a gallon would be granted under a bill by Delegate Carroll, of Howard County.

Delegate Kephart, Carroll County, presented a proposal to reduce the amount Carroll County may borrow for current expenses from $200,000 to $100,000. The measure also empowers the commissioners to borrow $100,000 to pay for any emergency expenses not covered by tax levies.

Inability to Offer $2 License Tags Admitted by Nice

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—Gov. Harry W. Nice today acknowledged that he would be unable to supply $2 tags for motorists of the State, one of his pet campaign promises, at least until the latter half of his administration. In a formal statement, he placed the blame on the administration of former Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, claiming he failed to acquaint the people with the financial deficit facing the State.

Gov. Nice said: "I have been Governor less than a month, and during that time, in the face of the situation which was suppressed by the past administration during the campagin, I have redeemed my promise 37½ per cent, and this without additional burden to the people. I have been able, without raising taxes, to reduce the average license fee from $8.30 to $5.20." By this the Governor referred to the administration bill which reduces the horsepower from 32 to 20 as the basis upon which license tags are issued.

Virginia Is Host To Fruit Growers

Meeting to Open Today at Horticulture School.

Washington, Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—Fruit growers from the counties of Warren, Frederick, Page, Madison, Culpeper, Orange, Fauquier, Clark, Shenandoah, Rappahannock and Loudoun will gather here tomorrow to attend the Northern Virginia Horticultural School, sponsored by the Rappahannock fruit growers committee. Lewis J. Turner, county agent for Rappahannock County, has obtained some of the most outstanding men in the horticultural field in the State to speak at the meeting. Among them are Dr. W. J. Schoene, entomologist, Virginia Agricultural Experiment Station; Dr. W. S. Hough, entomologist, Winchester Research Laboratory; Dr. R. H. Hurt, Piedmont Field Laboratory; A. H. Teske, horticulturist, Virginia Experiment Service, V. P. I.; A. L. Moore, assistant horticulturist, V. P. I.; Dr. N. D. Pettinger, soil specialist, Virginia Agricultural Experiment Station; E. V. Breeden, county agent of Madison County, and T. B. Hutcheson, agronomist, Virginia Agricultural Experiment Station.

Artilleryman Found Slain In Maryland

Dismembered Body of Fort Hoyle Private Located in Woods.

Investigation Started by Police and Army in Mystery Death.

Bel Air, Md., Feb. 7 (AP).—The dismembered body of an artillery private from Fort Hoyle was found today in the back woods near Joppa, starting an investigation into his death.

First Lieut. John Meade, of Fort Hoyle, identified the body as that of Victor Sikorsky, a missing member of the Sixth Field Artillery, stationed at the Army post. It apparently had been in the woods for some time.

Only portions of the body were recovered. These were removed to Bel Air for a medical examination. A detail is to be sent from Fort Hoyle tomorrow to search the woods for the missing portions.

Paul Wisser, who lives on a back road near Joppa, notified Sheriff Granville C. Boyle that a dog had located the body some distance from his house. Officers at Fort Hoyle were summoned.

An investigation was started by the sheriff, State's Attorney D. Paul McNabb, Coroner C. Harry Anderson, of Joppa; Deputy Sheriff Earl Francis, Police Chief Raymond Falker, of Bel Air, and Army officers who visited the scene.

Recheck Planned On Peach Damage

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—Washington County peach growers, who reported after a superficial examination of trees last week following sub-zero weather that only Hales were badly damaged, plan to make a recheck of the orchards in the Hancock peach area following reports from nearby West Virginia points that in some instances the peach crop had been wiped out.

In the check last week Hancock growers found Elbertas, the variety that predominates here, not badly damaged by frost. Hales were a 50 per cent less.

Rents Room Through Post Ad

Mrs. G. Thomas, 1125 14th St. N. W., had a vacant room to rent. She telephoned her rental ad to The Post Classified Department. Placed her order for seven days. Minovich Signs With Heigh-Ho To Play Violin

Miss Consuelo Flowerton Also to Be Featured Starting Monday.

By Kay Ware.

Heigh-Ho, considering ripened time, breaks through with its featured surprise. It'll be no other than Minovich and violin, a Washington boy who has played hither and yon for many years. Pete Macias insists that he has never been fully appreciated, and intends to feature him with a capital "F."

Another young lady of whom we have heard is Miss Consuelo Flowerton, with piano and sophisticated songs. Miss Flowerton, you'll remember, is a New York actress, model, violinist, and singer.

Another famous mystery is solved—the names of the dance-floor fancy tango duo. They are Ann and Earl—just that. Ten to one, they're professionals, because it isn't often that a mere night club hoofer dips into the peace of other dancers.

Bamboo Room's Johnny Slaughter explains the reason their broadcasting singers can't be heard by lounge patrons. Says he, "The radio would pick up the rebound from the public address system, making satisfactory reception impossible. However, the programs don't last more than 30 minutes, and Bamboo-ites linger longer. It's all just a matter of sharing your favorite vocalists with the radio world, a great part of which is made up of shut-ins, who have written and told of the great amount of enjoyment it has brought them."

Thank you, Johnny. We were just wondering whether or not an amplifier would pick up the singing during broadcasts.

Incidentally, our old friend, "Happy" Walker, was there the other evening. He looked a little worn, a wee bit older than when we saw him last.

And please, while on the subject of lounges, won't some kind-hearted hotel fix up a cocktail room for ladies only? It makes you a little sore when you and a schoolmate from out of town, or a feminine business acquaintance, want to have an afternoon gab fest, and what happens? A polite waiter comes over and says, "The two young gentlemen at the front table would like to know if the two young ladies would care to dance?"

Of course, executives will shake sage heads and say, "it won't go over." But there are lots of tea rooms, unfrequented by men, where ladies sip tea, and exchange chatter. Why wouldn't a similar cocktail lounge go, too? After all, one can't get very confidential on tea.

Hi-Hat is putting on a contest. It will serve two purposes, to determine the most popular song hit—and give the winner two champagne cocktails. (Hum. Sounds reminiscent of Shoreham Tiny's contest, doesn't it?)

Anyway, here's what you do. Each day you go to Hi-Hat, hand in your guess of what the Paradise Islanders have received the greatest number of requests for. At the end of each day, George Ku and Manager McNey will figure out the most popular song. Sounds a little complicated, but you're supposed to figure out what Wednesday's song was and hand it in Thursday, and so on.

The stylish gentleman who handed out all the silver dollars was Jack Sobel, who collects the heavy money as a hobby.

Shoreham sports a golden-haired lady, Patricia Kent, who shares her act with Burt Earle, banjoist. Carlton and Juliette are Argentine dancers with a Paris-Havana background. They offer a French waltz, a Parisian bolero, La Cucuracha and a tango. Jean Kirk taps and goes into acrobatics.

Incidentally, have you heard about the Washington authoress who ordered a glass of buttermilk and threw the Lounge into a fit? The waiter brought it on, bottle and all, with the observation that it was the first buttermilk to be served at the Shoreham bar.

And bless them, the Shoreham has a mystery! Is a singer formerly with L'Opera Comique, has played with Garbo, will be known as "The Golden Masked Singer."

Line-up at Club Habana: Tudel and Jean, dance team. Tudel, incidentally, looks like a cross between George Raft and Rudolph Valentino. The Roddy Twins, in cellophane costumes; Russ Cullen, singer; Moe Baer and boys complete the bill.

Line-up at Madrillon: Another dark-haired senor is Ricardo, dancing with Rita. Rose Heatherly dances so the waiters exclaim, "That girl, she must be made of rubber." Jack Schaeffer, Ross Del Roy, Leon Brusilloff and band are the regulars.

Pilgrim Club's show includes Gail Lee, red-headed dancer; Charel de Thomee, Henriette Carr, singer, and dance music by Roy Masters and Cosmopolitans till 4 a. m. Tommy Suiters is the newest addition.

Lew Davies, of the Lotus, gave a smoker the other night that ceased to be a smoker when the Leonora Debs appeared. "Crashed" as it were. A hair brush was presented to George Briggs, for the funniest story. Al Norton carried on grandly—according to reports. Judy Ellington wanted to come, but got lost in the snow.

Dancing the "Waltz Poem"

Ricardo and Rita are in the floor show at Madrillon. Incidentally, Ricardo looks as nearly like a man's fashion plate as could be desired. Look for the cut of the mess jacket, and see for yourself.

Laffoon Clash With Chandler DazesKentucky

State Has 3 Governors in 24 Hours; Ruby Vetoes Call for Session.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 7 (AP).—With three Governors in less than 24 hours, an order calling a special session of the General Assembly, another order revoking the call, and a court order restraining the revocation, Kentucky's capital tonight found itself in a state of confusion unparalleled in decades.

For the special session to meet at noon tomorrow to enact a compulsory primary election law was called yesterday by Lieut. Gov. A. B. (Happy) Chandler. He was acting Governor in the absence of Gov. Ruby Laffoon, his political foe.

The rescinding order was dated by Gov. Ruby Laffoon at 4:10 a. m. today as he crossed into Kentucky on his hurried return from Washington. It was Gov. Laffoon's first trip out of the State since the break between him and Chandler last spring.

Cause of Tangle.

The tangled situation grew out of the fight that raged in January over whether the Democratic Party should nominate its candidates for Governor and other State-wide offices by primary or State convention. The Democratic State central executive committee ordered a convention, despite pleas from President Roosevelt, United States Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, and National Chairman Farley.

The temporary injunction against revocation of Chandler's call was obtained from the clerk of circuit court here by John Gatewood, a resident of Franklin County, in the absence of Circuit Judge H. Church Ford.

Assemblymen Arrive.

Meanwhile, many members of the General Assembly began arriving in answer to Chandler's call. Officials and observers generally agreed that the tangle would not be unraveled until noon tomorrow, the time named in Chandler's call.

The third Governor during the confusing 24 hours that started at midnight was Senator Robert Humphreys of Mayfield, president pro tem of the Senate. He became Governor when Chandler left the State last night to permit his friend to act as chief executive.

Henderson Books Purchased by U. S.

Uncle Sam, represented by the Library of Congress and the Smithsonian Institution, was one of the successful bidders at yesterday's session of the auction in Henderson Castle.

It was revealed last night that those two establishments bought some of the 4,000 volumes of miscellaneous books which went under the hammer at the afternoon sale. The collection, which took the late Senator John B. Henderson a lifetime to acquire, included Americana, England, North and South America, Japan, China, the Far East, South Seas, Mexico, Canada and Central America.

Furious bidding, which sent prices rocketing, prevailed throughout the day as another capacity crowd of approximately 1,000 persons attended the sale. Today the turnout is expected to be just as great with 275 lots of china, glassware, furniture, pianos and miscellaneous items scheduled to be knocked down to the highest bidders.

A set of 24 silver gilt service plates was sold for $888 to provide an auspicious opening for the morning session. Several dozens of forks and spoons went at $3.75 and $4.50 each, respectively.

Mrs. Henderson's mandarin coat found a buyer at $70 and correspondingly high prices were obtained for 14 fancy fans she used.

Roosevelt Given Model Of Clipper Lightning

President Roosevelt yesterday added to his collection of miniature vessels a model of the famous old clipper, Lightning, which until 1884 held the record for crossing the Atlantic.

Vatican City, Feb. 7 (AP).—Pope Pius will inaugurate the new Vatican broadcasting station Tuesday on the thirteenth anniversary of his coronation. The new station will broadcast to European nations close to the Holy See.

Broadway —Goes to Miami

Miami Contrasts

Miami Beach, Feb. 7.—Four miles from Miami Beach, as the long-beaked pelican flies, the city of Miami rears its skyline of tall buildings into the sky, and I think that there is no more beautiful sight than this in all the world.

The incredibly green waters of Biscayne Bay, the deep purplish blue of the sky and the rakish yachts anchored in the channel all go into the composition of a picture that is breathless in its deep-toned beauty.

I went aboard one of the great yachts yesterday afternoon, the Moana, owned by young Bill Leeds, one of the more venturous millionaire sportsmen of New York. I arrived in time to find Capt. Leeds being shaved on the after deck. Norman Kerry, the former movie star, was looking on critically, and offering suggestions to the barber, but luckily for Leeds, the barber was as morosely indifferent to advice as Ned Sparks.

A crew of 25 man this ship, and the way they salute you is something to write home about. I've always wanted to own a yacht, any old kind, but yesterday for a few short hours I enjoyed the sensation without experiencing the pain of the overhead expenses. It was a bit of all right.

Getting aboard a yacht, I learned, is an undertaking fraught with difficulty. When a big yacht anchors in Biscayne Bay, the visiting list is subject to close scrutiny of the dock superintendent. For instance, when I went to the dock at which the Moana launches arrive, the dock superintendent first flew a flag to attract the attention of the boat that was at anchor 200 yards out in the bay.

A launch came in immediately in response to the signal, and the sailor took my message back to Leeds. The message was brief and to the point:

"Dear Bill: Can I come out and see how you rich folks live?"

Well, I found out, and, just between the two of us, they live all right.

* * * *

You find a lot of old people here in Miami from every section of the country. These do not live in the swank hotels, but reside instead in modest apartments or the cheaper hotels. Most of them have a little money stored away, and they spend it frugally here, against the few years ahead.

There is no grander harbor for these veterans of life. They do not go to the race track, for adventure is behind them. They do not go to the night clubs or the gambling casinos, for they have experienced every heartache and every thrill on the roulette wheel that started spinning for them when they were born.

For $2 they can go out on one of the fleet of fishing boats that puff out of the local harbor every morning. For nothing at all, they can sit in the bayfront park and hear a fine band concert free. At 5 o'clock in the afternoon, when New York subways are jammed with jostling, sweaty crowds, these old timers can go to the docks that line the city yacht basin and watch the fishing boats unload the day's catches.

This is grand sport and just as exciting as though they had held the reels themselves. You feel a catch in your throat as you watch these gray-haired men and women engaged in their pleasures.

Their hands, if you look closely, are lined and toil-worn. This perhaps is the first vacation they have ever taken, and for some of them it will be their last, because the snow in their hair hints that for most of them the race has been run.

* * * *

There is something that is bothering me no end. On our trip South and now here in Miami, we see Gary Cooper advertised in Paramount's grand flicker, "Lives of a Bengal Lancer."

Will Lew Diamond, in the New York Paramount offices, please wire me the explanation of the grammatical blunder in that title. It should be "Life of a Bengal Lancer" or "Lives of the Bengal Lancers," unless the lancer, like the cat, has nine lives, a plurality that would indeed be singular.

* * * *

You see every license plate of the Union but one on the broad, palm-shaded boulevards at Miami Beach. The single exception is the auto license of California. However, I will keep watching for one of them, and will report to you at intervals whether or not any traitor from the Coast has sneaked in here to warm himself under the Florida sun.

* * * *

The weather here is delightfully hot in the day time and cool at night. Helen Morgan, greeting us on our arrival, was wrapped in a mink coat. If the Chamber of Commerce saw her, they would have shot her at sunrise. They want no suggestion of cool weather here. In fact, they're downright touchy about it.

Dizzy Dean Signs, Says 'We Compromised and I'm Satisfied'

1-Year Pact Terms Are Withheld

Says December Accord Predicated Upon Big Cereal Contract.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 7 (U.P.).—Jerome Herman (Dizzy) Dean, ace hurler of the St. Louis Cardinals, announced late today he had signed a one-year contract with the club after an hour and a half conference with President Sam Breadon.

Terms of the contract were not announced. Officials of the club confirmed Dean's announcement, which was checked quickly in view of some rather fire-brand statements Dizzy had made earlier in the day.

Dean had demanded $25,000 "or nothin'." Breadon had said he would give $17,500 "and no more."

Dizzy Is Satisfied.

The announcement came several hours after Dean arrived from the East en route to Hot Springs for a midwinter baseball teaching job. He was bristling defiance on arrival and said a conference with Breadon was the last thing on his mind.

"Nope! None of that!" he said. "I'm only here for a stop-over. I don't intend to talk business with the Cards a-tall. They know what I want. They've offered me $17,500 and I've turned it down."

His defiance was such that he announced a new brand of poker. If he didn't ultimately get the $25,000 he was going to open a furniture store "right across the street from Sam Breadon's automobile salesroom."

Anything to Sign.

Dean said that in New York Branch Rickey, vice president of the club, even offered to throw in his horse, his automobile or his house, if Dizzy would only sign.

"But I told Mr. Rickey that all I want is $25,000 cash for my 1935 services."

Dean said he pointed out to Breadon and Rickey that "I may not be worth that much this year, but I'm only trying to get some of the salary that I really earned but didn't get last year."

He admitted he actually had signed the $17,500 contract submitted to him by Breadon at Bradenton in December, but said, "It is in my safe deposit box down there and it's going to stay there."

Advertising Contract.

His verbal acceptance of terms in December, Dean said, was predicated on an offer of a big advertising contract with a cereal company, provided he was all signed up with the Cards.

"They have spent about $50,000 so far, and they have paid me a part of my contract," he said. "I don't think I broke faith with them, for after I got to thinking it over I just decided I was worth more than the Cards offered me, regardless of the cereal company's deal."

Middletown Tightens Lead in County Chase

Middletown, Md., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—Middletown strengthened its grip on first place in the pennant race of the Southern division of the County High School League by defeating Brunswick, 31 to 17.

Middletown got off to an early lead in the first period and at the half held a 6-point lead. Brunswick rallied in the third period and evened the score at 15 to 15. Hauver then put Middletown back into the lead with a foul shot and in quick succession the Valley team scored 11 points which settled the issue.

Gamblers' Link To Race Dope Charged

Reports on Tests Changed, Texas Governor Says; Probe Is Begun.

AUSTIN, Tex., Feb. 7 (AP).—Texas Rangers, broncho enthusiasts, studied thoroughbred runners at State tracks tonight for evidence of the use of narcotics by gamblers seeking to make racing bets a sure thing.

The orders came from Gov. James V. Allred, who doesn't like pari-mutuel betting and declares gamblers have reaped big profits from illegally stimulating race horses.

"I have evidence to prove it," he said, adding that the inquiry might link Texas with a nation-wide ring which is receiving Federal attention.

Skullduggery Charged.

"The investigation will disclose some skullduggery in the changing of reports on chemical tests made on horses."

From other sources it was reported changes from "positive" to "negative" had been made in reports on salivia tests after they left the office of the State Live Stock Sanitary Commission in Fort Worth and before they reached the track veterinarian at Alamo Downs, San Antonio. Eight trainers at Alamo Downs were suspended recently.

Gov. Allred is supporting a bill pending in the Texas Legislature proposing repeal of the State law, enacted less than two years ago, legalizing pari-mutuel wagering.

Two Girls, 16, Bow In Miami Golf Play

Miami, Feb. 7 (AP).—Tournament-wise campaigners triumphed—although forced to extra holes—over the popular youngsters, Patty Berg, of Minneapolis, and Ellamae Williams, of Chicago, in the quarter-finals today of the third annual Miami Biltmore women's golf tournament.

Freckled-faced Miss Berg, her home city champion at 16, went down fighting against Mrs. Lillian Zech, of Chicago. Miss Williams, also 16, bowed to Mrs. Joe Bydokel, of Buffalo. Both carried their opponents to the nineteenth hole.

Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I., the medalist, advanced into the semi-final by overwhelming Mrs. William Hockenjos, jr., Mount Arlington, N. J., 7 and 5. Maureen Orcutt, Englewood, N. J., last year's winner, defeated Grace Amory, Palm Beach, 4 and 3.

Baker Sees Alleviation Of 'Tennis Bums' Rule

By John R. Vosburgh.

THE treasurer of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, Lawrence A. Baker, predicted yesterday that the "eight weeks' rule," restraining players from accepting free living and traveling expenses over prolonged periods, will be lifted in numerous cases where "reasonable discretion" demands.

Baker's forecast came on the eve of the annual meeting of the national body at Cincinnati. The treasurer left Washington last night to attend the meeting, saying he felt sure the association would adopt the much-discussed, proposed regulation.

Laying aside his law books for the time being, the former captain of America's tennis forces at Wimbledon cast an appraising eye over the tennis situation, said that the U. S. L. T. A. is in a healthy financial condition although its 1934 income will show a substantial decrease over the previous year; declared that the Chevy Chase Club probably will not be the scene of any Davis Cup matches this year; predicted only "reasonable success" for the Davis Cup team and stated that amateur tennis has nothing to fear from professional competition.

Eight Weeks a Year.

But it was the controversial eight weeks or "tennis bums" rule which occupied the major share of Baker's attention. The rule says a player may not receive traveling or living expenses for more than eight weeks in one year.

"Personally," Baker said, "I would not like to see the rule too rigidly enforced immediately. The U. S. L. T. A. is clothed with power of self-determination on this question. The time can be extended without breaking down the spirit behind the rule."

He pointed out that at the request of the U. S. L. T. A. the International Federation has modified the rule so as to permit the national associations to lift it in certain cases.

Collegians Cited.

Such cases, Baker said, would likely be those of college players who have little to do in the summer but play tennis. In his opinion, the treasurer explained, the rule could be lifted to allow the collegians more than eight weeks of free tennis touring from tournament to tournament. The purpose of the rule, he said, is to cut down year-round barnstorming. The only "amendment" to be made at the meeting is one to enable the executive committee or sub-committee to make these "exceptions."

Baker admitted that the association will face a great deal of criticism and difficulty in enforcing the rule. He revealed that certain officials had already calculated that the average tournament-playing period abroad of players is more than eight weeks, and that certain sections of the country will be sure to suffer from the rule by increased entry lists.

May Not Travel At Will.

Players handicapped by living long distances from tournament centers will not be hit by the rule so far as travelling expenses are concerned, he said, but this does not mean a player may travel at will with expenses paid.

The suggestion that various clubs may evade the rule by putting the players up in private homes and supporting the homes, Baker met with the assertion that cases of "bad faith" must be faced in enforcing any rule. He said some clubs have broken rules of the association in the past. The exception power given to the association he did not feel would weaken the rule, which, he emphasized, is to restrict "the unlimited play that has been the practice of some players."

C. U.'s Boxers Leave Today For V.M.I.

Thibideau and Joe May May Not Be in Line-Up Tomorrow Night.

CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY'S boxing team leaves at noon today for Lexington, Va., where tomorrow night it is scheduled to resume its feud with Virginia Military Institute's aspiring young pugilists. Coach Eddie LaFond last night announced he would take the entire squad of 15 men for the match.

Catholic's first intercollegiate match, fought in 1926, was against V. M. I. and the Cadets humbled their guests by a 4-3 count. They did not meet again until last year, when the Cardinals pounded out a 5-3 victory at Brookland.

On a basis of past performances, the Cards will be a slight favorite when the bell rings. V. M. I. lost to Maryland and Virginia earlier in the season and drew with V. P. I. last week, while Catholic bowled over Bucknell and Temple and drew with V. P. I. before bowing to Duke.

Line-up About Same.

Virtually the same team that fought Duke will represent the District school tomorrow. Capt. Eddie Thibideau's nose, which is still a trifle flat after stopping one of Jack Kneipp's lefts, is bothering him and he may be forced to withdraw in favor of a newcomer, Joe May. Danny Pyne, too, probably will view the bouts from the sidelines, and if he does either Red Orth or George Mulligan will replace him.

Ruben Miro, Angy Restaino, Carmen LaSalle, Tom Oliver, Max Brinkman and Red Fleming are the others who'll fight for C. U.'s fair name. Of this group Restaino, Oliver and Fleming are undefeated.

Pro Grid Coach Quits.

Chicago, Feb. 7 (AP).—Paul Schissler today resigned as coach of the Chicago Cardinals, of the National Professional Football League. Schissler, who drilled the Cards the past two seasons, said he resigned for financial reasons.

Va. Plans Fight On Conflict In Dates

Richmonders to Act in Interest of Dixie Amateur Test.

By Dave Herman.

RICHMOND golfers have lathered themselves into razor-edge protest over the decision of the District Golf Association to book conflicting dates with the Southern amateur championship, and will attempt to effect a change in the dates of the Manor invitation.

Coincident with this report from Richmond came the statement from Billy Howell, member of the Southern Association's board of directors and the lad who led the fight to bring the big championship to the Virginia metropolis, that he and other influential members of the tournament committee would appear at the annual meeting of the Middle Atlantic Golf Association on March 2 at the Willard Hotel to discuss the matter.

The Southern, outranked in tournament importance only by the historic National Amateur and the Western Amateur, announced its dates of June 18-22, inclusive, several months ago, at the same time making known its intentions to inaugurate a membership drive, which would cover District and Maryland golf clubs.

Midatlantic Responsible.

Army and Navy Country Club, through Capt. Kendall J. Fielder's efforts, has joined the Southern, and Washington Golf and Country Club would have become a member, too, had not Manor changed its invitation dates from June 12-15 to June 18-21. Manor gave way to the Middle Atlantic Association, which asked for the June 12-15 dates. Tradition is such that a Middle Atlantic event has preference.

Young Howell, former Middle Atlantic champion, and popular with District golfers, had hoped to have Indian Spring, Congressional, Chevy Chase, Columbia and Manor join the Southern Association, since he believed that in a few years this big championship could be brought to the District.

Jimmy Cosgrove, Manor chairman, stated last night that he hated to see the conflict come about, and hoped that a suitable change could be made, but his committee is averse to May dates. No other June dates are open.

Belshe Regrets Conflict.

Meanwhile, Tommy Belshe, of Indian Spring, District association president, regretting the conflict, said that he did not think there would be enough interest from a Washington angle to warrant a change in Manor dates.

Young Howell said last night that it was important to secure the District and Baltimore clubs as early as possible, since the association's rule is that a club must register two months before the date of the tournament.

Ty Cobb 'Interested' In Movie Job Offer

Cox, 2 Rivals Tied at 71 On Links

Defending Champion Is Matched by Clark and Amateur.

AGUA CALIENTE, Mex., Feb. 7 (AP).—Despite sopping-wet playing conditions, Wiffy Cox, the defending champion; Clarence Clark, powerful Bloomfield (N. J.) pro, and Cliff Baker, Vancouver (B. C.) amateur, today matched par with 71s to lead the field at the end of the first round of the Agua Caliente Golf Sweepstakes.

A stroke back of the leaders were half a dozen fortunates, who splashed their way to totals of 72, one over. They were Harry Cooper, Chicago; Ben Loving, Petersburg, Va.; Bill Jelliffe, Los Angeles; Charles Lacey, Long Island; Byron Nelson, Texarkana, Tex., and Charles Guest, Los Angeles.

Baker came in early to take the lead, but a scoring error failed to divulge until several hours later that he had shot 36, 35—71, instead of 72.

Late Starters Delayed.

Then came Clark, a proven mudder, to match the 35, 36 of the defending champion.

Jimmy Thomson, long-hitting Australia open champion, and Harold McSpaden, leading money winner of the tournament tours to date, were caught by the lengthening shadows, needing pars for 72s. They were the only players out who could come in to tie or take the lead.

Strangely, the only win tickets sold on the leading pros were bought by themselves, with the approximate odds $119.60 to $1. If they still are tied tomorrow, each will receive half of this amount, plus the leader's share of the pari mutuel take, which was estimated to have been less than $1,000.

Mangrum Is Favorite.

Ray Mangrum, Los Angeles pro who holds the course record of 65, went to the post the favorite at 6 to 1, but shot a 76.

Two strokes back of the leaders were nine others who were fortunate enough to miss most of the trouble which lurked in copious quantities along the 6,819-yard layout. The nine, each with 73's, were Mark Fry, Oakland; Rod Munday, Santa Rosa, Calif.; Ren Smith, Oak Park, Ill.; George Von Elm, Los Angeles, a former champion here; Bill Foley, San Diego; Willie Goggin Francisco; Mortie Dutra, Detroit; John Revolta, Milwaukee and Walter Hagen, Detroit.

Villanova Favored Over Columbus U.

Locals Announce Line-Up for Tomorrow Night.

Odds on Columbus University's chances of whipping Villanova tomorrow night at Tech High School sagged to a new low yesterday beneath the weight of the Pennsylvanians' reputation. As matters now stand, the local crew will swing into action a 7-5 underdog.

The Columbus line-up, announced last night, has Henry Peterson, 118; Irving Ginsberg, 125; Leon Shub, 135; Everett Perruzzi, 145; Paul Desch, 155; Johnny McKinney, 165; Bobby Schwartz, 175, and George Cox, heavyweight, listed for assignments.

Goldstein to Discuss Boxing on Air Today

Bobby Goldstein, former University of Virginia boxing captain and Spike Webb's selection for all-time, all-America, will be interviewed by Bill Coyle over Station WMAL at 6:30 p. m. today.

Goldstein, now assistant coach at Columbus University, will discuss the future of collegiate boxing here and also will review his own colorful career in the collegiate and amateur field.

Bill Again Picks 4 Hialeah Victors

"Maybe one day, but not likely the next," might well be the slogan of Bill Bennings, The Post's handicapper at Hialeah race track.

Bennings, who had four winners on Tuesday, met his jinx Wednesday and was shut out—but he came through again yesterday with four of his selections trotting across the finish line in front.

He picked: Hi-Nelli, first race, $3.50; Venetian, second race, $4.00; Bloodroot, fourth race, $3.60; Standout, seventh race, $7.70.

Ruth Cuts Trip Short To Settle '35 Question

By Jack Cuddy.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7 (U.P.).—Babe Ruth, somewhat a-jitter over the future of portly George Herman Ruth, decided on this, his forty-first birthday, to make a quick home run from Europe to Col. Jacob Ruppert's New York brewery and find out just what kind of work a superannuated sultan of swat can obtain during the forthcoming baseball season.

The Bambino brought his world tour to an abrupt end today in London, immediately after arriving by plane from Paris with his wife, Claire, and step-daughter, Julia. United Press cables quoted Ruth as saying he will sail for the United States on the liner Olympic next Thursday, arriving here on February 20. He is sailing two weeks earlier than originally planned.

It appears that the banzais of 90,000,000 Japanese faded under the unblinking nonrecognition of 50,000,000 Frenchmen. This gave the New York Yankees' erstwhile outfielder opportunity to tune in telepathically on alarming rumors emanating from American baseball circles.

And alarming indeed are these rumors, which indicate that the Ruth unemployment problem will be exceedingly acute along in mid-April, as far as the national pastime is concerned. Of course, there's no danger of the Ruths being on the bread line because Babe has plenty of money. But it would pain George Herman no end to be shunted out of baseball, even for a year.

It may sound like heresy, sedition or treason, but actually many shrewd baseball observers believe now that even the Yankees do not want Ruth on their roster for 1935. It is an open secret that neither Ed. Barrow, business manager, nor Manager Joe McCarthy will burst out crying if Babe quits.

Despite owner Ruppert's friendship and respect for his greatest baseball asset, Ruth put Ruppert on the spot during the last world series when the Babe announced that he would quit the club unless given the job as manager. Ruppert immediately replied that he was well satisfied with McCarthy, and besides McCarthy's contract still had a year to run.

Hoping to win another pennant and fearful that Ruth's presence on the club might prove a disturbing factor, it is doubtful if Ruppert will offer Babe much financial encouragement to remain.

Dobson Named Alternate to West Point

Richmond U. Athlete Is Second Nominee of Rep. Montague.

JACK DOBSON, letter man in five sports at the University of Richmond, has been nominated as first alternate for an appointment to the United States Military Academy at West Point, it was learned yesterday.

The nomination was made by Representative A. J. Montague, of Richmond, who listed Warner Winston Croxton, jr., of West Point, Va., as first nominee and Arthur Henry Tuttle, jr., of Ashland, Va., as second alternate.

Young Dobson last year won State and sectional honors as full back, and and quarter back in football, established a school javelin record in track and was a varsity boxer in the 175-pound class. He has also won letters in basket ball and baseball. He prepped at Culver Military Academy.

He is the son of Frank Dobson, who resigned in December, 1933, after 21 years of coaching four major sports at Richmond.

Maryland Racing Hearing Set Today

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—Officials of the Maryland racing commission will appear before the ways and means committee of the House of Delegates tomorrow afternoon in a hearing on the proposed bill pending in the Legislature designed to revive horse racing in Maryland.

The commission representatives are expected to urge passage of the measure at the earliest opportunity in order to make plans for the spring season, which opens in April. Under the bill's provisions it will be possible for the four major tracks to increase purses so that the better class stables may race in Maryland instead of shipping their horses to Northern circuits.

A reduction from $6,000 to $500 daily tax on the tracks is provided for by the bill, while the tax collected by the State on sums wagered will be increased from 1 to 2½ per cent. The State will receive approximately $175,000 less in taxes from the tracks under the proposed measure, though supporters of it argue that with improved racing the total "take" will be increased to a point where the State revenue will shortly be augmented.

British Soccer Football Earns Its Big Crowds, Gallico Finds

By Paul Gallico.

LONDON, (By Mail)—Naturally, I had read so much about the English cup ties that drew the biggest sports crowds in the history of modern games that I went eagerly to the Tottenham Hotspur Stadium on the outskirts of London to see the Hotspurs play the Newcastle United in one of the ties. It was European, that is, association or soccer football.

I was not disappointed. It was a completely thrilling afternoon. There were more than 60,000 persons in the sold-out park. That same day, all over Great Britain, there was probably a total of 800,000 people looking at similar matches. The action is so fast up and down that 120-yard field that you begin to think you are looking at a hockey match. It is almost incredible that men on foot can move up and down with such speed and fluidity, since they play two 45-minute periods and are permitted no substitutions at any time. What athletes those players are!

The cup tie is more easily understood if one substitutes the word "match" for "tie." The English do have the strangest names for things. The matches are played by the professional football teams for the cup of England. It is a sort of a world series of football that runs along concurrently with the regular league season. It is as if the 16 major league ball clubs would, during the season, meet one another in elimination matches until two teams finally appeared in a single championship game, the finals.

There are some 22 teams in the first division, and some 24 in the second. They all play in their own league throughout the season, but are all tossed into a hat and drawn against one another for the special cup tie games. Each time they play, half are eliminated, the rest tossed back into the hat again and redrawn for the next match. The final will be played April 27. Some 140,000 will see that. Some 500,000 would attend if there were any place big enough to hold them.

There were then more than 60,000 in the park, an enormous four-sided affair, nearly all covered. Newcastle United was playing the local team, Tottenham Hotspur. The loser would be definitely out of the cup play. The game could not have been waged under worse conditions. There was a 70-mile gale blowing down from the north, and five minutes after the game began the air was filled with hail, snow and sleet.

Millard, Farley's Stamp Foe, Once Ran 108 Yards to Score

By Dillon Graham.
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

REPRESENTATIVE CHARLES MILLARD, of New York, who was stopped at the scrimmage line in his drive against Jim Farley's generosity with unperforated stamps, ranked as an All-America half back at Brown University in the gay nineties.

Millard, carrying the ball in the House Tuesday for stamp collectors angry over the Postmaster General's action in giving friends stamps valued highly by philatelic societies, showed some of the vim he had when chosen All-America in 1894 by Casper Whitney and named on Walter Camp's alternate team.

"Army had brought our kickoff back to Brown's 2-yard line," he recalled today. "There the Cadets fumbled and we recovered.

"Our kicker, McCarty, went back to punt, but instead the ball was thrown to me by our center. It caught the soldiers by surprise and I slipped around left end, and got into the open field to score."

Millard remembers the game with Harvard in '94 because he suffered a blow on the head that knocked him unconscious and sent him to the hospital.

Corinne Dailey Victor by Nose at Hialeah, Pays $89.40 Mutuel

Filly Breaks Last, Goes On to Win

Marching Home Second; Montagna, Favorite, Finishes Third.

By Walter Haight
(Post Staff Writer).

HIALEAH RACE TRACK, Fla., Feb. 7.—Corinne Dailey, a daughter of Swift and Sure, which had not won since last fall at Narragansett, suddenly awoke today to take a thrilling nose decision from Marching Home in the St. Augustine Handicap, the feature race. Two lengths away came Mantagna, the heavily played favorite.

Under a sensational ride by the veteran Nick Wall, Corinne Dailey paid an $89.40 mutuel to provide the chief jolt to favorite players, who had an in-and-out day.

As the race was run, Corinne Dailey was better than the nose margin shows on the chart. She broke in last position, but Wall rushed her into the main contention as Phildia and Dokas battled for the lead in the seven furlong test. The filly, running along the rail, soon went into a head and head struggle with Phildia. The latter quit nearing the far turn, but Dokas came through with a burst of speed that Wall wisely did not try to match. Instead, he took up on Corinne Dailey and steered her to the outside in the better going.

Cuts Down Margin.

Meanwhile, Mantagna, shued to last position on the turn, began to show signs of moving. Dokas clung to the lead, but Wall brought Corinne Daily into the thick of the battle again nearing the eighth pole.

J. Renick tried to save the race with his whip, but Dokas was now tiring and Corinne Dailey cut down the margin between them with every stride. At that, the filly barely was up in the last jump. Mantagna's rush was only productive of third money.

Warm weather returned to Dade County, and among those who witnessed the program were former Govs. Albred E. Smith, of New York, and Joseph B. Ely, of Massachusetts.

Golden Way Victor.

Standout took the finale in a driving finish with Just American. Third money went to Tuffy G. O'Malley kept the winner off the pace set by Just American and came through on the inside to take the decision. The winner paid $7.70.

Favorite players were off to a flying start when Hi-Nelli, a $3.50 mutuel proposition, drove to victory in the opening dash for juveniles. Glory Greenock, which led most of the way, was second ahead of Maxine F. It was a duel between the horses with outside post positions. J. Renick was forced to give Hi-Nelli a million-dollar ride.

Venetian Triumphs.

The Chilean combination of Venetian and Jockey M. Villena accounted for the second race at a $4 mutuel. In his peculiar fashion, Villena whipped Venetian into the lead well up the stretch and finished ahead of the driving Doris B. and Protagonist.

Up and Up, the odds-on choice in the third race, failed to show anything resembling form, despite a pounding from Jockey Coucci. Hardware proved the winner by a head margin from Stavka, with Purple Knight third. Hardware paid a $20.90 mutuel. Up and Up was 85 cents on the dollar and didn't run a nickel's worth.

E. R. Bradley's Blood Root proved a pleasing favorite in the fourth race, coming up in the stretch to defeat Sun Fairplay and Cristate. The $3.60 favorite was off badly and when Sun Fairplay drew out to a two-length lead rounding the far turn, Blood Root appeared to be a beaten horse. However, Meade brought the filly around and caught the leader nearing the wire.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HI-NELLI, $3.50, $2.90, $2.70; GLORY GREENOCK, $9.00, $6.80; MAXINE F, $7.60.

HI-NELLI is a good filly. She broke very slow and had to overcome a lot of rough interference, but she closed gamely and right at the end was drawing away. GLORY GREENOCK was hustled away from the gate, displayed keen speed and made a game effort. MAXINE F., on the outside, came very fast in final sixteenth. SPARTA attempted to get through on inside, but was blocked at end. GOLDEN LYRE ran a fair race. NED'S AFFINITY was timidly handled in early part. ARMFUL tired badly.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800. Claiming price, $1,500. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post, 2:51½. Off at 3:00. Winner, C. W. Muller's ch. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—VENETIAN, $4.00, $3.10, $3.00; DORIS B., $7.40, $4.50; PROTAGONIST, $8.70.

VENETIAN is in splendid form at present. He handled his weight well, got away fast, came around field on turn, ran out entering stretch, came down in the middle of the track and was going away at end. DORIS B. broke fast, was hustled along from the start and held on gamely in drive. PROTAGONIST, very mean at the gate, broke running, showed good speed and made a game effort. CORRYMEELA was a stout factor from the start. STAROGAN tired badly after showing early speed.

THIRD RACE—One mile (out of chute). The Lake City (first division). Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post, 3:28. Off at 3:29. Winner, Mrs. W. R. Flemming's ch. g. (3), by Scotch Broom—Relection. Trained by W. R. Flemming. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:38 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HARDWARE, $20.90, $7.60, $4.40; STAVKA, $8.00, $4.70; PURPLE KNIGHT, $5.20.

HARDWARE broke slow and trailed far back in early part, came with a rush in stretch, assumed lead at sixteenth pole and held on gamely. STAVKA came to close ground in stretch and just failed to get up. PURPLE KNIGHT ran into long lead early, set fast pace, but weakened in final drive. SCARP trailed to final quarter, came very fast and is about to win. UP AND UP ran a miserable race, being outrun from the start. He was whipped all through the stretch, but failed to close any ground. DANCING CLOUD came through on inside, got up to third place and then tired. SICKLEFEATHER had speed for 5 furlongs.

FOURTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). The Lake City (second division). Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post, 3:58½. Off at 4:02½. Winner, E. R. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLOODROOT, $3.60, $2.80, $2.30; SUN FAIRPLAY, $4.60, $2.80; CRISTATE, $2.50.

BLOODROOT had to be hard ridden all the way. He broke slow and trailed in last place to the turn out of the back stretch, closed gamely under the whip and was drawing away at end. SUN FAIRPLAY was sent to the front with a rush turning out of the back stretch, opened wide gap around turn and held on stubbornly in the final sixteenth. CRISTATE dropped back last around turn, came very fast in final furlong. RIGHT RANK had speed for 6 furlongs. LADY WISDOM and LILLIAN UHL were both used up trying to race each other into defeat.

FIFTH RACE—Seven furlongs (out of chute). The St. Augustine Handicap. Purse, $1,000. Start good. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post, 4:35. Off at 4:39½. Winner, S. R. Rosoff's br. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CORINNE DAILEY, $89.40, $34.60, $7.60; MARCHING HOME, $4.60, $3.20; MANTAGNA $2.70.

CORINNE DAILEY displaying keen speed from the start, was hard ridden all through stretch and just lasted to win. She pulled up very lame. MARCHING HOME dropped back to last place turning out of the back stretch, slipped through on inside when field went wide on turn and closed fast and would have won in another stride. MANTAGNA ran a very bad race. He was never in the way, came wide in stretch but failed to close any ground. DOKAS showed good speed. PHILDIA had plenty of speed for 6 furlongs, then tired. FOXY AGNES lacked speed and came back lame.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and a furlong. Purse, $1,000. Claiming price, $2,000. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post, 5:07½. Off at once. Winner, W. N. Adrians' br. h. (5), by John P. Grier—Milky Way II. Trained by H. Jacobs. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:50 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOLDEN WAY, $10.40, $4.50, $3.60; WISE ADVOCATE, $4.00, $3.20; KINDACORN, $5.10

GOLDEN WAY, rated along to the far turn, where he was sent to the front, opened wide gap and stood long drive gamely. WISE ADVOCATE came with a good burst of speed in stretch and was gaining rapidly on the winner. KINDACORN was allowed to drop back to last place, but closed fast. MARMION, under stout restraint for 6 furlongs, failed to make up any ground when let down. AL NEIMAN quit badly.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-quarter miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post, 5:42. Off at 5:42½. Winner, L. L. Lycan's b. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—STANDOUT, $7.70, $5.10, $3.60; JUST AMERICAN, $9.50, $4.60; TUFFY G, $4.10

STANDOUT pounds the best. He was taken up and then back and finally assumed lead around turn, saved ground and just got home. JUST AMERICAN, showing improved form, was a stout factor from the start. TUFFY G. was running very fast at finish. VESTED POWER ran a fair race.

Dear Al: Hialeah Race Track, Fla., Feb. 7.

After riding two winners in as many days, Donny Meade is convinced he has broken the jinx that has followed him here. Between January 19 and February 6, the Bradley rider did not reach the finish line first. He was seen smiling as he went to the post with Blood Root today, the first time he has had anything but a sore expression for two weeks. George Ellis, the former jockey, is bedridden in a Miami hospital with a broken back as the result of an auto accident.

Clocker Mike has returned to normalcy. He had five bucks on St. Kitts, one of his specials, yesterday.

Trainer Joe is not faring so well. Joe got his landlady to bet $2 across the board on Haggerson. She told the Greek at Joe's lunchroom, and between the two of them Joe was scared to go home tonight and will not be eating tomorrow at the Greek's. BILL.

First race—Torita is at the bottom of the list, but is not to be trifled with if she sees action. Coucci is slated to ride and he should do well from the outside. Kroma raced in good fashion recently and appears to be the one to beat. Cash Book to take care of the others.

Second race—Towson gets in this race with only 104 pounds and is another Coucci mount. Races as if ready to crack down again and I'm stringing along. De Valera is as dangerous as ever and will be there or thereabouts at the wire. Fred Almy carries a load of weight and breaks off the rail. May have to overcome trouble.

Third race—Mettle won impressively in a recent effort and can be counted upon to do a lot of running here. Blessed Again, with Meade up, fits well in this field and will have something to say about the purse distribution. Fair Countess was knocked all over the course last out and may be better than rated.

Fourth race—Paradisical has shown good form in both races and trials and has a field here that should bow. Rainey must give us a good ride, however. Jim John is consistent and can not be placed far from the top. Boston Brook is racing into shape and is dangerous.

Fifth race—The Ogle Entry of Merrily On and Miney Myerson seems to have a strong hand in this 7-furlong affair. Both are fit and ready. Cathop has been finishing strong and may surprise in this field. Jirasol II has picked a tough spot, but is improving.

Sixth race—Pass Up ran a winning race last out but was disqualified. Gets in light tomorrow and if Lindberg keeps him straight in the stretch, I see no reason for mistakes. Diverting is again a serious threat. Jakovia for the show.

Seventh race—Big Red looks like a winning favorite in the finale. Coucci is slated to ride. Cousin George is consistent and dangerous. The shift to Hanford may make a difference in the running of Peedeeque.

Georgetown Faces N. Y. U. Tonight in City's 'Best of Year'

Eastern Five Plays Frosh In Opener

Hargaden Makes Bid for All-American Honors Against Gross.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

WASHINGTON'S biggest basket ball show of the season will be presnted tonight at Tech High School, where Georgetown faces a snarling New York University quintet in the lower half of a double-barreled super-special attraction.

As a warm-up for the big game, Georgetown's undefeated Freshmen play the champion Eastern High School team, beginning at 7:30 o'clock. The varsity game will start as soon as the boards cool.

New York's Violets almost reached Washington without a loss in two years, but the paler Blue of an inspired Yale toppled Howard McCann's men from the heights after battling through a torrid extra period. So it will be a violent Violet team, bent on redeeming itself that trots out before the local populace tonight.

In Tough Spot.

Before Yale's stunning upset, Georgetown was in a mighty comfortable spot—now it's in an equally tough one. The Hoyas figured to catch an undefeated team that would be playing under the terrific strain that necessarily comes with such a long and splendid record. Georgetown had everything to gain and nothing to lose. Playing on its home floor before its own supporters, Georgetown had everything in its favor.

But the rain of Yale shots on N. Y. U.'s basket washed away that pleasant picture and Georgetown finds itself up against the East's finest, most versatile collection of courtmen on equal footing. All things being equal, the better team will win and that means New York.

Hargaden to Make Bid.

Tonight will be Ed Hargaden night after a fashion, for Georgetown's lanky captain is making his supreme bid for an All-American berth. Another contender for the national honor roll, Sid Gross, New York's floor leader, probably will be pitted against him. It is generally conceded that one of the positions will go to either of the two players.

Georgetown tapered off last night on the Tech floor in a brief and easy scrimmage against the Freshmen, and Coach Fred Mesmer believes the team is at its best for its most important game of the season.

Session Set Today For Southeastern

Court Tourney Resumption Among Problems.

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 7 (AP).—Faculty representatives, athletic directors and coaches, spokesmen for the Southeastern Conference, will gather here tomorrow to lay down laws for the forthcoming year in athletics.

Paramount importance of the annual gathering of the lawmakers for the conference centers upon decisions to be rendered on the questions of post-season games and restoration of various tournaments.

Sentiment appears divided so far as the reinstatement of the annual basketball tournament is concerned, but some members expressed opinion today that the event will be staged again in 1936, if not this spring.

The chief bone of contention on the eve of the annual gathering seems to be the authorization of member teams to participate in post-season football conflicts.

Double-Header Lost By Hedgesville Teams

Hedgesville, W. Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.). Hedgesville High lost a double-header in basket ball last night to Harpers Ferry here, the visiting girls winning, 37-23, and the boys, 41-18.

The Hedgesville boys were handicapped by the loss of two regulars. Dirting and Hess, both of whom are ill.

Everett Faces Boros To Manager's Lament

By Bill McCormick.

MR. JAMES Q. (Q for Quinnebaugh) Erwin, peripatetic proprietor of pugs, is of the opinion that he has been placed squarely in the middle and that pressure is being applied at both ends in the matter of the bout of his heavyweight hope, Buck Everett, against Al Boros at the Auditorium Monday night.

"Woe is me, wohoe is me," laments Mr. Erwin pitifully when the subject is mentioned. "Wadda spot I've put myself and my prize gladiator in, wadda spot!"

After several crying towels have been thoroughly diluted and if carefully coaxed, Mr. Erwin will reveal the source of his anguish, as was his original intention anyway.

Mr. Erwin's Lament.

"This Boros is gonna give Everett his toughest fight here," Mr. Erwin will disclose, "an' win, lose or draw, we ain't gonna get any credit for the fight. All of which wouldn't bother me too much, but unless the peepul wake up to the fack that they're gonna see the best heavyweight fight of the year, we ain't gonna get any money for the fight either."

The last revelation will prove most excruciating to those who realize that fight managers must, to make both ends meet—or even make one end vegetable—hew to the dime and let the credit fall where it may.

"I pull the boner," Mr. Erwin will admit between sniffles. "I signed Buck to fight for anyone Cornell could dig up, thinking he'd excavate somebody like Jimmy Braddock or Hans Birkie, but what does Fatso do? He comes along with a nice, young, fresh youngster named Al Boros.

"Well, from then on, things began to look dark. If you wanna know the truth, Boros was the guy Everett was to fight at the Garden las' month, so I knew he must be a pretty good fighter.

"I began checkin' here and there an' talked to Jimmy Johnston, who told me this Boros was a great fighter and liable to upset Buck any day in the week. So, I called Broadway Charley Rose up in New York, an', not tellin him I'd signed to battle Boros, ask him what he knew about him.

"'Hey, you don't wanna fight that guy,' Broadway said right away, 'He's good enough to stop any heavyweight, an' you don't get no credit if you lick him."

"'How does he fight?' I ast Broadway, 'Like Steve Dudas, only better, an' he punches harder' Rose told me, an' I hung up the phone in disgust."

"Francis Stan, down on the Star, wires Johnny Romano up in New York and Johnny tells him Boros is one of the coming heavyweights and don't be surprised if he stops Everett. When I heard this, I almost fainted."

"So," will continue Mr. Erwin, bringing his tale of sorrow to a pitiful conclusion, "when they started takin' cracks at Boros as an opponent for Buck an' the commission calls a meetin' to investigate his fitness, I sees a ray of great hope.

"I hops on the phone an' tells Heinie Miller, secretary of the commission, that if he wants to call off the fight, that's okay with me. What I really meant was I'd be tickled to death, but I didn't tell him.

"'Sorry, Jimmy,' Heinie yodels back at me, 'The commission's looked up Boros' record and checked him every way possible, an' found he's a very good fighter, so the bout will have to go on.'

"'In fack,' continues Heinie, 'Some of the best minds in the fight racket seem to think he'll stop Buck.'

"Huh," will sniffle Mr. Erwin, signing off, "I couldda told 'em that all along. Woe is me, wohoe is me."

Western Seeks Firm Grip on 2d Place

By John R. Vosburgh.

NOW that Eastern has wedded itself to the interhigh championship, the scene shifts to other quarters this afternoon, as Western seeks to maintain its companionate relations with second place against the avowed opposition of Roosevelt and Tech and Central resume their old domestic quarrels at Tech.

It will be a stormy day for Western, whether or not it still has undisputed grasp on the runner-up berth by the end of the afternoon. The Ruff Riders, in a dangerous mood at present, are free to declare that their startling uprising against King Eastern Tuesday was no mere flash in the pan. Playing on its own floor, Roosevelt is twofold more dangerous and it will be playing on its own floor today. It will be the Rough Riders' eighth and last appearance in the series.

Western Won First.

Western won easily in the first game between the two schools, 33 to 17, but the team it defeated was not that which fought Eastern to a 38-31 score this week. The new Roosevelt team has a spark which was about dimmed by internal troubles during the early part of the season. Individual playing put the brakes on the Roosevelt drive and the relations among some of the players did anything but promote team play.

Spiro Kolius and Abe Spivok, regular forward and guard, and Capt. Dave Donovan were conspicuous by their absence in the Eastern game, but the new faces in the line-up were ample replacements. Kolius was declared ineligible and Donovan quit the team. A defeat for Western and victory for Tech today will send the two into a tie for second place again.

Fox Hunt Slated.

W. & L. Quintet Host to Duke Tonight

Will Seek to Avenge Two Consecutive Defeats; Matmen on Road.

LEXINGTON, Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.). Traveling a rocky road as defending champions of the Southern Conference, Washington and Lee's Basket Ball Team will meet Duke University here tomorrow night in an effort to avenge two consecutive defeats, one at the hands of Duke and the other at the hands of William and Mary.

The Generals collided with a fighting, consistently flashy band of Indians here Tuesday night, losing by two points when William and Mary won 38-36, making it the second time the Generals have lost by two points. North Carolina took a 36-34 decision at Lynchburg on January 10.

Having better luck, however, Washington and Lee wrestlers will take to the road, meeting North Carolina State at Raleigh tomorrow night, then journeying over to Durham to meet Duke.

Returning from their road adventure Coach Mathis' conference champions will spend more than a week polishing up for their feature meet of the season—an engagement with the University of Michigan here on February 18.

Cy Young's basketeers have run into a lion's share of hard luck this season, most of the players suffering from heavy colds for the last ten days and Bob Fields, veteran and fiery guard, temporarily out of the line-up. Bill Ellis, veteran forward and guard, has been having trouble with a pulled leg tendon, and Charlie Smith, all-Southern center last year, is just recovering from a severe cold.

Smith, however, has been leading the way, playing most of the time at forward and garnering a major share of points.

Washington and Lee boxers, defeated 6 to 2 by Maryland, will go to Blacksburg Saturday night, along with the cagers to battle Virginia Polytechnic Institute. W. & L. freshman boxers and basketeers also are slated to travel to V. P. I. this week-end.

Post Mortems . . .

Bob Godwin, the Herald Harbor fire chief, was scheduled to fight Tony Shucco in Daytona Beach on February 4 . . . but the bout was canceled when Pacific Coast promoters exercised their option on Godwin's services and demanded him for a bout against Bob Olin, recently crowned light-heavyweight champion, on February 9 . . . but the Coast promoters agreed to ship Bobby back to Florida by plane at their own expense, so he could condition himself for the Shucco bout . . . Fre[illegible]e Vaughan, University of Richmond boxing captain and star half back, has been lost to the Spiders . . . possibly for the rest of the season . . . because of an impacted fracture of the right hand received in his recent losing fight against Midshipman Michel at the Naval Academy . . . Pete Barry recently completed his twentieth year with the New York Celtics basket ball team in a game against Zeke Bonura's five in New Orleans . . . Barry has averaged more than 100 games a year since joining the Celts . . . The first golf course in Pinehurst was built in 1897 . . . it had nine holes . . . now there are four 18-hole courses there . . . and four others within a few minutes motor drive . . . Walter W. Plumb, a resident of Charlottesville who takes his collegiate boxing seriously, has seen every round and bout of boxing at the University of Virginia . . . and has complete records on every fight for the last ten years . . . during that time he has witnessed 1,108 bouts, or nearly 3,000 rounds of fighting . . . and, Just 25 Years Ago Today: Charley Street, the Nats' star catcher, and Frank Oberlin, a pitcher, signed contracts for the ensuing year . . . Street had been rumored a holdout.

C. U. Rally Fails In Game at Baltimore

Cards Drop 38-36 Duel After Trailing Foe by 16 Points.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 7 (Spl.).—The University of Baltimore achieved a major triumph in basket ball this afternoon by trimming the crack Catholic University quintet, 38 to 36, at the Richmond Market Armory. It was a deserved victory, but the Maroons very nicely tossed it away when the Cardinals, full of injured pride at the impending defeat, charged forward in a desperate ten-minute rush. Instead of attempting to hold a 16-point lead by slowing down the pace and attempting to shoot only on wide-open chances, the Maroons tried to match spectacular shots with the visitors.

Herman Schmarr led a whirlwind long-range and sneak-play offensive that earned more points in the last ten minutes than Catholic U. had obtained in the preceding 30. But, when the last time out was taken by Baltimore, with 5 seconds remaining, the Maroons still had 2 points of their sadly depleted lead. The two were sufficient, however, for while Catholic U. gained the ball on the jump at center, the wildly swarming Baltimore team gave no marksman a chance to shoot before the whistle sent the little band of 200 fans homeward rejoicing.

Score Tied at 8-All.

As the game began the teams tossed a couple of 2-pointers and in the first few minutes were tied at 4-all. Here Baltimore found the webbing for a short-lived lead of 4 points, which Catholic U. matched, leaving the score at 8-all and half the first period finished.

Lefty Reitz's Baltimoreans then made their bid for a dominant lead. Foul shots by Prucha and Probst earned 3 points, and Reitz sent in Benny Levinson, freshman from Poly, to relieve Hunky Matz at guard. The newcomer's first effort was a one-handed shot and Probst pushed in two more field goals, followed by another from Levinson's hands on a rebound. The foul shots caged by Ken McKenzie put the score at 21 to 8 and the Catholic team was in such a position that recovery seemed almost impossible. Foul shots by Augusterfer and Leib left the tally 21 to 10 at half time.

Take 16-Point Lead.

But the team from the Capital had a lot of fight remaining, though for half the second period it still had a luckless time at scoring. Baltimore kept widening the margin until the high point was reached half way through the session. The Maroons enjoyed a 16-point lead and a doubled score at 32 to 16. It looked to be in the bag. But it wasn't.

Schmarr, aided principally by Leib and Augusterfer, began pecking away at that huge lead and in four minutes it was reduced 10 points to 32-22. Instead of letting up the Cardinals continued their unrelenting drive and came within a bucket of tying up the game at 38-all, but the rally was abruptly halted by the timekeeper's shrill blast that ended hostilities.

La Salle Quintet Trims St. Francis Prep, 37-18

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—Paced by Joe Kelley and Tommy Stakem, forwards, who rolled up 24 points, LaSalle Institute defeated St. Francis Prep School, of Loretto, Pa., last night on SS. Peter and Paul Court, 37 to 18.

Joe Kelley had a perfect night at the charity line when he hooped four shots and also caged four field goals, while Tom Stakem chalked up his 12 points on six 2-point baskets.

Davidson Frosh Rally To Defeat Woodberry

Woodberry Forest, Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—After trailing at half time, the Davidson Freshmen rallied here today to defeat Wodberry Forest, 26 to 16. The locals were held to 4 points in the last half. Wade Barrow, forward and former Woodberry player, was high scorer with 13 points.

Old Line Teams To Taper Off For Tests

MARYLAND'S court and ring machines have their final trial spins this afternoon before stepping out against a grade A brand of competition tomorrow night at Ritchie Coliseum.

Richmond's undefeated Spiders, busily engaged in weaving a string of consecutive victories that has reached 10, stalk into battle against the Terrapin dribblers in the upper half of a twin bill. Maryland's boxers are billed to knock around—maybe two rounds—with Penn State's unbeaten gentlemen of the punch.

This boxing match has more angles than a book of geometrical problems and, after dissecting a few of them, it appears that Maryland will do well to get a draw. On paper, Maryland seems to be putting its head into the Nittany Lion's mouth, figuratively if not literally.

Dick Harlow, prospective Harvard coach, who is serving his final year as Western Maryland's ring tutor, claims State has its best squad in 12 years, or since Steve Hamas and his strong-arm cronies left the classroom. Harlow should know for the Terrors and Lions fight annually.

Figures in Three Wins.

The Terps figure to win the 135-pound, 165-pound and light-heavyweight bouts. Penn State looks good enough to win the 115-pound, 125-pound and heavyweight scraps and the 155-pound engagement is a toss-up. Nedomatsky, McAboy and McCaw are the Marylanders who should win. If one of them bows in an upset Maryland's going to get its first black-eye of the season.

State has Frankie McAndrews, the third of a fighting family of Scots, billed in the 115-pound class, and he's good. He had to be to get on the team for that 115-pound assignment belonged to Russ Criswell, collegiate bantam champion. In the 125-pound class Capt. Mike Zeleznock, the cha[illegible]ion, holds forth, and State's heavyweight, Izzy Richter, won the National A. A. U. title two years ago. Richter will be making his debut as a collegian tomorrow.

Young Is Undefeated.

Maryland's 115-pounder will be young Jimmy Young, a hardworking chap who has yet to taste of defeat. In the 125-pound class are Bill Waller or Tom Birmingham. Mike Lombardi, a newcomer to the first team this year, or Kelly will battle in the 145-pound division, and Carl Stalfort will hold forth in the heavyweight division.

Al Waters and Bernie Buscher will start at forward for the basket ball team, with Vic Willis, center; Bill Andorka, Bill Guckeyson or "South" Sothoron, guards. Gukeyson was slowed up by a leg injury earlier in the week, but should be all right by tomorrow.

Roger Leverton, a Washington boy, and Winnie Brown are Richmond's outstanding sharpshooters, and the necessary precautions have been taken to have them bottled up tomorrow.

Trackmen to Vie At West Virginia

Widmyer Among Athletes Entered Tomorrow.

Morgantown, W. Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—Representatives from 14 colleges and universities, as well as 25 outstanding high schools of this district, will compete at West Virginia University Saturday.

The seventh annual West Virginia indoor games will feature Metcalf, of Marquette; Widmyer, of Maryland; Peacock, of Temple, and Luthringer, of Penn State, in a sprint series consisting of 50, 60 and 70 yard races. Other features include a relay team challenge from Pitt against teams from Maryland, West Virginia, Penn State, Georgetown, Ohio Wesleyan and Villanova.

Everett, Southern Conference champion, from the University of Virginia, heads a strong field of hurdlers.

Don't Worry, Hanley Advises Idle Coaches

By Paul Mickelson.

CHICAGO, Feb. 7 (AP).—The reporter scented a story, so he looked up Dick Hanley and fired this question at the man who was given testimonials of his greatness and then the gate as Northwestern's football coach less than two months ago:

"How does an unemployed coach feel as he goes hunting for a job?"

"Brother, you'll have to ask someone else for the answer to that one," he shot back with a grin. "There's only one thing for a football coach to do after he's out of a job and that is to take a vacation to get away from it all—if he can. That's what I did. And it's worked. Right now I feel my old spirit back and am ready to hit the job-hunting trail with a lot of ability to 'take it.'"

Happy, Confident.

As tanned as a native of the tropics after more than a month's vacation in California, Handley looked happy and confident as he expounded his philosophy for unemployed football coaches. He went on:

"Maybe misery loves company, but when a football coach loses his job, the first thing he should do is to take a good vacation—if he can. Get away from it all, forget the game, and have a good time. During my vacation, I resolved not to talk to any unemployed coaches if I could help it. I played golf with happy and contented men outside of the game immediately after I finished my annual assignment of helping Andy Kerr, of Colgate, drill the Eastern All-Stars for the charity game against the West on New Year's Day. Sure, I received a few offers, but believe it or not, I have done nothing about them. I took a vacation to forget and did just that. I wish a lot of coaches in my shoes would do the same thing."

To Discuss Offers.

Hanley, although confessing that good coaching jobs were scarcer than ever this year despite the upheaval within the ranks, admitted he had been approached by the Boston Red Skins of the National Professional Football League and that he planned to confer with them next week. Two or three offers from colleges and universities in the East also will be discussed, he said, chances are that he will pass up the pro game.

It's an old story for a coach to gloat over the player prospects of his successor, but Hanley said he meant what he said in predicting that Northwestern would have a fine team under Lynn Waldorf next season.

"Waldorf is a grand coach and he will have fine material next season for the other big ten teams to shoot at," said Hanley. "I wish him and his kids all the luck in the world."

Twins Seeking Court Title Tonight

Alexandria Quintet Plays Washington-Lee High; Other Games.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—Alexandria High will attempt to strengthen its hold on first place in the Inter-Suburban League in its game tomorrow night with Washington and Lee High. A victory will clinch the title for the Twins.

Jack Lynch, Bennie Burrel, Nappy Nugent, Frankie Brewer, Tommy Ennis, Al Jacobson and Jay Smith will play for Alexandria. The Alexandria reserves will meet the Light Infantry five in a preliminary.

Mount St. Agnes and Gunston Hall girls will meet at the Y. W. C. A. tomorrow at 3 p. m. St. Agnes won from St. Ritas recently.

St. Mary's Academy will meet Holy Cross Academy girls Saturday at the armory at 2:15.

Call Billy Padgett, of the Columbia Firemen, at Alexandria 1174, between 8 a. m. and 4 p. m. if you want a game.

A Junior League meeting of managers will be held at 118 South St. Asaph street Saturday at 8 a. m.

Heurich Brewers will engage the Celtics in the Armory Hall Saturday night in an exhibition game. The Post Seniors play in the preliminary.

Lee-Jackson High boys and girls meet the Manassas High teams tomorrow night in the Duke street gym. The first game starts at 7:30. Manassas is the favorite to win.

Penn Avenue Cagemen Take Double-Header

Barton, Md., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—Pennsylvania Avenue High School, of Cumberland, won both ends of a Western Maryland Interscholastic double-header from Barton High School here last night, the girls, 40 to 8, and the boys, 57 to 29.

Barton's quintet managed to give the Maroon and White an interesting battle for 20 minutes and trailed by 3 points at the halfway mark. Harold Fraley led the Penn attack with eight field goals. Anne Stevenson and Revonelle Bennett sank 19 field goals for the Penn Avenue girls.

Fish and Game Ideas Drawn At Parley

Commission Will Study Results of Session at Martinsburg.

MARTINSBURG, W. Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—At a meeting here last night some 50 sportsmen from five eastern West Virginia counties exchanged views concerning opening and closing of hunting and fishing season, as well as other details affecting the two sports. T. M. Cheek, of Charleston, director of game and fish propagation of the State conservation commission, was present to hear ideas which had been solicited. The results of the conference will be offered the commission for study before 1935 dates and other phases of the coming seasons are set by that body.

Counties represented included Berkeley, Jefferson, Morgan, Hardy and Hampshire. Mineral, the sixth member of the group, was not represented, but will present its views in writing directly to the commission.

Out of the discussion, directed by Cheek, emerged several topics apparently felt of most importance. It was the consensus that an insufficient amount of game warden protection exists. Almost to a man the group favored increased license fees in varying forms as a means of combating a number of evils, including that of limited protection.

Suggestion Is Beaten.

The suggestion of a decrease in the size of bass from 10 to 8 inches which an angler would be permitted to take, was voted down almost unanimously. That of gigging came in for extended debate and, although opinion was heavily against it, several speakers, particularly those from Hardy County, maintained the taking of nongame fish in that manner constituted no harm and they petitioned for continued permission to use that form in capturing fish, particularly carp. It was pointed out in this connection that while gigging was illegal, permission can be obtained from the commission to take nongame fish in that manner.

J. D. Briscoe, of Jefferson, was outspoken in a request for a game warden for Jefferson alone. To pay for such services he suggested an increase in the license fee, a matter which Cheek later pointed out as being one for the Legislature itself to pass upon.

Other spokesmen, representing either a county or a specific game organization, included Paul E. Winters, Harpers Ferry; Capt. George T. Whitmore, Martinsburg; Howard Mason, Martinsburg; H. Doyle Helsley, Morgan County; G. W. Browning, Hampshire County; A. E. Friddle, Hardy County.

Cotton Market

New York, Feb. 7 (AP).—There was little more business in cotton today and prices held generally steady, with slight early declines followed by rallies. The general market closed steady, net unchanged to 7 points higher.

Early liquidation in March was absorbed by the trade, and after showing net losses of 2 to 4 points after the call prices turned steadier.

The late demand seemed to come chiefly from the trade, while there was scattered covering on the rally which carried March from the low of 12.27 to 12.34 and October from 12.24 to 12.32.

Exports today, 11,278, making 3,087,439 so far this season. Port receipts, 17,308; United States port stocks, 2,787,631.

New York, Feb. 7.—Analysis of the public utility holding company bill by officials and lawyers of interested companies convinces most of them that the measure in its present form will spell the end of the prevalent organization of the electric power and gas industries.

At the present time, the dominant form of combination in the public utility industry in this country is the holding company controlling scattered blocks of operating properties. Thus, the North American Co., the Standard Gas & Electric Co., the Cities Service Co. and the Electric Bond & Share Co., taking four typical concerns of the kind, control operating subsidiaries that serve a number of separate localities.

In this way, it has been sought to obtain diversification of interests so that adverse conditions affecting one of the areas in which the company operates will not injure the financial status or the credit of the whole combination.

In the days when the public utilities were expanding rapidly, and were raising large amounts of new capital for this purpose, such diversification was found of great aid. It facilitated the raising of capital, since newer and unseasoned properties could be financed by the holding company, which sold its own securities based on the high credit standing it obtained through its ownership of older, well-seasoned operating subsidiaries. It assured that experienced management would be made available to supervise the operations of the many small as well as large operating concerns, which were acquired or organized by the holding company in various localities.

Pending Measure Interpreted as Providing for Localized System.

The pending measure, introduced by Senator Wheeler and Representative Rayburn, is interpreted as designed to substitute for the present holding company structure a series of geographically compact and localized holding companies, of which the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey might be taken as a typical example. This company operates in one area, consisting of a part of one State, where it controls in one compact group virtually all the utility operating properties.

The pending bill requires that after January 1, 1938, the Securities and Exchange Commission may require a holding company to divest itself of any operating subsidiary which is held "not necessary or appropriate to the operation of a geographically and economically integrated public utility system." Similarly, after 1940, the holding company is to be abolished in the public utility field, except where State laws prevent the actual consolidation of operating properties into one corporation and where the Federal Power Commission issues a certificate finding that the holding company relation is "necessary for the operation of a geographically and economically integrated public utility system."

This issue of the compact versus the scattered and diversified type of combination in the public utility industry has been fought out within the industry itself time and again in the past. There can be no reasonable quarrel over the desirability of combinations of local public utility enterprises into larger units, to obtain the benefits of large scale generation, free interchange of power, lower cost financing and unified management. "Superpower," or connection of various sources of energy and centers of consumption, has made possible far greater efficiency and lower operating cost in an industry where the "load factor," or ratio of average power output of a company to productive capacity of its generating plants, is a basic influence on efficiency cost.

Question Raised on Best Method for Large Operations.

However, if large scale operation be granted to be desirable, there is the further issue of whether this should be achieved through mergers of operating companies, through geographically compact holding companies, or through diversified holding companies, owning properties in various parts of the country. Legal obstacles have hitherto stood in the way of merger among operating companies themselves on a large scale, but the new legislation will stimulate attempts to combine individual operating units in this way. Where this can not be done, the new bill would make geographically compact holding companies possible with specific approval of the Federal Power Commission. Such holding companies would be subjected to new rigid regulations.

Vast financial readjustments among the affected companies will be necessary to effect this program, if the new measure is passed, and if it is upheld in the courts when the inevitable test of its constitutionality is made. Holding company financial structures are generally complex, and many intermediate holding concerns have issued their own securities to the public which will complicate segregation plans. However, utility executives feel that the problem may be simplified by many exchanges of operating properties among existing holding companies, so as to enable them to concentrate their operations more largely within adjoining areas, thus making actual dissolution unnecessary.

The five-year plan provided in the law will be none too long to permit such a redrawing of the utility map of the country, and the transformation of combinations from scattered into geographically unified entities.

Bank Clearings Are Off 7.7 Per Cent in Week

New York, Feb. 7 (AP).—Bank clearings in 22 cities as reported to Dun & Bradstreet for the week ended February 6 totaled $4,905,008,000, a decline of 7.7 per cent from the total of $5,314,519,000 for the similar week of 1934, it was reported today.

Bond Market Ends Session With Advances

Firm Tone Prevails as Sales Volume Mounts to $9,014,000.

New York, Feb. 7 (AP).—A firm tone prevailed in the bond market today, and most fixed interest bearing securities ended the session with gains ranging from fractions to 2 or more points.

Volume continued at a rather slow pace, however, transactions totaling $9,014,000, par value, compared with $8,673,000 yesterday.

Advices from Washington that Attorney General Cummings had stated the Government was ready to meet any emergency arising from an adverse ruling on the gold clause cases created a favorable impression in the financial community.

Hopeful Feeling Develops.

A soft spot in the general list was provided by Republic Iron & Steel 5½s. This obligation sold off 6 points on news of the antitrust proceedings brought to prevent the proposed merger of Republic and other steel corporations. Half of this lost was canceled, however, and the issue ended at 98.

Typical of the advances made by first-grade bonds, up fractions to a point or so, were American Smelting 5s, which closed at 104¾, American Telephone 5s of 1965 at 112⅞ and Santa Fe 4s at 108½.

Federals Are Higher.

United States Government securities were irregularly higher. Among the most active issues were Treasury 3s of 1946-48 at 102.15, Federal Farm Mortgage 3¼s at 102.22, and Home Owners' Loan 3s at 100.23.

The Associated Press averages for selected rails and utilities were up .04 to .06 of a point, while the industrial composite was about unchanged.

Davis Retained As Legal Aid For Exchange

New York, Feb. 7 (AP).—The stock exchange has retained the legal services of John W. Davis, former Democratic presidential candidate and noted constitutional jurist, in connection with the 11-point program for stock exchange administration reforms proposed by the Securities and Exchange Commission, it was learned today.

The move was viewed with the greatest interest in brokerage circles as a further step in the rather confused controversy which has been in progress here ever since the commission made its "suggestions" in regard to administrative procedure, including methods of electing exchange officers, with the hope that they would be "voluntarily" adopted by organized securities markets throughout the country.

At least one exchange member had vigorously attacked the recent action of the Association of Stock Exchange Firms in indorsing the commission's proposals, and he was generally regarded as the spokesman for a considerable group who were of like mind in the matter.

The stock exchange itself has only referred the communication from the commission to its law committee for study, and has taken no official action.

However, the belief has been widely held in some Wall Street quarters that the authorities of the exchange were less than sympathetic to the changes suggested, particularly since the commission report had attacked present election methods of market governing bodies as tending to perpetuate the power of those already in control.

Sheet & Tube Reduces Loss To $920,152

Allis-Chalmers Cuts Net Deficit to $1,039,406; Orders Gain.

Cleveland, Feb. 7 (AP). — The Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. showed a loss of $920,152 for the fourth quarter of 1934 after all charges including depreciation and depletion, in announcement said today.

This compared with a loss o. $1,257,371 in the third quarter, and a loss of $1,117,121 in the fourth quarter of 1933.

The fourth quarter report has not been audited and is subject to adjustment upon completion of the annual audit, the announcement said. The report indicates a loss for the year 1934 of over $2,500,000 after deducting difference between cost and face value of bonds purchased for retirement, compared to losses of over $8,000,000 in 1933 and $13,000,000 in 1932 before deducting the difference between cost and face value of bonds.

At the close of business December 31, 1934, the company had cash and investments in securities totaling $12,387,827. The ratio of current assets to current liabilities was 5.66 to 1.

New York, Feb. 7 (AP).—Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co. reported today a net loss of $1,039,406 for the year ended December 31. In 1933 net loss was $2,893,905.

Unfilled orders on December 31 totaled $8,013,859 against $6,425,998 at the close of 1933. Orders booked in 1934 amounted to $21,875,009 against $14,270,940 in the previous year.

A dividend of 50 cents on the preferred stock was ordered by directors of American Steel Foundries Co. today. It is payable March 30 to stock of record March 15. Similar distributions were made in previous quarters.

The Markets at a Glance

What the Stock Market Did.

	Thurs.	Wed.

Stocks—Traders drifted back into the market and prices moved higher. Sales volume remained small at 524,530 shares.

Bonds—Advances were recorded and the market firmed. Federal loans were higher. Sales volume increased to $9,014,000.

Curb—Irregular price tendencies prevailed again. Fluctuations continued to be narrow. A trace of easiness was noted in the utilities. Transfers dropped to 117,000 shares.

Wheat—Oversold condition developed and prices scored all around material advance. Wheat closed up ⅛ to 1¼ cents. May wheat closed 95½ and July at 88¼.

Cotton—There was a little more business in cotton, and prices held generally steady. Net unchanged to 7 points higher. March sold at 12.32, and May, at 12.40.

Coffee—Spot coffee was quiet; Rio, No. 7, sold at 9¼, and Santos, No. 4, at 10¾ to 11.

Silver—Bar silver was higher in New York, to close at 53⅞ cents per ounce. In London it closed up 1-16 pence, at 24⅜ pence (United States equivalent, 53.66 cents).

Dollar—The United States dollar was firm in foreign exchanges yesterday. It stood in New York with reference to other currencies, $4.88⅛ to the English pound; 6.56⅞ to the French franc, and 40 cents to the German mark.

The Dollar Abroad

The dollar moved irregularly in world exchange markets today, but as trading progressed in New York most leading foreign monies stiffened moderately against the American unit.

The dollar was a little easier in Paris at the equivalent of 6.565 cents to the French franc, and in New York the franc lifted .00½ of a cent, at 6.56¾.

Other gold monies edged upward in American dealings, with the guilder at 67.32 cents, up .06 of a cent; Swiss francs .03 of a cent better, at 32.23, and belgas ahead .01 of a cent, at 23.23 cents.

In London the dollar exhibited some firmness at 4.88 5-16 to the pound sterling, but in New York a reversal of trend occurred with the pound quoted ¼ of a cent better at $4.88½.

Bank of England.

London, Feb. 7 (AP).—The weekly statement of the Bank of England shows the following changes (in pounds): Total reserve decreased 2,084,000; circulation increased 2,047,000; bullion decreased 37,000; other securities decreased 334,000; public deposits decreased 4,414,000; other deposits increased 2,359,000; notes reserve decreased 2,047,000; government securities increased 390,000.

The proportion of the bank's reserve to liability is 47.53 per cent, compared with 48.21 last week.

Rate of discount, 2 per cent.

Daily Credit of Reserve Banks Averages Three Million Lower

The daily average volume of Federal Reserve Bank credit outstanding during the week ended February 6, as reported by the Federal Reserve banks, was $2,463,000,000, a decrease of $3,000,000 compared with the preceding week and of $153,000,000 compared with the corresponding week in 1934.

On February 6 total Reserve Bank credit amounted to $2,466,000,000, an increase of $6,000,000 for the week. This increase corresponds with increases of $49,000,000 in money in circulation and $91,000,000 in member bank reserve balances, offset in part by increases of $34,000,000 in monetary gold stock and $8,000,000 in Treasury and national bank currency and by decreases of $77,000,000 in Treasury cash and deposits with Federal Reserve banks and $14,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve acounts.

Relatively small changes were reported in holdings of bills discounted and purchased bills, United States Government securities, and industrial advances.

Changes in the amount of reserve bank credit outstanding and in related items during the week and the year ended February 6, 1935, were as follows (in millions of dollars):

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—Quietness prevailed on the stock exchange today, traders being mostly occupied with week-end settlement activity. A fair recovery was recorded in home rails, however, wavered because of the unsettled position of the gold clause regulation in the United States. The closing was heavy.

Paris—Wednesday's quiet celebration of the anniversary of the political rioting that took place last year influenced prices favorably on the bourse today. International issues, however, wavered because of the unsettled position of the gold clause regulation in the United States. The closing was heavy.

Stocks Move Higher Under Light Buying

Rails Receive Attention; Sales Volume Totals 524,530 Shares.

New York, Feb. 7 (AP).—Traders drifted back into the securities markets today and picked up a few of the recently neglected rails.

Then, having found the feel of the thing, they nibbled at a few other items, too, so that plus signs ruled the list of both stocks and bonds at the close and commodities were likewise gainers.

Activity was still no more than mild in either stocks or staples, but for the first time in several sessions bidders showed a mild disposition to reach for what they wanted.

Stock Leaders.

A number of stock market leaders got up a point or so, corporate loans improved fractions to as much as 2 points and Government obligations were unchanged to about 5-32 of a point higher.

Commodities were steady to firm, with even the minor futures showing a better tone along with grains and cotton.

Wheat improved ⅛ to 1¾ cents a bushel, corn lifted ½ to 1¼ cents, and cotton ranged from unchanged to 35 cents a bale better. Principal gold moneys continued to edge upward against the dollar in the foreign exchange market.

Sentiment appeared to have been aided by remarks of Attorney General Cummings that the Government, while confident of a favorable decision in the gold-clause cases, was "prepared for any emergency."

Gains Remain Small.

There was no rush to buy securities, however, and gains of more than fractions were decidedly the exception. Turnover in stocks aggregated only 524,530 shares, and the Associated Press average for 60 stocks confined its advance to .3 of a point, at 37.9.

Traders on the whole, however, appeared more encouraged than the small lift in the average might have indicated. Those market observers, particularly, who follow technical indications, were pleased with the performance of the rails, both equities and bonds, because their conspicuously lagging tendencies in recent sessions appeared to have been a restraining influence on the balance of the list.

Anti-Trust Suits.

Announcement that the Department of Justice was filing anti-trust suits with an aim to blocking the Republic Steel merger with other steel corporations had little effect on Republic common stock, which closed ¼ of a point lower, at 12¾. The preferred at 40½, down 3¾, and the 5½ per cent bonds off 3 points, at 98, bore the brunt of selling pressure.

A few stock favorites were able to get up from a point to around 2 points each, including Woolworth, at 54½; Allied Chemical, at 135½; American Telephone, at 104½; Pennsylvania, at 21; Sears Roebuck, at 34½, and Union Pacific, at 98.

Fractional improvement was registered in American Tobacco, Santa Fe, Baltimore & Ohio, U. S. Steel, Chrysler, General Motors, New York Central, International Harvester, Montgomery Ward and Southern Pacific.

Reserve Banks List Securities Decrease

(Associated Press.)

Liquidation of loans continues to offset bank purchases of securities. Total loans and investments of Federal Reserve member banks in leading cities, as shown in their latest weekly statement, dropped $13,000,000, although increased holdings of securities made the total far ahead of the comparable 1934 date.

Week ended Jan. 30	$18,244,000,000
Previous week	18,257,000,000
Same week last year	17,121,000,000

Furniture Buying Stimulated.

New York, Feb. 7 (AP).—Special February promotions have developed an active buyer interest in furniture in the Chicago district and sales for the month promise an exceptionally good showing for a normally dull period.

Curb's Prices Turn Mixed; Sales Smaller

Utilities Become Easier as Trading Drops to 117,000 Shares.

New York, Feb. 7 (AP).—Irregular price tendencies again prevailed on the Curb Exchange today. Variations generally continued restricted. A trace of easiness was noted among utilities. Dealings were quiet.

Montgomery Ward yielded a point, while Western Auto Supply gained as much. Electric Bond & Share eased fractionally to $5 a share, a new 1934-35 low. American Gas & Electric and Pan American Airways were slightly lower. Fractional gains were recorded by Creole Petroleum, Hiram Walker, International Petroleum, Swift & Co. and Wright Hargreaves.

Transfers approximated 117,000 shares, compared with 127,000 shares Wednesday.

Week's Soft Coal Output Rises to 8,480,000 Tons

The National Coal Association, from incomplete car loading reports from the railroads, estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended February 2 as approximately 8,480,000 net tons. Production for the corresponding week: 1934, 7,495,000 tons; 1933, 6,013,000 tons.

The report of the Bureau of Mines shows production of 7,760,000 tons for the week ended January 19, and 8,250,000 for the week ended January 26, 1935.

Engineering Awards Are Lower This Week

New York, Feb. 7.—Engineering awards are lower this week both in private and public work, although the private work is higher than the average week last year.

Totals reported by Engineering News-Record are: Engineering construction, $17,237,000; private awards, $5,102,000; public, $12,135,000, of which $2,515,000 represents Federal construction and $9,620,000 State and municipal. This is the lowest week on State and municipal awards since August 23.

"Baby Bonds" to Cost From $75 to $78 Each

(Associated Press.)

A tentative price range of $75 to $78 for a 10-year bond maturing at $100 has been set by the Treasury for its first issue of "baby bonds" on March 1.

Volunteer Offers Blood to Save Boy

Child, 6, Is Critically Ill at Gallinger.

While his parents anxiously called for volunteers to give blood to 6-year-old James Beach, critically ill from diphtheria in Gallinger Municipal Hospital, hospital authorities last night announced that a blood donor had volunteered to help the sick boy.

The donor's blood will be tested today to see if it matches the child's. A radio call for other volunteers was issued last night.

The boy has been in Gallinger Hospital for a week. His father, John W. Beach, a laborer, of 3224 M street northwest, volunteered for the transfusion, but his blood was not suitable. His mother's blood could not be used either. A transfusion will be effected this morning.

AUCTION SALES

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 15, 1935—
ADAM A. WESCHLER & SON, Auctioneers.

By virtue of a deed of trust recorded in liber No. 5838, folio 307 et seq., one of the land records of the District of Columbia, and at the request of party secured thereby, the undersigned trustees will offer for sale by public auction, in front of premises on FRIDAY, THE FIFTEENTH DAY OF FEBRUARY, 1935, AT FOUR O'CLOCK P. M., the following-described property in the District of Columbia, to-wit: Part of original lot eighteen (18) in square seven hundred seventy-eight (778), described as follows: Beginning for the same on the west line of Fourth street at a point distant 15.80 feet south from the northeast corner of said lot, and running thence south along the said line of said street 11.90 feet to the center of the division wall between premises Nos. 694 and 696 Fourth street northeast, thence west through the center of said division wall and a direct continuation thereof 55 feet to the rear line of said lot, thence north along said rear line 11.90 feet to a point due west of the beginning, and thence east 55 feet to the place of beginning.

TERMS OF SALE: One-third of the purchase money to be paid in cash, balance in equal installments, represented by promissory notes of purchaser payable in three years, with interest at 6 per cent per annum from day of sale, payable semiannually, secured by first deed of trust upon property sold, or all cash, at option of purchaser. A deposit of $100 required of purchaser at sale. Examination of title, conveyancing, recording, revenue stamps and notarial fees at cost of purchaser. Terms to be complied with within fifteen days from day of sale, otherwise trustees reserve the right to resell property at risk and cost of defaulting purchaser, after five days advertisement of such resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C., or deposit may be forfeited, or without forfeiting deposit trustees may avail themselves of any legal or equitable rights against defaulting purchaser.

GEORGE R. LINKINS,
WILLIAM H. LINKINS,
Trustees.

HO HUM! MOTHER IS STILL WALKING AROUND TALKING TO HERSELF, JUST BECAUSE YOU AND I INSISTED MONTGOMERY EL DORADO WAS IN SOME SORT OF SHADY BUSINESS OVER THAT ENVELOPE HE FINALLY GAVE TO JOHN BROWNING.
I'VE ALWAYS FELT THE SAME WAY ABOUT MONTY AS A DUCK DOES ABOUT DENTAL CLINICS.
I'LL NEVER FORGET HOW LORDLY HE WAS WHEN HE STARTED TO BULLY JOHN BROWNING AND THEN HOW MEEKLY HE CHANGED HIS ATTITUDE.

IT CERTAINLY GETS ON A PERSON'S NERVES TO HEAR MOTHER GUSHING ABOUT HOW PERFECT HE IS.
WELL, HE MAY BE A BIG-SHOT WHILE ARGUING WITH THE EL DORADO BUTLERS, BUT AROUND HERE, SO FAR AS I'M CONCERNED, HE'S JUST A TERRIBLY DAMP FIRE-CRACKER.

The New West.

There are no ranches in the West, where countless cattle roam; the farmer, with his nags abreast, plows up the fertile loam; He does not wear a brace of guns, his person to adorn; he is intent on raising tons of wheat and oats and corn. There are few cattle on the hills and on the pasture lands, and they are all devoid of frills by way of fancy brands. They are surrounded by a fence through which they can not climb; they can't stampede or wander hence as in the olden time. There are no cowboys now to wear the large ten-gallon hats, to keep the sandburs from their hair when camping on the flats. There are no cowboys now to wail the grim and sad refrain, about the young man faint and pale and dying on the plain; the youth who would be buried in the prairie cold and bleak; long since he left this world of sin, a better ranch to seek. There are no rustlers any more, to steal the rancher's cows; or if they live they're feeling sore, as in the pen they drowse. There are no killers of the type that once wore Western bells; they all grew old and overripe, and died in poorhouse cells. And yet a hundred magazines are filled with cowboy tales, describing red and gory scenes and steers and shooting males. The old-time ranchers do not tread the spreading Western lawn; the Cooper Indians are dead, the cowboys, too, are gone.

Scouts to Open Silver Jubilee Program Today

Radio Loyalty Challenge Over WRC Will Be Opening Event.

Twenty-five years ago the Boy Scouts of America were organized here. The Silver Anniversary Week program, as suggested by a committee composed of Commodore W. E. Longfellow and the District Commissioners, includes activities in response to a series of "challenges" to the organizations to learn if Scouts are prepared.

A radio challenge of loyalty to scouting opens the anniversary week today. International as well as original local color will be introduced in the broadcast, "Scouting Comes to America," over Station WRC at 4:30 p. m., when members of the British Embassy staff will be included in the cast, representing Sir Robert Baden-Powell, his secretary, and the Unknown British Scout, while Colin H. Livingstone will again enact the part that he actually took, down in his office on F street, in organizing the Scouts.

Again at 8:45 p. m., over three broadcasting systems, President Walter W. Head will open a 15-minute Scout program from the arena of the Boy Scout Circus in St. Louis, Mo., which will include a greeting from the President of the United States and a rededication by all Scouts to the Scout oath and law. Scouts of Washington and nearby Maryland and Virginia will meet at their own troop headquarters to take part in these ceremonies.

Lunch to Be Served.

Reaching the Polo grounds another challenge awaits at 11 a. m. Then at 12 o'clock a lunch of stew and sandwiches and cocoa will be ready at the tourist camp for those who have purchased lunch tags and brought mess kits. It was arranged by the disaster relief committee of the American Red Cross and prepared by Scouts of Troop 14.

At 2 p. m. another challenge will come to give further aid to the city cut off from the outside world by sending a Scout relay to Fort Myer for assistance to repel river pirate looters. Afterward the Scouts will rush home to listen to Radio Station WMAL at 5:15, when the program, "How the Chief Scout Got Into Scouting," goes on the air.

The challenge to reverence will come Sunday and Scouts will attend services at churches. Special Scout services will be held in the Washington Cathedral for Protestants and at the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception for boys of the Catholic faith.

First Aid Challenge.

The challenge to be helpful in schools will be answered Monday by offers of scouts to conduct assemblies in the schools, and at 8 p. m. a challenge from the Red Cross to prove the quality of Scout first aid will be met.

Two challenges face the Scouts on Tuesday, the challenge to patriotism and to preparedness.

The final challenge on Wednesday is to demonstrate the Scout slogan "Do a good turn daily." As a finale many troops will hold father and son banquets.

* * * *

As a special feature of Anniversary Week the Hillcrest Citizens Association is sponsor for a new Scout Troop, which will hold its first meeting tonight. As President Roosevelt greets the Scouts their meeting will be called to order for the first time. F. H. Shelledy is the scoutmaster of the new troop and the committee is composed of Charles Foster, Gregory J. Kessenich and James H. Reed.

* * * *

A new troop, No. 612, is being organized at the Fifth Baptist Church, Six and One-half and E streets southwest, J. E. Briggs, pastor. George E. Kettering will be scoutmaster.

Scouts Advance in Rank.

Jubilee Week Broadcast.

The third of a series of broadcasts in commemoration of Boy Scout Silver Jubilee Week is scheduled tomorrow at 5:15 p. m. on Station WMAL, when the Boy Scout Radio Players will dramatize episodes from the life of Chief Scout Executive James E. West, who has directed the Scout program in America in all of its 25 years of existence.

The dramalogue was prepared for the radio by Commodore W. E Longfellow, chairman of the scouts' anniversary committee. He will appear in the sketch with Alvin Thaden, Curtis Cooper and Robert Pfahler, who will play the part of Mr. West.

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

THREE networks carry the President's message on the Boy Scout movement tonight at 8:45. His talk is directed to the 10,000 Scouts gathered in St. Louis for their Silver Jubilee Circus. Walter W. Head, president of the organization, will be heard just before President Roosevelt.

In addition to this Nation-wide program, WRC will present a dramatic skit, "Scouting Comes to America." This play was written by Commodore W. E. Longfellow; members of the cast are from the British Embassy. Colin H. Livingstone, first Scout president, will be heard.

At 5:15 Saturday, WMAL offers another dramatic skit, "A Washington Boy Makes Good in Scouting," which is the story of Mr. Head's career.

John W. Studebaker, Commissioner of Education, refuses to believe that the country is made up of mental 12-year-olds. To prove it he's beginning a weekly radio program, through which listeners may test doubtful I. Q.'s. The first one was last Wednesday, WMAL, 6 p. m. Listeners are asked to test themselves (honestly, of course), send in marks for the compilation of averages, medians and other statistical matter.

Anna Sten, Russian film beauty, and Ralph Bellamy are guests on "Hollywood Hotel" program tonight, WJSV, 9:30. They will give you a preview of Miss Sten's new picture, "Her Wedding Night."

NBC Appreciation Hour: Beethoven's "Egmont" overture, and overture to Berlioz's "Roman Carnival." Dr. Walter Damrosch will discuss the life of Franz Liszt, and the orchestra will play Liszt's "Les Preludes."

OTHER high-spots:

Shaindel Kalish, star of Chicago's "Maedchen in Uniform," is on the First Nighter program, WRC, 10 p. m.

March of Time spotlights the premiere of the Russian opera, "Lady Macbeth of Mzensk," and the kidnaping of the English and American children by Chinese pirates. 9 p. m., WJSV.

Jane Froman is heard on the "Pause That Refreshes," with Frank Black, WRC, 10:30 p. m.

Beatrice Lillie goes legal and appears as "Snoops, the Lawyer," on WMAL, 9 p. m.

Pro Arte String Quartet plays two more Beethoven Quartets: F major, Opus 59, No. 1, and C major, Opus 50, No. 3. WJSV, 4:15 p. m.

Two Irish songs by Nathaniel Shilkret are heard in "The O'Flynn," WJSV, 10:30 p. m.

NBC Music Guild features Pierne's Sonata in D minor for piano and violin. WRC, 4:30 p. m.

You'll hear a new voice tonight on Phil Baker's show, 9:30, WMAL. It belongs to Estelle Jayne, musical comedy star. This will mark her radio debut.

Wanderbirds' Hike to Explore Scenic Beauties of Oxon Hills

Eight-Mile Tramp Includes Stop Where Ornamental Fish May Be Netted; Old Forts Near Route.

By Robert Shosteck.

The Wanderbirds on Sunday will explore the Oxon hills in southeast Washington, a region of unusual scenic beauty heretofore unvisited by the club. This easy 8-mile hike includes a stop along Oxon Run, where several varieties of small ornamental fish may be netted. A giant tulip poplar tree, believed to be one of the oldest trees of that species about Washington, is to be seen on the route of this trip.

Readers of The Washington Post and club members planning to go on this trip will meet in front of The Post Building at 10 a. m. Buses will carry the group to the Garfield School at the top of Good Hope Hill. The fare is 15 cents and reservations must be made at National 4200 by midnight Saturday. The hike will end about 5 p. m. at the terminus of the Congress Heights car line on Nichols avenue. Bring lunch and a cup for coffee.

The old Garfield School, where the hike begins, is less than a half mile from a chain of Civil War forts which protected Washington in the '60's. The largest of these, Fort Stanton, has a vast subterranean arsenal which is still in an excellent state of preservation and is interesting to visit, a short distance off Morris road.

Lunch at Spring.

Not far beyond the spring we emerge from the woods and follow a trail up hill to a dirt-road crossing Wheeler road. Nearby is a spring. The trail now leads through the Oxon Hill woods, nearly 300 feet above the Potomac River, which can be seen off in the distance from several vantage points. Near the edge of the hill we pass a huge and venerable tulip tree, one of the finest samples ever seen by Dr. Stokes, who is leading this trip. The trail, across fields and along dirt roads, leads to Oxon Run.

From the stream the trail leads up hill to Fourth street and thence to the engine house near the end of the car line. This line goes through St. Elizabeths Hospital grounds and crosses the Eleventh street bridge over the Anacostia River. The return trip is only one fare.

Next week the series of spring hikes, to start early in March, will be announced in this column. These trips will be led by a number of naturalists and will afford the hikers to make the acquaintance with the spring flowers, early birds and the trees of this region.

The Red Triangle Outing Club plans a 5-mile hike along the Patuxent River above Laurel. The club meets at 2 p. m. Sunday at Fifteenth street and Constitution avenue for the auto trip to Laurel. For information, telephone Mr. McGee at North 9190.

The Biological Society announces an illustrated lecture on the exotic trees of Washington to be given by Dr. F. L. Mulford in the assembly hall of the Cosmos Club tomorrow at 8 p. m. Public admitted.

Cummings Sifts Pay Roll Impost In Security Bill

James A. Emery Calls Tax Unconstitutional; Secret Hearing Next Week.

(Associated Press.)

A contention that the pay-roll tax in the Administration's social security bill is unconstitutional brought the disclosure yesterday that the Justice Department is studying that very phase of the measure.

The argument was advanced by James A. Emery, general counsel for the National Association of Manufacturers, one of the last witnesses before the House Ways and Means Committee.

The bill will be considered for possible amendments next week in secret committee session.

Emery did not use the word "unconstitutional," but a tax to be legal should be purely for the purpose of raising revenue for the Federal Treasury, Emery held.

"This legislation upon its face," he said, "is pointed to one result—that is to secure State legislation upon a subject on which the States have not legislated."

Before the Senate Finance Committee, meanwhile, Abraham Epstein, spokesman for the American Association for Social Security, said he felt the $30-a-month old-age pension proposed in the Administration's bill was "ample."

Pennsy to Show Electric Flyer

Experts Will Explain 102-M. P. H. Speed.

Pennsylvania Railroad's streamline locomotive, which traveled 102 miles an hour on a Philadelphia-to-Washington run recently, will be on exhibition at Union Station from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. tomorrow.

R. H. Denehey, a representative of the Pennsylvania Railroad, said yesterday electrical engineers will be on hand to explain the various control apparatus. Beginning Sunday the locomotive will be attached to the Congressional Limited, running between here and New York.
